INTRODUCTION

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

No portion of Holy Writ has been made the occasion of more controversy as to its design than the Acrs of the Apostles.

Some have said that it is composed without any specific plan 1, and that it is merely a collection, imperfect and fragmentary, of such materials concerning the primitive Church, as happened to be accessible to the writer. It has been argued from its inscription to Theophilus 2, that it was designed only for the use of a private Christian. It has been observed, that it records only some actions of two of the Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul; and that it says nothing of their Epistles, or of the martyrdom of either, and that it terminates unexpectedly with St. Paul's first visit to Rome. it is alleged, that its title, "the Acrs of the Apostles," disappoints the reader, and can hardly have been assigned to it by the writer himself.

Others, in recent times, profess to have discovered in this book a design to vindicate St. Paul, the Apostle of the Gentiles, from the charges of those who contrasted his teaching with that of St. Peter, the Apostle of the Circumcision; as if the one were contradictory to the other. And others', accepting this hypothesis concerning the Acts, have proceeded so far as to affirm, that the view presented to us there, of St. Paul's teaching, is inconsistent with the tenour of St. Paul's Epistles.

The tendency of these theories is evidently to invalidate its Authority, and to undermine the foundations of its Genuineness and Inspiration.

Happily, however, for the Christian Church, there is no book whose Authenticity, Genuineness 5, e. g. See Dr. Davidson, Introduction to N. T., ii. p. 62, and ibid. p. 24.

5 On the subject of the Authorship, the following ingenious

"Acts xvi. 10: 'After he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the Gospel unto them.

"Here the writer of the history, by the change of persons, first indicates his own presence as a companion of the Apostle. It is well known that this book of Acts, as well as the third Gospel, are ascribed to St. Luke by the universal tradition of the Church; but it seems never to have been shown that the same conclusion may be reached, simply and rigidly, by the internal evidence alone.

"The writer then, so far as we can learn from his history, was present with the Apostle from Troas to Philippi, in his first visit to Europe; was absent from him or not distinctly present, after his departure from Philippi, during his double stay at Corinth and Ephesus; and having joined him at Philippi again, continued his companion during his voyage from Greece to Palestine, his imprisonment at Cæsarea, his second voyage, and, at least, the earlier part of his imprisonment at Rome.

"None of St. Paul's letters were written until his arrival at Corinth, when the first separation had taken place. Six of them, the first and second to Thessalonica, the Epistle to the Galatians, the first and second to Corinth, and the Epistle to the Romans, were written during the interval of the writer's apparent absence.

VOL. I.-PART VI.

His name could not then be expected to occur in these letters among the friends who were present with St. Paul, and who joined in the salutations.

"Four other letters, to the Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, and Philippians, were written during the first imprisonment at Rome. Now since the writer had been a companion of the Apostle for three whole years before that imprisonment, had attended him on the voyage with only one or two others, and had continued with him till his arrival at Rome, it is most improbable that he would leave him at once, and not cheer him by his presence and friendship, as in the previous long delay at Cæsarea. In these letters, therefore, if the helpers present with St. Paul are at all mentioned, his name will be likely to appear. And since he had been so intimate a companion, and attended him faithfully so long, it seems almost certain that the Apostle, if he specified his chief helpers and friends who were with him, could not omit one so conspicuous. The writer, we may thus infer, was either Tychicus, Timothy, Epaphroditus, Epaphras, Onesimus, Aristarchus, Marcus, Jesus Justus, Luke, or Demas, the only persons whose names appear in the salutations of these four

"But this choice is soon reduced within narrower limits. Timothy, Tychicus, and Aristarchus could none of them be the writer, since they accompanied Paul and himself on the voyage from Greece (Acts xx. 4, 5). Onesimus is excluded, since he was converted by St. Paul during his imprisonment at Rome (Philem. 10). Mark is also excluded, since he is mentioned repeatedly in the history, and was rejected by St. Paul as a companion in that very journey in which the writer soon afterwards joined him. Epaphroditus clearly was not with the Apostle when the imprisonment began, but was sent to him from Philippi, when they heard tidings of his necessities. Epaphras appears to have

than the Acts of the Apostles.

The evidence of this is clear and open to all ¹. And taking for granted that this book was dictated by the Holy Ghost, we may feel confident, that, whether we can discover its design or no, a design certainly it has, not unworthy of its Divine Author. He is the Spirit of Counsel and of Might, and what He wisely purposes, that He effectually performs.

But, is it difficult to discover its plan? Let us consider this question.

St. Luke has written one work, consisting of two parts; the former his Gospel, the latter the Acts of the Apostles.

The connexion of these two parts is marked by the commencement of the latter, with a reference to the former, and by the inscription of both to one person.

The latter opens thus; "The former Treatise," i. e. his Gospel, "I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day in which He was taken up."

Let us remark also, that in his latter treatise, the Acts, he resumes the subject at the point where, in the former, the Gospel, he had left it; namely, with a description of Christ's Ascension into Heaven.

Therefore, it appears from the Acts, that in his former treatise, the Gospel, St. Luke had professed to give an account only of what Jesus began to do and to teach, while He was in person upon earth.

But now, in his second treatise, the Acts of the Apostles, he has a higher and ampler subject before him.

In this book, the sequel of his Gospel, the blessed Evangelist, being inspired by the Holy Ghost, comes forward and unfolds, as it were, the doors of heaven, and reveals to the world, what the same Jesus, having ascended into heaven, and being exalted to the right hand of God, and there sitting in glory, continues "to do and to teach," not any longer within the narrow confines of Palestine, or during the few years of an earthly ministry, but from His royal throne in His imperial City, the heavenly Jerusalem; and what there sitting in glory He does and teaches, "in all Judæa and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth 2," by the instrumentality of Apostles and Apostolic men, and Apostolic Churches, in all ages of the world; and what He will ever continue to do and to teach, from heaven, by the power of the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven after His Ascension; even till He comes again in glory to judge both the quick and dead.

This is the view which the Author himself propounds of his own plan in composing this book.

Let us consider, whether this view is consistent,

I. With what may be gathered from other writers of Holy Scripture, concerning Christ's Office after His Ascension, and during His Session in Glory? and

II. Whether it be confirmed by internal evidence derivable from the Acts of the Apostles?

I. Our Blessed Lord Himself, when upon earth, had promised to be always with His Apostles, and He had said to them, a little before His Ascension, "As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you "." Thus He prepares us to regard their Acts as done by Himself. He had also said that the works which they would do after His Ascension would be even greater than those works which He had done when on earth, because He would go to the Father; that is, He Himself, after His been a local Pastor from Colossæ, who arrived also at Rome after the imprisonment there had begun. Thus Jesus Justus, Luke, and Demas are the only three names which are not absolutely excluded by these texts.

"That Jesus Justus was not the writer may be gathered from two presumptions of considerable weight. First, he was of the circumcision, or a Jew by birth; while several indications in the book of Acts lead us to suppose that the writer was a Greek, and only a Proselyte, rather than a native Jew. And next, Jesus Justus is named only once, while the two others are named three times in these Epistles. Now the companion of the Apostle for so many years, and through so many dangers, would not be likely to be left thus entirely in the background, compared with others.

"The choice will now be confined to Luke and Demas, each of whom is mentioned three times, and always near together. In the last instance, however, there occurs a remarkable contrast. In his second imprisonment, as we learn from 2 Tim. iv. 10, 11, Demas forsook the Apostle, through love of the world, and 'only Luke' continued with him, while every other helper was absent.

It would be a high degree of moral incongraity to suppose that this apostate, whether his apostasy was temporal or final, and not the companion who was faithful to the last, was the same with the faithful companion during shipwreck and imprisonment, and the honoured writer of two main books of the sacred canon. And thus, by internal evidence alone, we are led to the conclusion that Luke, and no other, was the real Author of the Gospel and the book of Acts. The circumstantial evidence limits our choice to three names, while the moral evidence, hardly less forcible, confines it among these to St. Luke only."—Birks' Hora Apostolicæ, pp. 351—353.

Ascension, and the Giving of the Holy Ghost, would do greater works by their instrumentality, than He had done when visible in His bodily presence upon earth 1.

Accordingly St. Mark concludes His Gospel, by expressing in few but comprehensive words, what may be regarded as the argument of the Acts of the Apostles. "So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God; and they went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the Word with signs following 2."

Thus the Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Mark, represents the Lord Jesus as continuing to do and to teach every where, after His Ascension, by the ministry of His Apostles, what He had begun to do and to teach while He was visible upon earth.

Similarly, the Apostle St. Paul, who, as Christian Antiquity testifies, was St. Luke's fellowlabourer in writing, as well as in preaching the Gospel 3, represents Christ in glory, as the Origin of all that is done or taught in the Church by the ministry of men. "He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that He might fill all things. And He gave some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the Ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ 4."

In like manner the beloved Disciple St. John, to whom it was given to behold Christ in Glory, describes Him in the Apocalypse as walking in the midst of the seven Golden Candlesticks; which are the Churches of God 5.

Therefore the Church of England, in her Office for ordering of Priests, looks up from earth to heaven, and praises God for having given His dearly beloved Son, Who, "after He had made perfect our Redemption by His death, and was ascended into Heaven, sent abroad into the world His Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Doctors, and Pastors, by whose labour and ministry He gathered together a great flock in all parts of the world, to set forth the eternal praise of God's holy Name."

II. Let us now examine, whether this view of the design of the Acts of the Apostles, is authorized by the contents of the book itself.

1. Consider the first Act there recorded as done by the Apostles after the Ascension. They return from the Mount of Olives to Jerusalem, and resort to the Upper-room 6, probably the same where Jesus had instituted the Lord's Supper, and had shown Himself alive to the Apostles on the two successive Sundays after His Resurrection. There they nominate two persons, with the view of filling up the vacancy made by the death of Judas, and they address a prayer to Jesus, "Lord", show whether of these two Thou hast chosen "." Thus they declare their persuasion that He Who is removed from their bodily sight is still present with them, as He Himself had promised to be 9; and that sitting on His throne in Heaven, He can and does choose an Apostle, as truly as when He was walking on earth, by the side of the Sea of Galilee. The lot was cast into the lap, but the disposing of it was of the Lord 10. The lot which fell upon Matthias was dropped from heaven by the hand of Christ.

2. Observe the next great event in this sacred History—the Descent of the Holy Ghost from heaven. Christ when on earth had breathed upon His Apostles and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost "." Thus He showed that He Himself was the source whence that gift would come. And when the Holy Spirit was poured forth on the Apostles, Peter ascribed the effusion to Christ; "He, having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear 12." He, Who while on earth did and taught what the Messiah was to do and teach, now does and teaches in a more glorious manner by the Holy Ghost the Comforter, Whose Mission from heaven is like a royal largess, bestowed in honour of Christ's Coronation, a sign and fruit of His heavenly inauguration and glorious enthronization on the Right Hand of the Majesty on high.

Hence the Kingdom of Christ, which was commenced by His ministry upon earth, is now continued, extended, and amplified. The Four Gospels are the Beginnings 13 of its history: they reveal the Day-Spring from on high, and the orient gleams of the Sun of Righteousness. But in the Acts of the Apostles the Sun has risen in his strength, and shines in noonday splendour. After His exaltation in glory, and after the bestowal of the Holy Ghost, the number of the names of the Disciples at Jerusalem, which had been before a mere handful, a hundred and twenty', is now counted by thousands2. The Christian Church extends herself from the upper room on Mount Sion, in a gradually growing circle, till she embraces within her range "devout men from every nation under heaven 3." She enfolds Samaria by the agency of Philip the Deacon, and of Peter and of John. Christ preaches by Philip in the wilderness of Gaza, and "the Morians' Land stretches out her hands unto God '." He passes toward Ashdod, and "Philistia is glad of Him "." "Behold the Philistines, and they of Tyre with the Morians, lo! there is He born ","-born by the new Birth of the Word and Sacraments. By the preaching of Peter He gathers in the Gentiles at Cæsarea; by the ministry of Paul He plants the Gospel at Antioch; He encounters the Evil One in various forms; of obstinate obduracy in Jewish Synagogues; of Pagan Idolatry at Lystra and Ephesus; of Sorcery, Witchcraft and Divination at Samaria, Paphos, and Philippi; of sceptical Philosophy, and intellectual pride at Athens and Corinth; and at length in His triumphant march, as a crowning consummation of His conquests, and an earnest of universal victory, He plants the Cross in the imperial city of the Cæsars, the heathen capital of the world, by the hands of him, -who had formerly been the fiercest persecutor of the Church, but afterwards was its most zealous champion, and courageous confessor and martyr-St. Paul.

These noble feats of Christian prowess were performed by means of men, but the Doer of them all was Christ. And what St. Luke says concerning one great harvest of souls, gathered into Christ's garner, may be said equally of all; "The Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved '."

3. Thus we see in the Acts the continuance and extension of Christ's working, and we also recognize in it a greater manifestation of glory in the manner of His operations. He Himself had said, when on earth, "He that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father." That is, when I am ascended into heaven, and am seated in glory there, then will I do, by the agency of others—My faithful servants

-works more marvellous than are done by Me now, in person on earth.

For example, our Lord when on earth had healed the woman who touched with faith the hem of His garment. But when He had ascended into heaven, He worked miracles on the sick by means of the shadow of St. Peter at Jerusalem 10, and by the handkerchiefs of St. Paul at Ephesus 11; and thus He showed that the sphere of His working was enlarged; and He creates in our hearts a blessed assurance, that now, when as Man united for ever to God, He, Who by virtue of His obedience to death, has received "the Name which is above every name 12," He is ever acting by those visible channels of Invisible Grace, His Word and Sacraments, which derive their efficacy from His Godhead, Incarnation and Passion, and are the means by which the benefits of His Death are bestowed for our everlasting life, and are like the skirts of His garments, by which, when touched by Faith, He heals the diseases of our souls.

4. The Acrs of the Apostles is a portraiture of the Church; it is an Historical Picture delineated by the Holy Ghost guiding the hand of the Evangelical Painter St. Luke. It has, as its central Figure, Jesus Christ, perfect God and perfect Man, Who died for us on the cross, and raised Himself from the Dead, and ascended into heaven, and sent the Comforter, and reigns in glory, the Head of the Church, and Sovereign of the world, King of Kings and Lord of Lords. He is the source of all the life and beauty displayed in this heavenly landscape; and therefore, it will be remembered, the Apostles are careful to disclaim for themselves all independent power. "Ye men of Israel, why look ye on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? The God of our fathers hath glorified His Son Jesus 13." Thus they raise the eyes of the people from themselves—Christ's members and ministers on earth—to Christ their Head and King acting by them from heaven.

5. Accordingly, we find that in this History there are certain words continually recurring, which remind the reader of this concentration of power in Christ, and derivation of power from

H1m.

One of these is $K\acute{\nu}\rho\iota\sigma\varsigma$, the Lord. This word is equivalent to the Jehovah of the Old Testament, and corresponds to it in the Septuagint Version ¹⁴; and it is observable that in the twenty-fourth Psalm—which prophetically describes the event, with which this Book opens, the Ascension of Jesus, and appeals to the Gates of heaven to receive Him, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of Glory shall come in 1," the Psalmist twice asks, "Who is this King of Glory?" and twice it is answered, "The Lord, He is the King of Glory !" And the word in the original for Lord is Jehovah, showing that our Jesus is Jehovah. And this word is constantly applied to Christ in the Acts, where it is found nearly a hundred times, and is like a sacred keynote of the whole, ever sounding forth His Divine Lordship in the ear of the world. The Lord's working in the Church, the Lord's household,—this is what the Acts reveals. 'Ο Κύριος ἐν τη Κυριακή,—that is its subject. It is "the Lord Jesus," Who is said by St. Peter to have come in and gone out among them2. It is He Who chooses Matthias3; He Who sends the Holy Ghost4; He who adds Believers daily to the Church 5; He Who works miracles by the hands of His Apostles 6. To the Lord Jesus, St. Stephen, the first Martyr, looks up and prays at the hour of death 7. He calls to the persecuting Saul with a voice from heaven 8. He sends Ananias to baptize him 9. He sends Peter to Cornelius 10. He (says St. Peter) is Lord of all 11. His Angel delivers Peter from prison, and smites Herod on his throne 12. He calls Paul to Macedonia 13, and comforts him at Jerusalem 14; and finally the book closes with the triumphant declaration, that Paul preaches, in the great heathen capital, Rome, "the things concerning the Lord Jesus, with all confidence, no man forbidding him 15."

Thus the mind is elevated from earth to heaven, and from the acts of the envoys and ambassadors, to the majesty and glory of their Lord and King, sitting on His heavenly throne.

6. This process of exaltation is also performed by another word, recurring in this history and drawing the heart upward to Christ.

That word is oùpavòs, HEAVEN. The inner scene of the book is Heaven. It begins with Christ's Ascension into heaven. The Apostles gaze upward to heaven, and a heavenly messenger comes and announces to them that Jesus is received into heaven; and will come again in like manner in glory from heaven 16. On the day of Pentecost there comes a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and declares the source whence the Holy Spirit proceeds 17. St. Stephen, in the hour of death, being full of the Holy Ghost, "looks stedfastly up to heaven, and sees the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God," and says, "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God 18." As Saul journeys and comes near to Damascus, "suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven; and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? And he said, Who art Thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus Whom thou persecutest 19." Peter, when in a trance at Joppa, saw heaven opened, and the vessel descending, representing the Church Universal, extending to all corners of the earth, into which all nations were to be received; and this vessel let down from heaven, is drawn up again into heaven 20. Thus it was declared, that the hand by which the Church Universal is ordered, maintained, and extended, is the hand of Christ in heaven. "In His hand are all the corners of the earth ";" and whatever is effected by the ministry of men for the advancement of His kingdom on earth, is done by the power of Him, Who sitteth on the throne of heaven.

III. This view of the design of St. Luke in writing the Acts of the Apostles, supplies a solution of the difficulties which, as has been noticed at the commencement of this Introduction, have been raised with respect to it:

1. It accounts for its Title.

In all probability that Title was given by the Author himself. Certainly it is very ancient 22; and the book was never known by any other name.

22 Thus the ancient Canon Muratorianus says, " Acta omnium Apostolorum sub uno libro scripta, sunt (qu. sanctus) Lucas optime Theophilo comprehendit; quia sub præsentia ejus singula gerebantur." And Irenæus, iii. 15: "Fortassis et propter hoc operatus est Deus plurima Evangelii ostendi per Lucam, quibus necesse habuerint omnes uti, ut sequenti testificatione ejus quam habet de Actibus et Doctrina Apostolorum omnes sequentes et regulam veritatis inadulteratam habentes salvari possint." And Clemens Alexandrin. Adumbrat. in 1 Pet. Epist.: "Sicut Lucas quoque et Actus Apostolorum stylo executus." And Tertullian (passim, e.g. de præscr. hæret. 22, adv. Marcion. v. 2, and de Baptismo, 10) refers to this book, under the title Acta Apostolorum, and calls it Commentarium Lucæ, De jejun. 10. And Origen (ad Cels. vi. 12): ὡς ὁ Λουκᾶς ἐν ταῖς πράξεσιν τῶν ἀποστόλων ἔγραψεν, and Epist. ad African. § 9. So Eusebius, ii. 17; iii. 4. Cyril. Hierosol., Cat. iv. Epiphan., Hæres. 1, p. 941, enumerates τὰs πράξεις τῶν ἀποστόλων in the Canon of the N. T.

It is observable that S. Hilary (in Matt. xiv.) refers to this book thus, "sicut libro Praxeos (qu. Praxeon?) continetur."

But we must understand what that Title means; and its meaning is to be sought in the sense of the words πράττω and πρᾶξις, as distinguished from the words ποιῶ and ποίησις.

Christ is said mousiv, e. g. in the first words of this book 1, Jesus began to do 2, and in numerous other places of Scripture; but He is never said πράττειν; and His agency is never described by the word πράξις. This book therefore describes what Christ, the Invisible Head of the Church, ποιεί, i. e. does, or makes, by the visible instrumentality and operations, the πράξεις, or actings, of Apostles, who are His chief Ministers; and in whose apostolic office is contained and summed up the subordinate agency of the Priesthood and Diaconate.

The title of the book is * πράξεις 'Αποστόλων, "Actings of Apostles;" and two of the Apostles, Peter and Paul, are selected as specimens of the rest; and certain acts of theirs are chosen as specimens of their operations. The one, Peter, was called by Christ on earth; the other, Paul, was called by Christ from heaven. The one, Peter, had denied Christ; the other, Paul, had persecuted Christ. The one was an unlettered fisherman of Galilee; the other a learned Pharisee, brought up at Jerusalem. Therefore, in the choice of Peter and Paul, as special instruments of Christ in propagating the Gospel, His power is signally glorified. The acts of those two Apostles are like patterns of what Christ wrought by all the Apostles, whether on earth or from heaven. And what this book records of some of Christ's works, wrought by these two Apostles, enables us to infer what else He did by their instrumentality, and by that of the other Apostles whose acts are not described.

2. Hence also we perceive the reason why some of the main incidents in the history of Peter and Paul,—for example, their last sufferings and glorious martyrdom, are not recorded in this book. Some excellent persons, indeed, have deplored this ': some have therefore complained of omissions, or defects in the history. But no; St. Luke remained with St. Paul in his last days, as St. Paul himself has testified in his last written Epistle, "only Luke is with me 5;" but he has not said any thing of them. And with good reason. An uninspired writer would have dealt differently with his subject. Whatever else he left untold in the history of the Apostles, he would certainly have described their deaths. But St. Luke was guided by the Holy Ghost, not merely in writing what an uninspired man could not write, but also in not writing what an uninspired person would have been eager to write. There is inspiration in his silence. His silence, with regard to the Apostles, is full of eloquence with regard to Christ. Neither Paul nor Peter are the heroes of the Acts; but Christ is all in all. And by the subordination of the human instruments, the Divine Agent is glorified; by the "omissions and defects," as they are called, in the history of the Acts of the Apostles, he reminds us, that even the greatest of men are nothing; that even a Paul is nothing, and a Peter is nothing, but only "ministers of Christ"."

3. Here then we see a divine protest against that morbid curiosity of modern times, which craves to gratify the appetite by graphic sketches and vivid pictures of minute personal details in the history of the Apostles; and in order to provide food for that unwholesome craving, strains its inventive ingenuity, and bedizens the venerable forms of the Apostles with legendary shreds and tinsel embellishments. The Holy Spirit in this divine book condemns such meddling inquisitiveness, and busy familiarity and irreverence. He subordinates every thing in the private history of the Holy Apostles to the public dignity of the Apostolic office. He does not sink the Apostle in the man, but transfigures the man into the Apostle?. He tells us nothing of their personal appearance, nothing of the day or year of their birth, or of their death; nothing of their parents or children. He has not informed us whether St. Paul was ever married, or no. Thus he takes them out of the category of common men, and encircles their heads with a halo of sanctity; they are Christ's chosen vessels and instruments, consecrated as such; that is their history. He raises our eyes from them to Him: they by whom He wrought were men, but He who worked by them is God; and the sparkles of their light are drowned in the abyss of His Glory.

But he may have used a MS. like Codex D with the title πρᾶξις, in the singular.

The composition of Apocryphal "Acts" of Apostles and apostolic men (of which an Edition has been published by Tischendorf), proves the prior existence of a genuine "Acts," and the Christian Church knows of no other than the work of St. Luke bearing that inscription.

⁴ As Dr. Burton, who says, p. 262, "It is much to be lamented that St. Luke did not continue the Acts of the Apostles beyond the arrival of St. Paul at Rome."

IV. The plan then of this divine book, is to reveal to us Christ sitting in heaven; not like one of the deities of the heathen world, indifferent to human affairs, or controlled by a fatal destiny; or sharing His power with rival deities; but enthroned King of Kings and Lord of Lords, and ever ruling all things by His word, for the advancement of His Gospel, and the establishment of His kingdom, till at length He will put all things under His feet, and God will be all in all.

Here is a magnificent subject, not unworthy the pen of the Holy Ghost.

The Acts of the Apostles, thus viewed, is a divine Epinicium, or Song of Victory, on the triumphant exaltation of Christ. It is an Evangelical fulfilment of those prophetic Psalms which celebrate His Victory; "Thou art gone up on high, Thou hast led captivity captive." "Gird Thee with Thy sword upon Thy thigh, O Thou most mighty." "Ride on, because of the word of truth, of meekness, and righteousness. Thy seat, O God, endureth for ever."

In regard also to Christ's tender love for the Church, His Bride, it may be called a sacred Epithalamium, a holy nuptial hymn, in which is celebrated His tenderness for her, whom He has "purchased with His own blood"," and has delivered from heathen bondage, and has brought near to Himself, and advanced to His own right hand, and made her partner of His Glory. Here, in this divine book, which describes the espousals of the Gentile Church to Christ, we may behold the prophetical picture displayed to the eye of the world in the fulness of historical truth: "Upon Thy right hand did stand the Queen in a vesture of gold wrought about with divers colours. Hearken, O daughter, and consider; incline thine ear: forget also thine own people and thy father's house. So shall the King have pleasure in thy beauty, for He is thy Lord God, and worship thou Him 4."

Hence we may derive the assurance that "no weapon formed against her shall prosper "." The Powers of this world may persecute and oppress her, the Spirits of Darkness may be leagued against her, but He who ascended into heaven, and reigns in Majesty on high, works in her, and by her. "He is in the midst of her, therefore shall she not be removed; He shall help her, and that right early. He is her hope and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be moved, and the hills be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof rage and swell, and the mountains shake at the tempest of the same; the rivers of the flood thereof shall make glad the city of God. The Lord of Hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge "."

V. This then is the proposition, submitted to the reader's consideration; -

That the design of the writer of the Acts of the Apostles is, to reveal Jesus Christ in Glory, ordering and disposing all things, by the agency and teaching of men, particularly His Apostles, for the advancement of His Kingdom upon Earth, and for the full and final triumph of His holy Name and Word.

We may now proceed to test the soundness of this proposition, by reference to evidences derived from the state of the World when the Book was written, and also from the Book itself.

Jesus Christ is Lord of all ⁷. His enthronement in glory is the culminating point to which His earthly ministry tends. His session there, by its very name implies permanence. There He reigns and will continue to reign, even to the end, as King. There He teaches, and will continue to teach, as our Prophet. There He, who as our Priest offered Himself on the Cross, and lifted up His hands on His Apostles, and blessed them, and was parted from them ⁸, and ascended into Heaven, and entered into the true Holy of Holies, on that great Day of Atonement; there He abideth still, a Priest for ever ⁹; there He ever liveth, to make intercession for us ¹⁰.

Such, then, being the majesty of Christ, and such His offices to mankind, it may reasonably be anticipated

1. That the circumstances of the world would be adjusted à priori, by providential preparations and pre-arrangements for the display of such a glorious consummation. And, that à posteriori Christ would manifest His divine Power, by applying actually, what He had contrived provisionally, for the extension of His kingdom on Earth. And,

2. That He would also display His sovereignty by over-ruling adverse Powers, and by making them subservient to the promotion of His own glory. And that, if the Acts of the Apostles was written, as we have affirmed it was, with the view of revealing Christ's working and teaching, by the agency of His Apostles, for the advancement of His Kingdom upon Earth, it would exhibit evidence of such antecedent arrangements, and of such subsequent application, and of such overruling control. In a word, many things would be seen in it to have been made à priori to converge to Christ's Session in Glory, and à posteriori to radiate from it.

1. First, then, as to the evidence, displayed in the Acts, of previous providential arrangements for the furtherance of Christianity; and of Christ's power in applying those arrangements, and in over-ruling obstacles, for the extension of His Kingdom;

In contemplating the social and religious phenomena of the world at the time of Christ's Ascension, we see the Jews dispersed for their sins; and, though, for the sake of commerce, dwelling in all the great cities of the earth, yet not intermingled and blended with the population of any. We see them distinguished every where by certain characteristics; by the sanctification of a certain day, the Sabbath; by weekly religious assemblies on that day, in certain public buildings, their Synagogues; by regular reading there of certain Books;—the Law and the Prophets. We see those Books, not like the mystic volumes of other Religions, concealed from public view, but diffused by copies of the Original, and by Translations from it, in every country under heaven.

We see this People, although thus scattered, "like chaff of the summer threshing-floor'," in all parts of the world, yet knit together by a strong and secret tie. We see them bound to a common centre, Jerusalem, by the triple cord of their Annual Festivals. We see them attracted to it year after year, by a silent centripetal force, and joined together in the City and Temple there. We see that City and Temple surviving after many national revolutions. It had been razed to the ground by Nebuchadnezzar; it had been profaned and made desolate by Antiochus Epiphanes; it had been dismantled by Ptolemy the First, it had been captured by Pompey, and plundered by Crassus; and ransacked by Cassius 2. But still, as if it had been a living thing endued with perpetual youth, the Temple of Jerusalem, at the time of the Ascension, shone in magnificence and splendour, unparalleled since the age of Solomon. And yet, forty years after the Ascension, this bond of national union was severed. All that complex machinery of national organization, which had been so providentially contrived, and so wonderfully protected, was dissolved; the Temple was levelled to the dust, and has never risen more.

Surely we may say, that the Temple of Jerusalem, with its sacred Ritual, had been preserved by Almighty God for some great purpose; and that that great purpose had been answered, and that the uses of the Temple and its ceremonial were exhausted, when it was destroyed.

What was the final cause of this providential arrangement, and of this divine dispensation?

The answer is found in the Acts of the Apostles. We see it there, and in there alone. The Day of Pentecost explains it. There Christ is revealed, sitting on His heavenly throne, sending the Gift of the Holy Ghost, which He had received in virtue of His obedience and for the manifestation of His Glory 3. "The Lord gave the Word, great was the company of the Preachers 4." We see Him preaching by His Apostles, to crowds of devout men, who had thronged to that Festival from every nation under heaven. He it is, Who has brought by His providential power the multitudinous waters of these confluent nations to Jerusalem. He it is, Who by the preaching of His Apostles, inspired by the Holy Ghost, spiritualizes those national streams, by the infusion of the living waters of the Gospel, outpoured from the wellspring of His love, and sends them back on their homewardebbing course, to irrigate and fertilize the world.

Proceeding further in the history we may observe, that the first miracle of healing which Christ wrought by the hands of His Apostles, was done in a public place, at a public time; it was done in the city of Jerusalem, at "the Beautiful Gate of the Temple," and "at the hour of prayer 5;" and the people flocked to the Apostles, who preached Christ, as the sole author of the miracle, "in Solomon's Porch "." Thus the Temple, its Gates, its Porches, its Hours of Prayer, as well as its Annual Festivals, were preparatory and ministerial to the manifestation of Christ's Glory after His Ascension, and were used by Him for that end.

If we follow the Apostles from Jerusalem, and trace them in their Missionary Journeys, we see indications of similar preparations in all parts of the world. "Other men had laboured, and they enter into their labours 7." Many centuries before, Christ had sent Moses and the Prophets, to be the Precursors of His Apostles. Go wherever they might, they heard the "voices of Moses and the Prophets read in the Synagogues every Sabbath Day 1." The fallow ground of the world had been broken up by that preparatory tillage, and had been ploughed into deep furrows for the reception of the seed of the Gospel.

The doctrine of Levitical Sacrifices, rightly understood, prepared the way for Evangelical Sacraments. The Jewish Sabbath died, and arose to life in new glory and beauty in the Lord's Day. The Synagogue was the Vestibule of the Church. The Pentateuch and the Prophets were matured into ripeness in the Gospel.

Again; even heathenism itself had been silently leavened by the diffusion of the Hebrew Scriptures. Their venerable antiquity, their noble simplicity, their pure morality, had won for them the affections of many wise and noble minds, which were wearied and disgusted with the jarring contradictions and the licentious profligacy of Paganism, and recognized in the religion of the Old Testament, a divine echo responsive to the voices of Nature, Reason, and Conscience, speaking in their own hearts.

The Acts of the Apostles presents us with examples of this class in the Roman centurion

Cornelius at Cæsarea, and in Sergius Paulus, the proconsul of Cyprus.

Besides, under the Providence of God the military successes of the Third Monarchy—the Macedonian-and after it those of the Fourth Monarchy-the Roman-had broken down the foundations of local reverence for national deities2, and had cleared the ground for the planting of a purer faith. The deities which presided as patrons over special cities and districts, had been made to pass under the yoke of Rome; they had not been able to defend their own cities against the arms of the conquerors, and so their credit was weakened, especially among the enlightened classes, who were thus prepared to receive Christianity. We may observe a remarkable instance of this in the friendship and protection proffered by the Asiarchs themselves, the Presidents of the Games of "the Great Goddess Diana," to St. Paul the Apostle, at Ephesus 3.

These two causes, -namely, the diffusion of the Hebrew Scriptures, and the decomposition of Paganism,—had tended to produce a class of persons in all parts of the world, who may be called the Seminary of the Gentile Church. These were the Proselytes -not the Proselytes of righteousness, but of the Gate—who are designated in the Acts of the Apostles as οί σεβόμενοι, οί φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεόν 4. Tired of Polytheism, and yet unwilling to bend their necks under the yoke of the Ceremonial Law, they received with joy the tidings of the Gospel; they recognized in Christianity a religion which satisfied the wants of their nature, the requirements of their reason, and the yearnings of their hearts, without impairing any of the reverence with which they had learnt to regard the God of the Old Testament; but rather, and much more, enlarging and spiritualizing the ideas they had already conceived of His merciful purposes and glorious attributes. Here, therefore, in the Gospel, they found a treasure of unspeakable price; here they might well exclaim, εύρήκαμεν, συγχαιρωμεν, "We have found it, let us rejoice together."

The Apostles, as the history of the Acts shows, met with this class of Proselytes in their missionary journeys every where. And in it they found, as it were, a bridge already laid down for the victorious passage and entrance of the Gospel into every city of the world.

The conquests of the Third Empire—that of the Greek dynasty of Alexander the Great—had extended a common language, the Greek, over the greater part of Europe and Asia. And by the royal command of one of the Princes of that empire 5, the Hebrew Scriptures, in part, had been translated into that language. That translation, the Septuagint, had been executed by Jews, and had been received in their Synagogues. It was their Authorized Version; and therefore the Jews could not fairly make any exception to it 6; and thus a preparation had been made for the preaching and writing of the Gospel in that common tongue.

The Third Empire had given great impulse and encouragement to commerce and navigation; it had built gallant fleets, and constructed noble docks, emporiums, arsenals, and seaports in various parts of the world. Thus it facilitated the intercommunion of nations, and prepared the way for the diffusion of the Gospel which would unite them all in Christ.

If the dynasties founded by the successors of Alexander the Great, and branching off from his Monarchy, had taken deep root in the world, as independent and separate kingdoms, then the progress of Christianity would have been impeded by many hindrances; but providentially they were made to coalesce under the Roman or Fourth Empire.

The Third or Greek Monarchy had prepared the way for the Gospel by sea, the Fourth Monarchy accelerated its course by land. The warlike power of Rome constructed Roads, which linked all parts of the vast empire to the capital. These military Roads of her Legions became highways for the Gospel. The martial Mistress of the world was a Pioneer of the Prince of Peace.

Rome stratified Europe, and the Apostles evangelized it by her aid.

The Acts of the Apostles supplies evidence here. We may trace the Apostle St. Paul on his first entrance into Europe along the Egnatian Way-from Philippi to Amphipolis, Apollonia, and Thessalonica'. And it is worthy of remark, that the glorious event, which crowns the history of the Acts, and which is the pledge of the future conquests of Christianity, -namely, the arrival of the great Apostle of the Gentiles in the heathen Metropolis of the world, Rome, in order to preach the Gospel there, and to bear witness to Christ before the throne of the Cæsars, was brought about by the agency of Ships of the Third Empire, and by Roads of the Fourth. St. Paul sailed towards Rome in two vessels of Alexandria 2, and arrived at Rome by the Queen of roads, the Appian Way. And perhaps the Sacred Historian has noted the heathen name of one of those ships 3, and has specified two itinerary stations on that great military road ',-things trivial it might seem, if any thing in Scripture can be so called, -with a view of suggesting to the reader a thankful acknowledgment, that the commercial and maritime activity and skill, and warlike prowess of heathenism, its engineering labours and locomotive powers, had been made subservient to Christ, and had been consecrated by Him, to the furtherance of His Gospel.

Such then are some of the intimations, which the Acts of the Apostles affords, of the previous preparations of the world for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom, and of the actual application of those preparations for that end.

2. But further. This History displays Christ in Glory, exercising His power, not only in using the machinery which He Himself had contrived for that purpose, but also in controlling and overruling all adverse powers, and manifesting His glory by the conversion of those powers into instruments for the propagation of the Gospel.

Here in a signal manner it displays the divine supremacy and universal sovereignty of Christ.

A few examples may suffice.

At the commencement of the Acts, we see the Gospel assailed by the Chief Priests at Jerusalem, especially by the Sect of the Sadducees 5. They imprison Peter and John, and bring them before the Council. Thus the Apostles are brought forward to preach before the Sanhedrim the doctrine of the Resurrection, by the agency of the Sadducees who denied it. The Sadducees imprison the Apostles again 6, but the Angel of the Lord by night opens the prison doors. Thus Christ overrules the designs of the Sadducees, who denied the existence of Angels, and makes the Sadducees themselves to be the means of showing to the world, that His Angels are ministering Spirits encamping about His Church.

The seven Deacons are appointed, and the fury of Jewish persecution rages against Stephen, and evokes from his mouth that noble speech, spoken before the Jewish Sanhedrim, and containing the very pith and marrow of all true interpretation of Jewish History, and declaring that its sum and substance is Jesus Christ. It elicits from his lips an appeal to Jesus, standing at the right hand of God, and a prayer to Him as God, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit;" and to pardon those who stoned him, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge"." Thus, under the power of Christ, the malice of the Jews became the means of proving, that He, Whom they had crucified, Who is the faithful Witness, the First-begotten of the Dead's, the divine Proto-Martyr, the true Abel, Jesus Christ, now reigning in heaven, is the source of all the courage which animates the hearts of martyrs in their dying hour; that He is the fountain of all the Faith which illumines their inward eye, and of all the Hope which gives them a foretaste of bliss; and of all the Charity which makes them love and bless their persecutors, and enables them to be more than conquerors in death, over it, and by it, and makes death itself to be their birth to everlasting life.

The "persecution which arose about Stephen" scattered the disciples; but the disciples, being scattered by persecution, went every where "scattering the seed of the word"." Thus Persecution promoted Preaching: the spirit of St. Stephen revived in St. Philip, and carried the Gospel to Samaria, to Azotus, to Cæsarea. The more Persecution raged, the more Preaching prevailed. Saul is hastening from Damascus with a commission from the Chief Priests, to bind the Disciples there; he draws near to the gate of the City, and is eager to seize on his prey; but Jesus on His heavenly throne beholds him and checks him in his course, and dashes him to the ground, and blinds him with a light from heaven, and speaks to him with a voice of power, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" Saul the Persecutor became Paul the Preacher. The same Jesus, who when on earth had called simple fishermen from their nets at the Sea of Galilee, and made them to be His Apostles, manifested His power from heaven, by calling the learned Pharisee, breathing rage and slaughter, and making havoc of the Church, and bearing letters from the Jewish Sanhedrim empowering him to imprison the Christians of Damascus; and He sends him as His Apostle to the Gentiles, and enables him by the Holy Ghost to indite divine Epistles, for the comfort and edification of His Church in all ages of the world.

Saul, who had been the instrument of the Sanhedrim in persecuting Christ, is now persecuted by the Sanhedrim for Christ's sake. But the same divine power of Jesus, which had overruled his rage against the Church, and had converted it into an instrument for advancing His kingdom, now overrules the rage of the Jews against Paul, for the same end. They arrest him in the Temple at Jerusalem', but that arrest is made an occasion for the spread of the Gospel. It leads to the preaching of that Gospel at Jerusalem by the mouth of St. Paul—the former Pharisee, the pupil of Gamaliel, the once zealous persecutor-first to the people in the Area of the Temple?, and then, on the following day, to the assembled Sanhedrim3. The Jews, in their fury against him, lie in wait to destroy him '; but the more fiercely they rage, the more gloriously Christ triumphs. He uses their conspiracy against Paul as the occasion for bringing him to Cæsarea, the Roman capital of Palestine, in order that he may preach the Gospel there, first to Felix the Roman Governor, and his wife Drusilla, and next to Porcius Festus, his successor, and to Agrippa, the Jewish King, and Bernice his sister, and to the Chief Captains and principal men of the city 5. And, finally, it is made to conduce to that glorious consummation, which Christ had promised 6, and Paul ardently desired', namely, the mission of St. Paul to Rome, and the preaching of the Gospel by his mouth in the heathen Metropolis of the world. "I would therefore that ye should understand, brethren" -he himself declares,-"that the things which happened unto me," although they were contrived by the malice of the Tempter, "fell out for the furtherance of the Gospel"."

One more example of this kind. "Herod the king stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the Church ';" he kills one Apostle, St. James, and imprisons another, St. Peter. In the eye of the world, he seems to be triumphing over Christ. But what has he done? He has sounded an alarm which has called the Church to her proper arms, prayer, unceasing prayer 10. Thus Herod has taught Christendom where her strength lies. The prayer of the faithful brings down Angels from heaven, who deliver Peter from his chains, and smite Herod on his throne; and "the Word of the Lord grows and is multiplied." And the Church, like another Miriam, takes up her timbrel and says, "Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath He thrown into the sea "1."

Let us consider also the internal affairs of the Church. Temporary evils nascent therein are overruled into means of endless good. A murmuring arose of the Grecians against the Hebrews in the primitive Church 12. It is made an occasion for the growth of the Word 13, and for the extension of the Church, by the completion of the Christian ministry in the institution of the Diaconate. Thus a local and transitory evil was changed into a source of universal and perpetual good.

Again, a question is agitated concerning the necessity of circumcision for the Gentile Christians, and no small dissension and disputation prevails 14. Therefore it was resolved that Paul and Barnabas should go up to Jerusalem unto the Apostles and Elders about this question 15. The Apostles and Elders meet in Council at Jerusalem, they frame and promulgate a decree, and the question is settled 16. Thus the dispute was made to be a source of peace by which disputes are ended. It was made to supply a precedent and rule for the practice of the Church in all ages, and to establish a principle of universal application,—that for the settlement of controversies, whether concerning doctrine or discipline, and for the quieting of men's minds, and the appearing of strife, resort should be had, not to any one man in the Church, not to Peter, not to the Bishop of Rome, but to the Holy Ghost Himself, speaking in Councils and Convocations of the Church, praying for His guidance, and building their decrees upon His Word 1.

Let us observe further how this history shows, that the direct agency of the Evil Spirit is made subservient to the cause of Christ. Satan filled the heart of Ananias to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the money that had been vowed to God. He who was the instrument of Satan is smitten in his sin; and is made to preach to the world a perpetual warning against the sin of Sacrilege².

Satan met Peter at Samaria, and offered him money for spiritual gifts by the hand of Simon Magus. "Thy money perish with thee," was the Apostle's reply . Thus the bribe of the Tempter supplied occasion also for a perpetual warning against the sin of Simony.

Satan encountered Paul at Paphos, and endeavoured to turn away the Deputy from the faith by the sorceries of Elymas. But, "O full of all subtlety, thou child of the devil," exclaims the Apostle, and Elymas is smitten with blindness, and Satan is defeated, and Christ is glorified 4. Satan met the Apostle in the streets of Philippi, and flattered him by the mouth of her whom he had possessed 5. But his adulations are rejected, and he is cast out, and the Gentile world is taught that the Spirit with which they dealt so familiarly in Divination and Oracles, is the Spirit of Darkness. In the city of Ephesus, the stronghold of magic and witchcraft, Satan owns the power of Jesus working by those whom He calls and sends; "Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye 6?" And by overcoming and routing those who took upon them to usurp the name of Jesus, without being duly called and sent, Satan is made to proclaim the sin of those who presume to preach the Word, and to minister the Sacraments of Christ, without a call and mission from Him.

The same may be said of physical evils: they were overruled by Christ for the good of the Church. Agabus stood up, and signified by the Spirit that there should be a great Dearth throughout all the world? This pre-announcement awakens the love of the believers at Antioch, and they forestall the Famine by charitable supplies to the poor Saints of Jerusalem. Thus Famines are made to be fruitful in Christian graces, flourishing unto life eternal.

Again; a storm raged for many days in the Mediterranean Sea against the ship in which St. Paul was; it was made the occasion for the manifestation of the quiet calm, and placid peace in the heart of St. Paul, who cheers the courage of Roman Soldiers, and Grecian Mariners, with comfort and hope derived from the Holy Ghost? It suggests the cheering assurance that all the tempests which the Enemies of the Church are permitted to excite against her will be overruled by the power of Christ for her welfare; and that "the rivers of the flood thereof shall make glad the city of God 10." St. Paul landed at Malta, a viper fixes on his hand, and shows him to be sent from God 11. No deadly thing will hurt the servants of God.

On the whole, then, we see that the Acts of the Apostles displays evidence of a well-organized system of preparations, extending like a complex net-work over a great part of the world, and continued through many centuries, for the manifestation of the Glory of Christ in the progress of His Gospel. This History shows, that when He had ascended into Heaven, and was seated in Glory at God's right hand, He used these previous adjustments, as means and appliances for the advancement of His kingdom. It shows also that He, enthroned in heavenly glory, overruled the workings of Satan against His Church, whether in external assault or internal discord, and made them subservient to His glory and her welfare. It traces her progress under His favour and protection, from the upper room at Jerusalem, till "the little one became a thousand, and a small one a strong nation 12." "Her brook became a river, and her river became a sea 13," and the waters replenished the earth.

This History reveals to us Christ, not intervening immediately to subdue His enemies, but giving them time for repentance; and, if they will not repent, casting them down to the ground, when they are full of confidence, as Saul was smitten at the gates of Damascus, and Herod when sitting on his throne; and delivering His Church from her foes, when she seems to be on the brink of destruction. Then He rescues "her soul as a bird out of the snare of the fowler";" "when the enemy comes in like a flood, then the Spirit of the Lord lifts up a standard against him "."

Regarded in this light, this divine Book is a blessed possession for the Church in every time of her pilgrimage through this vale of tears. In it Christ sends the Holy Ghost the Comforter, to breathe hope and trust and peace and courage and joy into her heart. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever'. He, who eighteen centuries ago ascended on the clouds of heaven, and took His seat on the right hand of the Majesty on High, He ever sitteth there, Ruler and Lord of all. He continues, and ever will continue, to exercise the same power which this Book reveals, for the manifestation of His own glory, in the advancement of His Kingdom, even till the day of Judgment, when finally, and for ever, He will put all enemies under His feet.

Therefore this Book may be called an Epitome of History, especially of Church History. In it we see the Laws, by which Christ, who is the Sovereign Lord of the World and of the Church, and who is unchangeable, works: in it we see what He has done, and from it we may infer what He will continue to do, even to the end. Thus this Divine History, if we may so speak, is also a Divine Prophecy; it projects its shadow forward from the day of the Ascension even to the day of doom. It is a divine message of comfort to every true Christian, in times of private and public sorrow. Reading its sacred pages with such assurances as these, we may feel a holy confidence, that all persecutions from without, and all perils from within the Church, will be overruled by the power of Christ, and be made ministerial to the triumph of His Gospel; that the gates of Hell will never prevail against His Church; that the fierceness of man will turn to the praise of God²; and that all the weapons of the enemy will recoil against those who wield them, and be made instrumental for the promotion of Christ's Glory, and for the salvation of those who obey Him.

Thus the Acts of the Apostles is a precious gift from heaven; it is the Magna Charta of Kings who would reign well and prosperously, and be crowned hereafter by Christ; it is a Manual for Christian Statesmen in their glorious conflicts in public life for Christ and His Church. It is a pastoral for Christian Bishops feeding Christ's Flock, and teaching others to feed it; it is a guide of the Parish-Priest in the cure of Souls, and in dispensing God's Word and Sacraments; it is a Martyrology for the Christian Confessor; it is an Itinerary for the Christian Missionary, in his voyages and journeys to plant the Gospel in distant lands; it is a companion and comforter for every believer, in the troubles of life and in the hour of death.

With this divine Book in our hands, though our lot may be cast in days of doubt and darkness, and even of rebuke and blasphemy, we need not faint and falter. The nearer Satan is, the nearer Christ is; the more fiercely Satan rages, the more gloriously will Christ conquer. As an ancient Father said, ἐγγὺς μαχαίρας, ἐγγὺς Θεοῦ μεταξὺ θηρίων, μεταξὺ Θεοῦ , "When near the sword, we are near to God; when in the midst of wild beasts, we are in the hand of God."

We may apply these considerations to present circumstances.

In the world as it now is we see many resemblances to its condition when the Gospel was first preached. The Jews still remain scattered among all nations, and intermingling with none; witnesses and keepers of the Old Testament which their Fathers received; and a standing evidence, by the fulfilment of Christ's prophecies concerning them, of the truth of the New Testament, which they reject.

We may also say that what the Empire of Rome was, by the vast extent of her territory in the first century, that the Empire of England is in the nineteenth. One seventh part of the inhabitants of the globe are subjects of the British Crown. The voice of the English Bible and the English

Liturgy is heard in almost all lands.

What the language of Greece was by its wide diffusion in the first century, that the language of England is now. And what the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament was then, that our AUTHORIZED VERSION of the Bible is now.

It is not, indeed, a faultless Version; nor was the Septuagint. It might be improved in some particulars by means of those critical aids which Almighty God has vouchsafed to us since its first publication, nearly two centuries and a half ago. But in all essential articles of saving Christian doctrine it is a sure guide to heaven. It is a holy oracle of Truth, and a sacred symbol of Unity, joining man to God, and connecting the present with the past, and knitting together the countless myriads in almost every land who speak the English tongue, in a sacred bond of love.

It is sometimes affirmed that this Authorized Version ought to be altered. Suppose that fifty persons could be found as wise, learned, holy, and catholic-minded, as Bishop Andrewes and his coadjutors were, who framed our Authorized Version; suppose also that they agreed in their alterations of that Version; yet it is certain, that the many millions who now agree in receiving the Authorized Version, would not agree in receiving their alterations of it. We should indeed have then an altered Version, we might have, in some respects, an improved Version; but we should then also see a great variety of different and rival Versions; and we should never more have one Authorized Version of Holy Writ. We should lose that,—lose it for ever. And in losing it, we should lose one of our best bonds of charity and most sacred symbols of unity.

The example of the holy Apostles, or rather of the Holy Ghost Who inspired them, may guide us here. They knew that the Septuagint Version, to which we have before referred as the Authorized Version of the Jews, was not a faultless version. No Version is perfect. For all Versions are the works of men, and no man is free from error, and no work of man is free from blemish. The divine Original alone is that. But the Apostles, though they were inspired by the Holy Ghost and had special gifts for translating the Old Testament, did not sit down to make a New Version, but they used the Old,—the Authorized Version,—the Septuagint. True it is, they explained it, they commented upon it. And we may do the same with our Authorized Version, which is not inferior to the Septuagint, the Version used by the Apostles. We may do so by oral and written expositions, and by private Translations of particular books; and also by marginal Annotations, duly sifted and approved. But let us not shake the faith, and mar the unity, which bind thousands together, by endangering the permanence of the English Authorized Version of the Bible.

Some of the same considerations might be applied to that other bond of Christian unity among Englishmen, the Book of Common Prayer. In the temper of the present times, it is too much to be feared, that attempts to alter the Book of Common Prayer would be attended with danger no less than attempts to alter our Bible; and if we should sever the bands of those two anchors of Truth and Peace, Faith and Charity, we may haply rue our infatuation, when we are drifted about in a storm of strife and unbelief.

Again, in the first century, Almighty God had prepared the way for the Gospel by giving new impulses to the powers of locomotion. The Third Empire, that of Greece, had smoothed the way by sea for the rapid course of the sacred vessel of the Church; the Fourth Empire, that of Rome, had made roads for the march of the Gospel. The military Mistress of the World was a Pioneer for the Prince of Peace.

A similar movement is going on now. By physical discoveries and by greater mechanical powers, the means of communication by sea and land have been multiplied with unexampled rapidity.

Space has been almost annihilated, and words travel with the speed of thought.

Probably, many who have laboured in these great works, have thought mainly of temporal ends and secular advantages; but an unseen Hand regulates them all. The same Almighty Being Who directs the planets in their course, and sends forth the lightning from the dark cloud, He also creates the fervid vapour, panting in its metal prison-house, and wafts by its means the vessel across the broad sea, and impels the long train upon the iron road, and makes the electric fluid to shoot along the quivering wire. And doubtless He is making these mighty instruments to subserve His own purposes in Christianizing the world. These powers themselves are God's ministers, they have a holy function, an apostolic office, they are Missionaries and Evangelists of Christ.

The day is coming, indeed it is now come,—witness the facilities given by the construction of Railroads for the progress of the Gospel;—the day is coming, when the world will recognize the Lord's doing in all these mighty operations. And even now to the ear of faith they preach aloud,

"Prepare ye the way of the Lord; Make straight in the desert a highway for our God 1."

Yet more—as we have seen, even hindrances themselves were overruled by Christ in Apostolic days for the furtherance of the Gospel.

So it is now, and so will it be always, even to the end of the world.

Christ rescued the great Apostle from his enemies, and made their malice conducive to the preaching of the Gospel at Rome; so He will make all things, however adverse, subservient to Himself. After that fierce tempest in the Mediterranean Sea, He brought St. Paul in peace along the Appian Way to the great Capital of the world; so after the tempest and the hurricane which in the latter days will rage against His Church, He will bring her in safety and victory to the haven where she would be.

Therefore, in reading this Book, we may raise our eyes to heaven, and look for that blessed time, when Christ, who ascended into heaven, and now sitteth there, will come again in His glorious Majesty, to judge the Quick and Dead. Then all the storms of this world will cease; then, willingly or unwillingly, all things will be made subject to Christ; then He will reign King of Kings, and Lord of Lords; and then they who have not failed in their duty here, but have stood firm in their allegiance to Him in the hour of trial, will mount with Him in triumph, to the City of the ald loss Living God.

VI. Let it, also, be remembered, that Christ is not only the King of the World, but He is also b that Teacher: and that what His Apostles teach, as well as what they do, is by virtue of His Authority.

Accordingly, St. Luke says at the beginning of the Acts of the Apostles, "The former treatise have I made of all that Jesus began to do and to teach," before He was taken up into heaven. And and now, in this his latter treatise, he relates what Jesus continues to do and to teach, after He has on, but been taken up into heaven.

We have been considering what Christ continued to do; let us now consider what He continues nferior to teach.

sitions. When upon earth, at the commencement of His Ministry, He went up to the Mountain of Beatitudes, and "when He was set, He opened His mouth and taught 1." So at His Ascension, He went up on High, He ascended the heights of Heaven, and when He was set down at the Right Hand of God, He opened His Mouth and taught, and will ever continue to teach. He is ever unity preaching a Sermon on the Mount, from His seat in heaven.

What the Apostles taught, as well as what they did, is to be regarded as from Him. Their Miracles were the credentials of their Teaching; they were like seals impressed with His royal e two signet, and were attached to the message of the teaching which they delivered from Him. The seals of the Miracles were displayed to the world, in order to avouch the message of the Doctrine; and that it might be heard and read with that awful reverence which is due to a heavenly rescript new from the King of Kings.

Therefore the Teaching of the Apostles, as displayed in this book—whether that Teaching was conveyed in words, or embodied in practice—demands the attention of mankind in every age, as being no other than the Teaching of Christ .

Let us consider then, what this Teaching is, and whether it is represented by the Apostles as dity, coming from Christ Himself.

First in historical order is an example of Teaching by action. It is seen in the provision made by the Apostles for the continuance of their own office. There, the choice of Matthias to fill the Who place of Judas, is expressly ascribed to Jesus: "Lord, show whether of these two Thou hast shosen 3." Thus the world was taught that the Apostolic office was not to terminate with Christ's Ministry on earth, but to be continued after it. "The lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbered hoot with the eleven Apostles 4."

Doubtless our Lord had prepared the Apostles for their ministry, in the forty days during which He remained with them before His Ascension, "speaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God 5." But before His Ascension He never allowed them to preach to the Heathen, or of even to the Samaritans. And He commanded them not to depart from Jerusalem, until they had the been endued with power from on High 6.

The descent of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost gave a wider range to Christ's office of Teaching. It was Christ who sent the Holy Ghost 7. "Behold, I send the promise of My Father upon you";" "He shall receive of mine. He shall glorify me ";" "He shall bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you 10."

Therefore the Day of Pentecost reveals to us Christ receiving a new accession of glory, in the Mission of the Comforter. The Holy Spirit comes from Him, and is the Interpreter of His will. Thenceforth the teaching of Christ, which, while He was on earth, was confined within narrow limits, for a few years, became universal in place and time. It was also accompanied with new gifts and graces to those who received it, and communicated it to the world. It spake by their lips in all languages; and their hearts were fired with new zeal and courage, to preach it to the world; and they were endued with new powers of memory and understanding, to comprehend and expound the Scriptures, and to fly on eagles' wings as Missionaries of Christ to all parts of the world.

The Creed in which we profess our faith in Christ, is called the Creed of the Apostles; and it may well be so named; for every article of that Creed is to be found in the preaching of the Apostles as recorded in this book. But the Apostles, who taught others, refer us to Christ as their own Teacher. He commanded us to preach unto the people; He has poured out his Spirit upon us. He made them His "witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth;" He had said unto them, "It is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost;" and therefore one of them says, "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him, God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will. "?" Consequently, we must look upward; and regarding the Apostles as taught by Christ, we may trace all these Apostolic verities to the divine source and well-spring of all truth, Jesus Christ.

The foundation of Christianity is a belief in the Inspiration of Holy Scripture. The public reception and reading of the New Testament as true and inspired of God, is the strongest proof that can be desired of its Truth and Inspiration. The "Acts of the Apostles" was so read and received, in the age in which it was written; and since it is a true and inspired history, it is clear that the Old Testament is true and divinely inspired. For Christ, speaking by His Holy Apostles, every where appeals to the books of the Old Testament as the lively oracles of God. He, by their hands, sets His divine seal on the Old Testament, and delivers it to the Christian Church, as the Word of God.

Another method in which Christ teaches the world by the agency of the Apostles and apostolic men, in this book, is by interpreting the Old Testament. Speaking by the mouth of St. Peter in the second chapter of the Acts, He enables us to understand the prophecy of Joel, and to apply it to the effusion of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost, as the last message of God to the world before the second Coming of Christ 7.

In various portions of the Acts He has given us a divine Commentary on the Psalms of David, and has authorized and commanded us to apply them to Himself. He bids us see in the second Psalm a prophecy of the rage of the heathen, and the vain imaginations of the people, the standing up of the kings of the earth, and the gathering together of the rulers against Himself. He reveals to us in the sixteenth Psalm a vision of His own Death and Resurrection and Session in glory; He teaches us that He Himself is that Prophet who was pre-announced by Moses 10; and that God had showed "by the mouth of all His Prophets that Christ should suffer 11."

By the mouth of His martyr St. Stephen, who was full of the Holy Ghost ¹³, Christ Himself, our heavenly Teacher, propounds to us a pattern and model for the interpretation of the Old Testament. He establishes the typical relation of Joseph and of Moses to Himself ¹³. By the mouth of another Deacon, St. Philip, He appropriates to Himself the prophecy of the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah ¹⁴, and condemns all who would wrest it from Him. By the preaching of St. Paul, in the synagogue of Pisidia, He reveals Himself as foreseen by the Psalmist ¹⁵, and shows by St. Paul's mouth, and by that of St. James in the Council of Jerusalem, that God had pre-announced in the Old Testament the extension of His covenant to all nations in Christ ¹⁶.

Thus in this divine book, Christ, sitting in His chair of teaching in heaven, has performed by the agency of the Apostles, inspired by the Holy Ghost Whom He sent, a blessed work of Divine instruction, which has enabled us to see by its glorious light the true meaning of the Old Testament. He is our Expositor, He is our Commentator; He has given us, by Apostolic agency, a clue to the right interpretation of its Types, and Histories, and Prophecies. He has given us in the New Testament a divine interpretation of His own words which are written in the Old. He has delivered to us a divine protest against that sceptical system of infidel interpretation, which is rife in the present age, and which, with almost Titanic presumption, would shake, if it could, the foundations of heaven; and undermine the groundwork of the Genuineness and Authenticity, and Inspiration of Holy Writ; and would take away from the Church the prophecies of the Psalms, and of Isaiah,—even of the Fifty-third chapter itself—and despoil her of that heavenly inheritance which she has received through the hands of the Apostles from Christ Himself.

Let us consider also that we owe our knowledge of the Gospel itself to Christ teaching from heaven. He Himself wrote nothing; and no part of the New Testament was written by His Disciples while He was upon earth. None of them were then capable of recording His words and They often confess in the Gospels that they did not understand His sayings, and that they were hid from them 1. Christ's Words had lain like dark things in their hearts, but they were sunned forth into clearness by the light of the Holy Ghost, as the objects of creation are by the risen Sun.

If we were to be limited to Christ's teaching on earth, we should not have the New Testament. It was not till He had ascended into heaven, and had sent the Holy Ghost to teach His Apostles all things, and to bring to their remembrance whatsoever He had said 2, that they were qualified to write what they did. And therefore St. Peter says, that they preached the Gospel unto men "with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven 3."

Thus, then, we receive the Gospel itself from the hand of Christ in heaven.

Another important respect in which Christ teaches the world by his Apostles in this book is in Church-Regimen and Polity. It is recorded as a fruit of the effusion of the Holy Ghost upon the primitive Church, that "all who believed were baptized ";" and "they continued stedfastly in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread," that is, in the reception of the Holy Eucharist; "and in prayers;" or (as the original expresses it), in the prayers, or public Liturgy of the Church.

Here we see reflected, as in a mirror, a divine image of Church-Communion. By it, Christ Himself instructs us, that the Christian life in the soul is begun by Him in Baptism, and is continually nourished by Him in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; and that they who have been engrafted into His mystical Body must take care to maintain its Unity, and to cherish their own spiritual life, by communicating with it in the profession of a true faith, and by the reception of the means of grace in the public offices of religion.

He teaches us also in this book, that He has set apart certain persons as His Ministers, for the dispensation of the Word and Sacraments; and that they who desire to receive a blessing from Him, must seek for its bestowal by the agency of those whom He has authorized and commissioned to convey it by that dispensation.

For example, we find in this book, that although He spoke to Cornelius by an Angel, He commanded him by the voice of the Angel to send for St. Peter, in order to hear the Word preached, and to be received into the Church by the Ministry of man 5. Similarly, though He called Saul by His own voice from heaven, yet He commanded him to go into the city, "where it should be told him what he must do "." And he sent to him Ananias, who received him into the Church by baptism 7, saying, "Now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized and wash away thy sins, calling on the Name of the Lord 8."

Here, then, and in other places, He has shown the necessity of a Christian Ministry; and He has also taught the world, what the due organization of that Ministry is. As we have seen, He declared the continuity of the Apostolic office by the election of Matthias; and He proclaimed the duty of extending it, by calling Barnabas and Paul to the Apostleship's. He constituted Elders in every Church by their hands 10. He instituted by the agency of the Apostles the holy order of Deacons 11. Thus He has delivered a divine exhortation from heaven to all Churches, to take good heed to maintain the threefold Ministry of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons; and to seek for His favour by a right use of that Ministry in extending His Kingdom throughout the world.

All who desire to have the blessing of Christ on their Missions at home and abroad, are thus instructed to obtain it by the means which He has appointed for that end.

Again; by the practice of His Holy Apostles, as twice recorded in this book 12, He teaches from Heaven the use and necessity of the holy rite of Confirmation. It is Christ Himself sitting in glory, who sheds forth the full outpouring of the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of Apostolic hands on those who have been baptized.

It cannot rightly be alleged, that Confirmation is less obligatory on Christians, because it was not instituted by Christ Himself on earth. For, by reason of what Confirmation is, it could not have been instituted by Christ while on earth. Confirmation is the appointed means for the plenary effusion of the gift of the Holy Ghost on those who have been baptized. And that gift could not be bestowed till after Christ's Ascension. While He was upon earth, "The Holy Ghost," we read,

"was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified ."

The fact, that Confirmation was not instituted by Christ when on earth, is a necessary consequence of the dignity of the gift bestowed in it; and is not therefore a reason for its disparagement, but for its reverent use. Let no one therefore despise what was administered by the holy Apostles, who were taught by Christ, and inspired by the Holy Ghost; and what was used by them for the conveyance of a gift, not of partial and temporary use, but of universal need for all men in all ages of the Church, the gift of the Holy Ghost. He who despises Confirmation despises not man, but God². He despises not the Apostles alone, but despises Him Who said to the Apostles, "He that receiveth you receiveth Me³, and He that despiseth you despiseth Me⁴;" and he cannot be said to love the Lord Jesus; but incurs the penalty pronounced by the Holy Ghost Himself; "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema, Maranatha⁵."

The administration of Confirmation is restricted to the Apostolic Office of Bishops, who are successors of the Apostles in their ordinary ministrations. It is therefore the duty of every Church, and of every Christian, to endeavour earnestly, that the Episcopate may be so increased, that no christian soul, for which Christ shed His blood, may be defrauded of that portion of its spiritual birthright which Christ Himself designs for it in the rite of Confirmation; and, after it, in timely access to the Holy Communion. It is not to be expected that they who are not brought to Confirmation, will be duly catechized in their duty to God, their neighbour, and themselves. They will grow up to man's estate without becoming healthy members of the Body of Christ. They will not come to the Lord's Table. It is to be feared, that many of them, not receiving the means of grace which are necessary for their spiritual growth, will fall into schism, indifference, unbelief, and ungodliness; and that the Church of Christ may sit as a Rachel weeping for her children because they are not.

Again. Christ has taught us by the agency of His Apostles, what is the right mode of settling Controversies in the Church. By the Convention of the Apostles and Presbyters to the Council of Jerusalem, as recorded in the fifteenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and by the Mission of Paul and Barnabas to that Council, and by the part taken in it by St. Peter, St. James, and St. Paul, Christ, Who guided them by His Spirit, declares from Heaven, that for the appeasing of religious differences, men are not to resort to any one person, although he may call himself infallible, nor are they to follow the wayward devices of their own private imaginations; but that appeals are to be made to Synods of Bishops and Presbyters, invoking the aid of the Holy Ghost, and grounding their decrees on Holy Scripture; and that whatever has been settled and promulgated by them, regulating their proceedings by these principles, and is received by the consentient voice of Christendom, and takes root in the practice of the Universal Church, may be deemed to be a true exposition of Scripture, and conformable to the mind of Christ.

Other things there are in the Constitution and Regimen of the Christian Church, which are intimated in this book, and which may be ascribed to Christ teaching from Heaven by means of His Apostles upon earth.

One of these is the sanctification of the First Day of the week,—the Christian Sunday. Doubt-less it is a part of positive Divine Law, dating from the Creation, as revealed in the Old Testament, that one day in seven should be hallowed; and by that Law, the day to be hallowed is the seventh day of the week. But that the seventh-day Sabbath is now abrogated, and that the first day of the week is to be hallowed in its stead, can hardly be proved by any, who do not take into consideration Christ's Teaching, as embodied in the practice of the Apostles, observing as holy the first day of the week, instead of the seventh.

The Acts of the Apostles supplies a necessary connecting link in this argument. There it is said 6 that "upon the First Day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread," that is, to receive the Holy Communion, "Paul preached unto them." This passage is to be taken together with other intimations in Holy Scripture, particularly the relation of Christ's appearances to His Apostles on this day, the day of His Resurrection, and the narrative of the sending of the Holy Ghost from Heaven on this day, and the record of Christ's revelation of Himself to St. John in Patmos when in the Spirit on the Lord's Day. And these intimations, combined with what we know from other quarters of the primitive practice of Christians, will suffice to convince an unprejudiced person, that while the sanctification of one day in seven still remains in full force, on its original foundation of positive Divine Law from the beginning, the Day to be sanctified by Christians is the First Day of the week.

It may indeed be objected, that some of those conclusions are collected rather by probable inferences, than deduced directly by demonstrative proof. But perhaps it may be replied, that our moral probation in this world consists in the trial, whether we will attend to such probabilities as these. They are the best tests of our obedience; they prove its sensibility; they show, whether we are actuated only by that servile fear, which does God's bidding, when it is commanded to do so under strong coercion and penal discipline; or whether we are animated by that clear-sighted and cheerful spirit of filial love, which divines, and almost anticipates, our heavenly Father's desires, and hastes with angelic alacrity, at the least signification of His will.

These intimations therefore of the Will of Christ as to Christian Doctrine, and Church Discipline, as displayed in the Acts of the Apostles, are of inestimable value; they are not mere isolated incidents, and historical facts, limited in their uses to any particular age or country; they are general types and divine precedents, of universal application.

The Acts of the Apostles is a concise book, and it is an inspired book. In its brief compass the Holy Ghost describes the operations of Christ, acting by His Holy Apostles. It omits many things in their history which the world would desire to know; and these omissions are eloquent proofs, that the actions of the Apostles, which the Holy Spirit has not omitted, but has specially selected for commemoration in this book, are of paramount importance. The omissions serve to bring out in bolder relief, and in more salient prominence, the significance and value of what is not omitted, but distinctly set down in writing by the dictation of the Holy Spirit. The actions of the Apostles—or rather, the actions of Christ operating by them—which are recorded in this book, are doubtless designed to be patterns and examples for the faith and practice of the Church, in every country and in every age. They are like beams of the Sun of Righteousness, drawn together and concentrated in a brilliant focus, so that they may illumine the mind of the Church in every age of her existence.

Therefore we need not hesitate to say, that in the Acts of the Apostles the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls¹, Jesus Christ, is revealed to us as sitting in His chair in His heavenly Cathedral, surrounded by His Angelic Hierarchy, and delivering to all Christian Bishops and Pastors a divine charge and directory, a symbol of Christian Doctrine, a code of Ecclesiastical Polity, a rule of Church-Discipline, a chart of Missionary enterprise, a system of Biblical Evidences and Interpretation, for the perpetual instruction and regimen of every age and clime, even till He comes again, to judge the Quick and Dead.

VII. We may therefore derive great benefits from this contemplation.

First, the inestimable blessing of Unity. Christendom is torn asunder by schisms. Our Country is distracted by strife. Surely the time is come, that we should lay to heart "the great dangers we are in by our unhappy divisions." Surely the hour is arrived, that we should consider the grounds of our differences, and meditate on the sin of strife, and on the blessedness of peace.

Among the means available for the appeasing of strife and recovery of unity, none is more efficacious than this Divine Book, dictated by the Holy Spirit of Love; in which He reveals His own mission from Christ, and displays to us Christ acting and teaching by means of those who were sent by Him, and inspired by the Holy Ghost.

Therefore in referring to what the Apostles taught, we are referring to Christ Himself; and all who love Him may do well to remember His own words, "If ye love Me, keep My commandments?;" and "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say?" It cannot consist with love to Christ, to slight any, even the least, indication of His will, revealed in this book by the Holy Ghost.

Here is the true foundation of Apostolic Doctrine and Discipline; it is built upon a Rock, the Rock of Ages, which is Christ.

Let us then consider, whether in this Divine Book we may not find a path of unity, in which we may walk together as Brethren toward our heavenly home.

On the one hand, they who revere the doctrinal symbols and primitive organization of the Church, and desire to restore and reinvigorate them, wheresoever they are decayed, and to propagate them where they are wanting, may be invited to consider, whether, in endeavouring to attain this end, some among us may not have placed the Church in too prominent an attitude, and in too independent a position; and whether it be not our duty, to raise our eyes, and to direct the eyes of others upward, from the Church upon earth to Jesus Christ her Lord, acting and teaching in and by her from Heaven. The Holy Ghost has taught us in this Divine Book not to rivet our minds even on the Apostles themselves'; but to concentrate all our thoughts and affections on Him Who sent them, and acts by them. Let us not regard the Church as separable from Christ; but ever think on her as dependent on Him, and as deriving all her grace and virtue, all her authority and power, from Him alone. Let us not forget the words of the Psalmist, speaking to her, the Queen at Christ's right hand, and saying "He is thy Lord God, and worship thou Him²."

On the other hand, if we are tempted to think lightly of the Apostolic and Primitive Church, if we are disposed to treat with indifference any of the specific functions of the Christian Ministry, and its threefold orders, then let us pause and consider, whether we have rightly conceived the question at issue; and whether, by such a temper of mind, we may not be doing grievous wrong—not to men—but to Christ; to Christ our Lord and King, our Prophet and Priest, our Saviour and our Judge, seated in heavenly glory and majesty at God's right hand; to Christ, vouchsafing to send "His Holy Spirit from Heaven to teach His Apostles, and to guide them into all Truth in and whether we may not be guilty of disobeying Him, and of sinning against the Holy Ghost.

To think less of men, and to think more of God; to lift up our eyes from the Church Militant on earth, to her Lord and Head triumphant in heaven,—this is what the Holy Ghost teaches us in the Acts of the Apostles. Therefore it is, that He annexed it as a second volume to St. Luke's Gospel, and joined both together in one work; revealing in the former, Christ acting and teaching on earth, and in the latter, Christ acting and teaching in heaven. The Acts of the Apostles is the Gospel of Jesus Christ, now reigning in glory.

VIII. The Notes, which are contained in the present Volume, have been written with such persuasions as these.

They have also been dictated by a belief, that the design of this sacred Book has scarcely received the attention which it claims, and which, if duly bestowed upon it, would do much to settle the controversies of Christendom, and to advance the progress of the Gospel; and that the nearer the end of earthly things approaches, the greater its uses will be.

Accordingly, the Plan of the Book has been dwelt upon at large in the present Introduction.

The writer of these Notes cannot quit this subject, without an expression of thankfulness to Almighty God, that He has preserved in England a Church, which has not disqualified herself for interpreting the Acts of the Apostles.

One of the most painful feelings arising in the mind, from the perusal of interpretations of the Acts of the Apostles by learned members of those religious Communions, which have departed from the rule of primitive Christian Doctrine and Discipline, is caused by distortions or disparagements of the Apostolic precedents recorded in this Book, and received and followed by the ancient Church.

By a dereliction of those Apostolic precedents, those Communions have disabled themselves for expounding the Acts of the Apostles. They cannot interpret this Book aright, without, at the same time, pronouncing a sentence of condemnation on themselves; and, from the infirmity of human nature, it is hardly to be expected, that they should be willing to censure their own principles.

The student of Scripture may need to be cautioned against those interpretations; and still more should he be on his guard against those expositions, which are blemished by sceptical strictures on the History of the Acts, as well as by perversion of its teaching in matters of Christian Doctrine and Discipline, and by imputations of errors to those Saints and Martyrs, who were inspired by the Holy Ghost 1. For this reason also, the English student of Holy Scripture, while he thankfully avails himself of all the aids—critical, philological, historical, and antiquarian—which the erudition of Germany has richly furnished,—may well be thankful to the Great Head of the Church, that the principles of the English Reformation were not innovating, but preservative, not revolutionary, but restorative; and that God has raised up Expositors in England, inferior to none in wisdom and learning, and has placed them on a sacred vantage-ground of sound Exposition, by the principles and constitution of the Church, to which they have the happiness to belong.

IX. The details of the personal history of the Author of this Book will be found in the Introduction to his Gospel; and in the Chronological Table prefixed to this Book. The Acts of the Apostles, which brings the history of St. Paul down to the end of his first imprisonment at Rome, cannot have been completed before A.D. 63. It was probably published at Rome at that time.

X. For the reasons stated above, the Acts of the Apostles, which has sometimes been regarded merely as an appendage to the Four Gospels, but which holds an unique and independent place in the New Testament, forms a separate Part in the present edition.

In the Text of this Edition, more deviations from the Textus Receptus will be found, than, within the same compass, in the Edition of the Gospels. This is due to the fact, that there are many more discrepancies in the Manuscripts of this Book, than of them, or of almost any other Book of the New Testament.

The reader, however, will feel satisfaction in observing, that scarcely any of these variations affect the sense, in any perceptible degree; and that none in any respect touches the substance of any Christian Doctrine's. And he may thence derive an assurance, that while the collation of the vast variety of Manuscripts of the New Testament, which are derived from all parts of the world, serves to establish immoveably the integrity of the Text of the Inspired Volume, and to confirm the Truth of the Gospel; not one of that countless multitude has been found to invalidate in the least degree any historical fact, or any doctrinal article, on which the Christian Religion is founded, and our hope of salvation rests.

Particularly MS. D, i.e. the Codex Bezæ or Cambridge Manuscript, on which see Bp. Middleton's Remarks, Appendix to his Work on the Greek Article, pp. 649—669. Bornemann's edition of the Acts is based upon that MS. Some of its principal discrepancies may be seen in Eichhorn's Einleitung in d. N. T.

ii. p. 87; Kuinoel, Prolegomena, § 2.

² Except, perhaps, Acts xx. 18, and the question there is rather one of language than of substance.

CHRONOLOGICAL SYNOPSIS

EVENTS RELATED IN THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES'.

In the examination of this subject the following propositions are presented to the reader's notice.

1. The common era—Anno Domini—begins about four years too late. (See above on Matt. ii. 20.)

2. Our Blessed Lord's ministry, which began when He was thirty years of age (see on Luke iii. 23), and which seems to have lasted three years and a half (see on John v. 1), and which terminated at a Passover, commenced probably in the Autumn of A.D. 26, and ended at the Passover in A.D. 30. (See on John i. 14, and vii. 2; and cp. Africanus, Chronogr. Routh, R. S. ii. 187—190. Clinton. Fasti Rom. p. 14.)

3. Our Blessed Lord and Saviour was crucified on the 15th of Nisan, A.D. 30; and His Resurrection was on the 17th of Nisan of that year; and the Ascension was forty days afterwards; and the Day of Pentecost on which the Holy Spirit descended, was on a Sunday, the Seventh Lord's Day after that on which He rose from the Dead. (See on Acts ii. 1.)

4. The only date in the history of the Acts of the Apostles which can be fixed with absolute certainty, is that of the death of Herod Agrippa at Cæsarea, described in Acts xii. 20—22; and the determination of other points in the Chronology of the earlier portion of the Acts depends mainly on the date of this event.

Herod Agrippa was made King of Judæa and Samaria by the Emperor Claudius on his accession (Josephus, Ant. xix. 8. 2), which took place early in the year A.D. 41 (his predecessor, Caligula, having been murdered on the 24th of January in that year), and Agrippa died soon after the completion of the third year of his reign (Bell. Jud. ii. 11. 6). His death therefore took place A.D.

44; and it appears from the Acts that it was after a Passover (xii. 3).

Besides, Josephus informs us (Ant. xxiii. 6. 10) that Herod Agrippa had been appointed by the predecessor of Claudius, Caligula, to the Tetrarchies of Philip and Lysanias, soon after his accession, which was in the month of March, A.D. 37 (Dio, lviii. 639. Basnage, Annales i. p. 458. Clinton, F. R. p. 28). And it is stated by Josephus (Ant. xix. 8. 2) that Herod Agrippa died in the seventh year of his government, dating from that appointment by Caligula, early in A.D. 37. And thus we are brought again to A.D. 44, as the year of Herod's death.

5. Thus we have two limits in the history of the Acts, an anterior limit, or terminus à quo, in our Lord's Ascension and the descent of the Holy Spirit in the Spring of A.D. 30; and a posterior limit, or terminus ad quem, in the Spring or Summer of A.D. 44, the date of Herod's death. And in this interval of fourteen years are to be arranged the events recorded in the first twelve chapters of the Acts of the Apostles.

6. Another note of time is furnished by notices in the history of St. Paul, as narrated by himself in the first and second chapters of his Epistle to the Galatians.

In order to show that his preaching was not derived from men, but by revelation from Christ Himself, he there relates (Gal. i. 17) that he had no intercourse with the other Apostles, which could have imparted to him the knowledge he possessed; and that it was not till three years after his Conversion that he went up to Jerusalem from Damascus to see Peter, and that he remained there only fifteen days, and thence went into Syria and Cilicia (Gal. i. 17—21).

He adds, that fourteen years afterwards he went again up to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with him.

¹ The principal works on this subject are those of Josephus, Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. and Chronicon (Venet. 2 vols. 4to. 1818), Prosper Aquitanus, Chronicon (Bassani, 1782), Bishop Pearson, Tillemont, Basnage, Lardner, and Paley, specified in the List of Authors prefixed to this volume; and in more recent times,

It has been doubted, whether these fourteen years are to be dated from his conversion, or from the expiration of the three years mentioned previously in Gal. i. 18.

It seems most probable that the fourteen years are to be dated from the short visit to Jerusalem, and the journey thence to Tarsus at the end of those three years. For it is observable that in Gal. i. 18, the Apostle says, $\tilde{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\tau a$, $\mu\epsilon\tau\dot{\alpha}$ $\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\eta$ $\tau\rho\iota a$, i. e. then, after three years from my conversion. But in Gal. ii. 1, he says, $\tilde{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\tau a$, $\delta\iota\dot{\alpha}$ $\delta\epsilon\kappa a\tau\epsilon\sigma\sigma\dot{\alpha}\rho\omega\nu$ $\hat{\epsilon}\tau\dot{\omega}\nu$, $\pi\dot{\alpha}\lambda\iota\nu$ $\dot{\alpha}\nu\dot{\epsilon}\beta\eta\nu$, i. e. then, having passed through an interval of fourteen years, from the last-named date, I went up again to Jerusalem '.

This visit was most probably the same as that described in Acts xv. 2—22, when St. Paul was sent from Antioch to the Council of Jerusalem. It is true that St. Paul had been at Jerusalem some little time before that visit; but he had only gone to the Elders with alms (xi. 30; xii. 25), and he had no occasion to refer to this visit, in his Epistle to the Galatians. Besides, he says that in the visit which he is mentioning in his Epistle to the Galatians, he had recounted to the Apostles what he had been preaching to the Gentiles (Gal. ii. 2). But such an assertion as that is wholly inapplicable to the short visit mentioned in Acts xi. 30; xii. 25, on which he went up with alms to Jerusalem, and when he had not as yet been even ordained to preach to the Gentiles? (See Note on Acts xiii. 1, 2; cp. Bede in Act. xv. Davidson, ii. 112—122. Howson, i. p. 539—547.)

But in writing to the Galatians, concerning his intercourse with the other Apostles, he could not omit to notice the visit, which he made soon afterwards to Jerusalem, namely, that described in Acts xv. 2—22, when he went up to the Apostles and Elders assembled in Council there, to discuss a question in which St. Paul had a personal and official concern. Hence it would seem, that the Council of Jerusalem was held about seventeen years after the Conversion of St. Paul.

This conclusion cannot be regarded as more than an approximation to the truth; because it depends on the two passages above cited, where St. Paul speaks of years, which may be either complete years, or only, according to the Jewish method of reckoning, current years.

7. Another chronological clue seems to be supplied by the mention of the circumstances of St. Paul's escape from Damascus after his Conversion (ix. 25). It appears from 2 Cor. xi. 32, 33, where St. Paul himself is describing that escape, that the city of Damascus had then fallen into the hands of Aretas, King of part of Arabia Petræa, who had appointed an Ethnarch there.

In looking for a season when such a remarkable incident was likely to have occurred, we find none more probable than that in which Aretas had defeated the forces of Herod Antipas, to whom he had long been hostile, on account of Herod's ill-treatment of his daughter, whom he had abandoned for Herodias. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1. Matt. xiv. 1—13.) Herod Antipas being defeated (late in A.D. 36), appealed for succour to the Emperor Tiberius, who commanded Vitellius, then President of Syria, to declare war against Aretas. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1.) But soon after, Tiberius died (March, A.D. 37); and Vitellius drew off his forces, and went to Rome. (See notes below on ix. 2 and 24.)

It seems probable, that Aretas availed himself of the favourable opportunity thus presented for occupying the city of Damascus. This occupation would be only of short duration. Caligula interfered in the affairs of Arabia, in the second year of his reign (Dio, lix. 9), and would hardly have allowed Aretas to retain what he had usurped. If these calculations are just, the date of St. Paul's Conversion would be A.D. 34.

It may be remarked, that the Jews do not seem to have had the same power of persecuting the Christians at Damascus when St. Paul escaped from that city, as they had when he came down from Jerusalem with a commission from the High Priest. (Acts ix. 1—14; xxvi. 11.) But now the Jews lie in wait for him, and endeavour to destroy him by the permission and agency of the Ethnarch of Aretas. (Acts ix. 23. 2 Cor. xi. 32.) The occupation of Damascus by Aretas seems therefore to have been after his Conversion.

8. Another note of time may be derived from Acts ix. 31, where it is related that "all the Churches in Judæa, and Galilee, and Samaria had rest, and walking in the fear of the Lord and the comfort of the Holy Ghost were multiplied." The Christians had nothing to fear at that time from the Romans. Their persecutions were from the Jews; and if the Churches had rest, it first $\xi \pi \epsilon \iota \tau a$, which specifies the end of the three years; and so it seems the third $\xi \pi \epsilon \iota \tau a$ is to be dated from the second.

¹ Bishop Pearson, indeed, infers, p. 379, that the ἔπειτα (in Gal. ii. 1) must be deduced from the conversion, and not from the end of the three years, because another ἔπειτα intervenes in i. 21. But perhaps this circumstance may be rather alleged as an argument in favour of what is said above. For it is evident that the second ἔπειτα in i. 21, which introduces the visit of fifteen days to Jerusalem, and the journey thence to Tarsus, is dated from the

was not to be ascribed to any cessation of desire, but to a suspension of power or opportunity on the part of the Jews to persecute them.

It has been suggested by Basnage, ad A.D. 40, Lardner (i. 55; iii. 252), and others (see Note on Acts ix. 31), that this "rest of the Churches" was due to the alarm in which the Jews themselves were, on account of the command given by the Emperor Caligula, to the President of Syria, Petronius, in A.D. 39, to set up the Imperial Statue in the Temple at Jerusalem. (Joseph. Bell. Jud. ii. 10. 1. Ant. xviii. 8. 2. Philo, Legat. 31. Euseb. ii. 5.)

It was not till the death of Caligula and the accession of Claudius, 24th Jan. A.D. 41, that the Jews were relieved from this panic. And soon after that, Herod Agrippa, the person who had showed his zeal for the Jews by interceding with Caligula for a revocation of this command (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 8. 7. Philo, Leg. 35), "stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the Church, and killed James the brother of John with the sword; and because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to take Peter also." (Acts xii. 1.)

This Rest of the Churches cannot have commenced till after St. Paul's visit to Jerusalem, for then a persecution was going on, to which he was exposed. (Acts ix. 26-31.) Besides, when Paul came to Jerusalem, Peter was there; but during the rest, Peter was absent from Jerusalem on a Missionary Tour. (Acts ix. 31-43; cp. Lardner, iii. 253.)

9. Certain other notes of duration are set down in the Acts (viz.):-

(1) After St. Paul's first visit of fifteen days to Jerusalem and his journey to Cilicia (Gal. i. 18 -21. Acts ix. 30; xi. 25), and his intercourse with Barnabas, who brought him from Tarsus to Antioch, he remains with Barnabas a whole year at Antioch, where the Disciples are first called Christians (xi. 25—27).

(2) Paul and Barnabas, after their first Missionary Journey in Asia, returned to Antioch, and tarried no small time there (διέτριβον χρόνον οὐκ ὀλίγον) with the Disciples (xiv. 28).

(3) After their return from the Council of Jerusalem to Antioch they again tarried there (διέτριβον, xv. 35).

(4) St. Paul, in his second Missionary Journey, came through Asia Minor and Macedonia into Achaia (Acts xvi. xvii.), and remained at Corinth a year and six months (ἐκάθισε ἐνιαυτὸν καὶ μῆνας êξ, xviii. 11).

(5) From Cenchreæ, the eastern port of Corinth, he set sail for Ephesus, where he remained only a short time, being desirous of being at Jerusalem for the feast (xviii. 19-21), probably Pentecost.

(6) After a short visit to Jerusalem he returned to Ephesus, and spent there three years (xx. 31).

(7) After these three years he went again to Macedonia (xx. 1), and came into Hellas, and spent there three months (xx. 3).

He then went back through Macedonia, came to Philippi (xx. 6), where he spent Easter, and passed by Troas (xx. 6-12) and Miletus (xx. 15) to Cæsarea and to Jerusalem; where he had not been for several years (δι' ἐτῶν πλειόνων, xxiv. 17), and where he had desired to be at the feast of Pentecost.

(8) He was arrested in the Temple at Jerusalem by the Jews, and was sent by Claudius Lysias for safety to Cæsarea; and he was detained there in "custodia libera" two years by Felix, who (xxiv. 27) had been governor for many years (ἐκ πολλῶν ἐτῶν, xxiv. 10), and is succeeded in the procuratorship by Festus, who sends St. Paul by sea toward Rome.

(9) After his shipwreck in the Mediterranean, St. Paul remains during the winter at Malta; and after three months he sets sail again "in a ship which had wintered in the island" (xxviii. 11).

(10) He remained at Rome two whole years (διετίαν ὅλην, xxviii. 30).

(11) It is evident from St. Luke's narrative that St. Paul arrived at Rome in the Spring of the year after the succession of Festus to the Procuratorship in the Room of Felix;

What year was that?

(1) Felix was Procurator of Judæa in A.D. 521; and he had been many years (ἐκ πολλῶν ἐτῶν) Procurator, when Paul pleaded before him at Cæsarea. (Acts xxiv. 10.)

(2) Felix, when recalled, was saved from the punishment due to his misgovernment by the not long before, the appointment of Agrippa to the tetrarchy of Philip; which took place early in A.D. 53. The appointment of Felix is placed still earlier by Tacitus, Ann. xii. 54, "Pallas jampridem Judææ impositus." Eusebius (Chron. ii. p. 271) assigns it to the eleventh year of Claudius, i. e. A.D. 51. Clinton (Fasti Rom. pp. 34—36) is in favour of an earlier date than A.D. 52, for the appointment of Falix the appointment of Felix.

¹ It is said by Wieseler, p. 67, and others, that Felix was appointed by Claudius in the thirteenth year of his reign, i.e. after Jan. 24, A.D. 53; and this is inferred by him from Josephus, Ant. xx. 7. 1, δωδέκατον έτος ήδη ἐκπληρωκός. But Josephus, applies these words to the appointment of Agrippa, and not of Felix. It appears from that passage, and from Bell. Jud. ii. 12. 8, that Felix was appointed Procurator before, though probably influence of his brother Pallas with the Emperor Nero. (Joseph. Ant. xx. 8, 9.) Pallas was put to death by Nero A.D. 62. (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 65.) Therefore Felix must have ceased to be Procurator, and Festus must have been appointed to succeed him, some time before that date.

(3) St. Paul, when brought a prisoner to Rome, was delivered into the charge of the prefect of the prætorian guard (τῷ στρατοπεδάρχη, Acts xxviii. 16). It seems then that there was only one prefect at that time. But after the death of Burrhus, who was prefect till February, A.D. 62, when he died (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 51. Clinton, F. R. p. 44. Wieseler, p. 83), there were two prefects. See Bp. Pearson, ii. 389, and Wieseler, p. 86. Therefore it is probable that St. Paul came to Rome before March A.D. 62.

(4) Josephus relates (Ant. xx. 8. 11), that a dispute arose between the Jews and Festus the Procurator, and that they sent a deputation to Rome, where their cause was favoured by Poppæa, the wife of Nero. This could not have been before A.D. 62, when Poppæa became his wife. (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 49. Sueton. Ner. 35.) But some time must have elapsed after the appointment of Festus, before the dispute could have arisen, and the deputation have proceeded to Rome and have gained the favourable notice of Poppæa.

(5) Josephus also states (Vit. 3) that he himself went to Rome to intercede for some Jewish Priests whom Felix had sent there before his removal from the procuratorship. Josephus arrived at Rome A.D. 63 (Vit. 1). From his narrative it appears that they had been some time in detention at Rome, and that he engaged the interest of Poppæa in their favour.

(6) Eusebius says (H. E. ii. 23) that James, the Bishop of Jerusalem, was martyred by the Jews at Jerusalem, because they were disappointed by the escape of St. Paul from their hands. The martyrdom of St. James took place at the Passover, A.D. 62. (Euseb. ii. 23. Joseph. Ant. xx. 9. 1.) It appears that Festus the Procurator had recently died, and that his successor had not arrived; and that Ananus the High Priest, who was a Sadducee, and of a cruel temper, and his adherents, took advantage of this interval to destroy St. James and others. (Euseb. ii. 22, and ii. 23, where see Vales. Joseph. Ant. xx. 9. 1.) St. Paul's arrival at Rome would therefore have been before—but not long before—that time.

(7) On the whole, therefore, it seems most probable that Festus succeeded Felix in the Spring or Summer of A.D. 60, and that St. Paul's arrival at Rome is to be placed in the Spring of A.D. 61, and that he remained at Rome till the Spring of A.D. 63. Lardner (iii. 279) says, "Paul came to Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost, A.D. 58, and was sent away to Rome at the end of A.D. 60," and he is followed by Wieseler, 66—80. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 368. Birks, Horæ Apostolicæ, pp.

167-182. Howson, ii. 669-672. Hackett, p. 15; and see also Vales. in Euseb. ii. 23.

From the above premises we arrive at the results, which may be arranged as probable in the following Chronological Table.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

A.D.

30. The Crucifixion of Christ at the Passover.

His Ascension, forty days after His Resurrection.

The Descent of the Holy Spirit at the Feast of Pentecost, fifty days after the Passover.

31-32. The Events described in Chapters iii. -vi. of the Acts of the Apostles.

33. St. Stephen's Martyrdom (Acts vii.). Saul was then a young man, νεανίας (vii. 58). St. Philip's Missionary Journey (Acts viii. 5—40).

St. Peter and St. John at Samaria. Simon Magus (Acts viii. 14-24).

34. Saul's Conversion (Acts ix. 1-25): cp. Euseb. H. E. ii. 1; and see note below on 1 Tim i. 13.

Saul retires to Arabia (Gal. i. 17).

36. Pontius Pilate is recalled from his procuratorship in Judæa (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 2).

Damascus occupied by Aretas, who appoints an Ethnarch there.

37. 'After many days' (ix. 23), Saul escapes from Damascus.

Goes up to Jerusalem; where he remains fifteen days, and sees Peter and John (Gal. i. 18, 19. Acts ix. 26, 27); and

Disputes with the Grecians;

Saul is sent to Tarsus (ix. 30).

The Emperor Tiberius dies 16th March;

Caligula succeeds.

38-41. "Rest of the Churches" (Acts ix. 31).
St. Peter's Missionary Journey (ix. 32-43).
He tarries at Joppa many days (ix. 43).

Conversion of Cornelius (Acts x. 1—48).

41. The Emperor Caligula dies 24th January, and is succeeded by Claudius.

Euodius, first Bishop of Antioch (Euseb. Chron. ii. p. 269. Clinton, F. R. App. ii. p. 548).

The Disciples called Christians at Antioch (Acts xi. 26).

44. The Apostle St. James, the brother of John, is killed with the sword (Acts xii. 2), and St. Peter is imprisoned, by Herod Agrippa, before Easter (xii. 4). Peter is delivered; and Herod is smitten by an Angel, and dies at Cæsarea (xii. 23).

St. Peter retires from Jerusalem (xii. 17).

Saul and Barnabas, having been deputed by the Christians at Antioch (xi. 27—30) to bring supplies to the Brethren in Judæa, on account of the anticipation of the famine foretold by Agabus, which "came to pass in the reign of Claudius Cæsar" (xi. 28), i. e. after January, A.D. 41, return from Jerusalem to Antioch, with John Mark, who was connected with Peter (xii. 12), and with Barnabas. (See on xv. 39.)

Saul is henceforth called Paul. (See Acts xiii. 9.) St. Paul's "Visions and Revelations of the Lord" seem to have been vouchsafed to him about this time. (See on 2 Cor. xii. 2, 3.)

Their first Missionary Journey to Cyprus (Paphos), and Pisidia, and Perga in Pamphylia (xiii. 4—13), whence Mark returns to Jerusalem. They visit Antioch of Pisidia, Iconium, Lystra; come to Perga and Pamphylia, and thence return to the place of their ordination, Antioch; where they remain a considerable time with the disciples (Acts xiv. 26—28).

49. A controversy arises at Antioch concerning the obligation of the Ceremonial Law (xv. 1, 2).

Paul and Barnabas, and some others, are deputed to go from Antioch to Jerusalem, "to the Apostles and Elders," concerning this matter (xv. 2, 3).

A.D.

50, 51. Council of Jerusalem (xv. 6-29).

Paul and Barnabas return to Antioch; where they remain some time (xv. 35, 36).

St. Peter is rebuked by St. Paul (Gal. ii. 11-13).

The παροξυσμὸς (Acts xv. 39), and separation of Paul and Barnabas.

Paul takes Silas (xv. 40) on his second Missionary Journey, and afterwards Timothy also at Lystra (xvi. 1).

52-54. St. Paul passes through Phrygia and Galatia to Troas (xvi. 6. 8). Thence crosses over to Philippi (xvi. 12), and Thessalonica (xvii. 1), and Berœa (xvii. 10); thence to Athens (xvii. 15).

St. Paul comes to Corinth, where he spends a year and six months (xviii. 1. 11).

Aquila and Priscilla come to Corinth.

The two Epistles to the Thessalonians. See below the Introduction to those Epistles, p. 1, 2, and p. 25.

Epistle to the Galatians written probably about this time from Corinth. See below the Introduction to that Epistle, pp. 36-41.

St. Paul sets sail from Cenchreæ in the Spring for Ephesus, on his way to Jerusalem, for the feast, probably Pentecost (xviii. 18, 19).

The Emperor Claudius dies (13th October A.D. 57), and Nero succeeds.

After a short visit at Jerusalem (xviii. 21),

St. Paul returns by way of Antioch, where he spends some time (xviii. 22), and through Galatia and Phrygia, where he confirms all the disciples (xviii. 23), and by the upper regions of Asia Minor (xix. 1) to Ephesus; where he spends three years (xx. 31)—three months in the Synagogue, and two years in the School of Tyrannus (xix. 8—10).

57. First Epistle to the Corinthians. See below Introduction to that Epistle, pp. 75-77.

St. Paul, after three years' stay at Ephesus, quits it for Macedonia (xx. 1). Second Epistle to the Corinthians. See Introduction to that Epistle, p. 143.

Comes into Hellas; and spends three months there (xx. 3).

58. Epistle to the Romans, written at Corinth or Cenchreæ. See Introduction to it, p. 203. St. Paul returns to Macedonia in the Spring, and arrives at Philippi for Easter (xx. 6).

Passes over to Troas (xx. 6). Touches at Miletus, where he bids farewell to the Presbyters of Ephesus, and gives them an Apostolic charge (xx. 17); and Tyre (xxi. 3), and lands at Cæsarea (xxi. 8).

Comes to Jerusalem, after several years (xxiv. 17), for the Feast of Pentecost (xx. 16; xxi. 17).

St. Paul is arrested at Jerusalem in the Temple (xxi. 28).

Is conveyed to Cæsarea (xxiii. 23-33).

58-60. Remains two years in detention at Casarea (xxiv. 27).

Is sent by Festus, in the Autumn of A.D. 60, by sea toward Rome (xxvii. 1). Winters at Malta (xxviii. 11).

61. Spring: arrives at Rome.

62. Martyrdom of St. James the Bishop of Jerusalem, at the Passover.

62, 63. St. Paul is at Rome, where he writes the Epistles to the Ephesians, Colossians (see Introduction to Ephesians, p. 269), and to Philemon, in which he calls himself "Paul the aged" (Philem. 9. See above on A.D. 33), and that to the Philippians, at the close of his imprisonment A.D. 63.

Is detained at Rome for "two whole years," till the Spring of A.D. 63 (xxviii. 30); where the History of the "Acrs of the Apostles" concludes: cp. Euseb. ii. 22.

For a continuation of the Apostolic History, see the Chronological Tables prefixed to St. Paul's Epistles, and the Introduction to the Epistles to Timothy, pp. 416—424, and the Chronological Table prefixed to the General Epistles.

Inferences deducible from the preceding Chronological Synopsis and Table.

The consideration of the results represented above may suggest the following reflections:-

1. The Times and Numbers which are recited in Holy Scripture, and which serve as landmarks of Sacred History, seem to be regulated by certain laws.

For example, the periods of Forty Days and Forty Years recur frequently in Holy Scripture as Times of Probation. See Numb. xiv. 33; xxxii. 13. Ps. xcv. 10. Heb. iii. 9. 17, and Notes on Acts i. 3; vii. 23.

2. If the dates assigned in the above Table are correct, it appears, that (as Eusebius has observed, H. E. iii. 7) the period of penitential probation, which was allowed to the city of Jerusalem after the crucifixion of Christ, was Forty Years; i. e. from A.D. 30 to A.D. 70, when it was taken by the Romans, and the Temple was destroyed. This result being consistent with the general dealings of Divine Providence with His people, confirms the conclusion stated in the Table.

3. St. Luke's work is divided into two parts, viz.: 1. his Gospel. 2. the Acts of the Apostles.

If the dates specified above are correct, then the Ascension of Christ, with which St. Luke's Gospel ends, and the Book of the Acts begins, stands at the middle point between both; and each portion of St. Luke's work records the events of about Thirty-three Years.

4. It is related in Holy Scripture of King David, the type of Christ, that he reigned forty years; seven, or seven and a half, in Hebron, and thirty-three years in Jerusalem over all Israel and

Judah. (2 Sam. v. 4, 5. 1 Chron. xxix. 27.)

Perhaps these times may be typical of Christ's kingdom after His Ascension; at first limited to the literal Israel, and then, in the eighth year after the Ascension, extended, in the Conversion of Cornelius, to all nations.

David reigns forty years; and Solomon, the peaceful, also a type of Christ, succeeds; who builds the Temple, the figure of the Church.

In the fortieth year after the Ascension of Christ, the literal Temple was destroyed; but this destruction of the material fabric conduced to the construction of the spiritual; the demolition of the Temple was the building up of the Church. It weaned the hearts of the people of God from the earthly Jerusalem, and raised their eyes to the graces and glories of the heavenly, which is the Mother of us all. (Gal. iv. 26.) It promoted the union of Jew and Gentile in Christ and His Church;

Thus that period of forty years led to the peaceful settlement of the people of God under the divine Son of David, the true Solomon, the Prince of Peace.

5. The number seven generally introduces in Scripture a period of Rest after toil and affliction. See on Matt. i. 17; xxvii. 52. 62. Luke xxiii. 56.

In looking at the Chronological Table of the History of the Acts we find,

(1) The first seventh year, i. e. A.D. 37, marked by the "Rest of the Churches."

(2) The second, or fourteenth year (i. e. A.D. 44), distinguished by another rest, after the death of Herod Agrippa I. See Acts xii. 24.

(3) The Third septennium, A.D. 51, also distinguished by Rest after controversy, xv. 23-30;

xvi. 4, 5.

All these periods of seven are marked in the history by what may be called sabbatical sentences, expressive of Rest after labour and suffering. See ix. 31; xii. 24; xv. 31; xvi. 5.

Such analogies as these will appear more or less worthy of notice to the reader, in proportion as he is disposed to attach more or less importance to a subject which has received little consideration in modern times, viz. the significance of periods of time in Sacred History. In the present state of our knowledge in this respect, it would be rash to build any thing upon them as a foundation; but the observation of them, if otherwise deducible by reasoning, may be confirmatory of the results to which that reasoning leads; and may perhaps induce others to pursue the inquiry further; which, while it demands patience of investigation, and soberness of deliberation, and diffidence in stating its results, has enough to commend it to the thoughtful student of Scripture, in the records of Inspiration and in the testimony of Christian Antiquity, and will not be lightly set aside by any who desire to understand the "whole counsel of God."

Tischendorf. Lips. 1841. Two at Paris, 1842.

His first critical edition appeared at Leipzig, 1849: with copious Prolegomena.

His seventh Edition (1857—1859) is intended to present a complete conspectus of all the critical subsidia, as yet available, for the revision of the Text of the New Testament.

The following extracts from the prospectus are of importance, as indicating the present views of the learned Editor:—

"Auf Grund dieser dokumentlichen Vorarbeiten, wie sie wohl noch nie für eine Neutest. Ausgabe unternommen worden sind, wird zum ersten Male ein solcher kritischer Apparat dargeboten, der für alle aufgenommenen Lesarten, ohne Ausnahme die Zeugnisse für und wider enthält, so wie auch die Angabe aller anderen Lesarten, die in den griechischen Unzialhandschriften gefunden werden oder sonst irgend beachtenswerthe Auctorität für sich haben.

"Der Textconstituirung ist die grösse Sorgfalt und Gewissenhaftigkeit gewidmet worden. Fortgesetzte und immer tiefer eingehende Beobachtungen haben den Herausgeber zu mancher Aenderung der frühern Entscheidungen geführt; namentlich hat er die Bevorzung einiger unseren ältesten Zeugen aus triftigen Gründen beschränken zu müssen geglaubt.

"In diesem Betrachte gewährt die neueste Ausgabe eine gewiss willkommene Förderung kritischer Studien dadurch, dass sie sehr häufig eine Andeutung der Entscheidungsgründe über die einzelnen Lesarten enthält."

Alford. Lond. 1855-9. 4 vols. Bloomfield. Lond. 1855. 2 vols.

THE Title of this Book is Πράξεις 'Αποστόλων, literally Acts OF APOSTLES, and not, "the Acts of the Apostles," for it only proposes to give an account of some acts of some Apostles, as specimens of the rest;—see the Introduction to this Volume, p. 5, note; and on the design of the Book, see the Introduction,

CH. I. 1. τον μὲν πρῶτον λόγον] τον πρῶτον λόγον, the former story or account,—λόγον, as Herod. vi. 19, a history; a modest name for his Gospel. (Chrys.) πρῶτον for πρότερον, as Luke ii. 2, see note.

On μέν without δέ expressed, see Acts iii. 21; iv. 16; xxvii.

21; xxviii. 22. Winer, Gr. Gr. § 63, p. 508.

This expression πρῶτον λόγον is important for determining the time of the publication of the Gospels.

The Acts are carried down to A.D. 63. If they were written then (as seems probable), the Gospel of St. Luke, his πρῶτος If they were written λόγος, was written before A.D. 63.

The Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark, which are prior to St. Luke's, were published before that time.

It is probable that the Gospel of St. Luke was published before A.D. 54. See Introduction to his Gospel, pp. 163-170.

— περὶ πάντων] concerning all things. Not that St. Luke narrated them all (cp. John xxi. 25); but πᾶs is used in Scripture in a relative sense, i. e. for all those things which are "apta et congrua et officio sufficientia" (Aug. de Consens. Evang. iv. 8), requisite, convenient, and sufficient for the purpose in view. Acts xxi. 27. Eph. vi. 21.

Cp. πάντοτε προσεύχεσθαι, Luke xviii. 1; ήσαν διαπαντός èν τῷ lepῷ, Luke xxiv. 53.

— ήρξατο] began. By this word, as here used, and at v. 22, as well as by the word Θεόφιλε, St. Luke connects his δεύτερον λόγον, or Acts of the Apostles, with his πρώτος λόγος (the Gospel); see on Luke iii. 23, where he had used the word ἀρχόμενος to describe the beginning of Christ's ministerial career.

Besides, the word ήρξατο Ἰησοῦς, Jesus began, as here used has a deeper sense;

St. Luke intimates by it, that our Lord's Ministry on earth was the ἀρχή, or beginning of His Mediatorial Kingdom; and that this Kingdom, so begun, received a fresh accession of majesty at His Ascension into heaven, and at His Session at the Right Hand of God; and that its sway is now exercised in the protection of His Church, and in the Government of the World, and that it will be continued till He appears again in glory, when all His enemies will be put under His feet; and then the Kingdom, which was begun at His Baptism, will be consummated, by the complete subjugation of Satan and of Death, and by the full and final triumph of Christ; and "God will be all in all." 1 Cor. xv. 28.

In the Gospels, the Holy Spirit has described the beginnings of that Kingdom as inaugurated by Christ on earth.

In the Acts, He describes the continuance and extension of that Kingdom through the power of Christ exalted and glorified in heaven. Cp. Olshausen, p. 348, Alford, p. 1, Baumgarten, i. 11—15, and below, note on x. 11, on the word ἀρχαὶ as applied to the Gospels; and the Introduction to this book.

2. ἐντειλάμενος τ. à. διὰ Πνεύματος άγίου] having given charge to His Apostles by the Holy Spirit (Chrys., Theophylact, Valck.), when He breathed on them and said, λάβετε Πνεῦμα άγιον, John xx. 22, and so gave them an earnest of the gift of Pentecost. Cp. Heb. ix. 14, διὰ Πνεύματος αἰωνίου ξαυτόν προσήνεγκεν ἄμωμον τῷ Θεῷ, and below, xi. 28, and xxi. 4, ἔλεγον διά τοῦ Πνεύματος, and Winer, § 61, p. 491.

οθε έξελέξατο] whom He chose out of the world for Himself (John xv. 16), obscure and humble though they were, and whom He advanced to the high dignity of seeing His miracles and hearing His Words, and finally to be witnesses of His Resurrection and Ascension. Such was His love and mercy to them.

3. ἐν πολλοῖς τεκμηρίοις] Matt, xxviii. 17. Mark xvi. 14. Luke xxiv. 13—50. John xx. 19. 1 Cor. xv. 5. 7.—τεκμήρια are called ἀναγκαῖα σημεῖα, irresistible proofs, by Aristotle, Rhet. 1; such as are incontrovertible (Quintil. v. 9); demonstrative evidences. See Wetst. and Hackett, p. 36.

- δι' ἡμερῶν τ.] through forty days. On the modern allegations against this statement, see note above on Luke xxiv. 50; and to the testimonies there cited may be added that of S. Ignatius, Frag. 8, ap. Mai, Script. Vett. vii. p. 22, εί γὰρ ήδεις δτι Θεοῦ υίδο ἦν, ἐγίνωσκες ὅτι τεσσαράκοντα ἡμέρας ἀνενδεὲς ποιήσας τὸ φθαρτὸν σῶμα.

St. Luke does not say that our Lord continued visibly present with His disciples during forty days, but showed Himself at intervals, in the period of forty days; for He appeared to them from time to time, and then disappeared (Chrys.), proving to them His humanity by eating and drinking with them; yet weaning them, by vanishing suddenly, from dwelling on His corporal presence; and instructing them in His Divine power, and perpetual, though unseen, presence, by unexpected appearances among them, and disappearances from them. See above on John xx. 19.

The period of "Forty Days" seems to be marked in Holy Scripture as significant of probation before some great Event. Examples may be seen in the History of the Flood, Gen. vii. 4. (See Aug. Serm. de Ascens. 264.) Moses in the Mount before the giving of the Law, Exod. xxiv. 18; xxxiv. 28. Deut. ix. 9; x. 10 (see Blunt, Lectures, p. 12); the time of the spies in searching the Land, Numb. xiii. 25; xiv. 34; the time of Elias before coming to Horeb, 1 Kings xix. 8; the time of probation for Nineveh, Jonah iii. 4.

Compare the same period of Forty Days before our Lord's Presentation in the Temple (Luke ii. 22), and of His Fasting before He entered on His Ministry (Matt. iv. 2, where see note).

As He was forty days after His Birth before He was presented in the Temple in the earthly Jerusalem, and again forty days after His Baptism, before He entered on His Ministry, so now He waits forty days after His Birth from the Grave, before

He presents Himself in the Temple of the heavenly Jerusalem, and enters on His Priestly Ministry in the true Holy of Holies, where He "ever liveth to make intercession for us." Heb.

The Forty Days, a term of Probation, have also a preparatory reference to the Pentecost or Fiftieth, the Day of Forty years after this (a year for a day, Numb. xiv. 34) Jerusalem was destroyed, because the people would not believe in Christ, who had so mightily declared Himself the Son of God by His Resurrection, which had been so plainly proved by so many proofs for Forty Days. (Lightfoot.)

On this text, see Barrow's Sermon 29, vol. v. pp. 39-63.

— ἀπτανόμενος] appearing, manifesting Himself. On the difference between ὅπτομαι and θεωρῶ, see on John xvi. 16.—ἀπτανόμενος (a frequentative verb connected with ὅπτομαι) means appearing suddenly, from time to time. Hesychius well explains the word by εμφανιζόμενος.

- λέγων τά] speaking the things. Observe the article τά, the things that were requisite for them to know and do concerning the Kingdom of God.

— περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τ. Θ.] concerning the Kingdom of God, or Christian Church (Matt. xiii. 11. 19. 24. 31. 33. Luke iv. 43; vi. 20; vii. 28; viii. 10), her Doctrines, Government, Trials, Hopes, and future Consummation. See Professor Blunt's Lectures "on the History of the Church during the first three Centuries," pp. 12-16.

4. συναλιζόμενος] associated, and assembling together with, = συναχθείς συναθροισθείς (Hesych.), so used by Xenophon, Cyrop. i. 4. 14. Anab. vii. 3. 48. Joseph. Ant. viii. 4. 1; xix. 7. 4. Cp. Bp. Pearson in Ignat. ad Magnes. 10, and Valck.

— ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων] The form Ἱεροσόλυμα is used about twenty times in the Acts, but never except after a preposition; in all other cases we have Ἱερουσαλήμ.

The same peculiarity is found in St. Luke's Gospel.

— μη χωρίζεσθαι] not to depart from Jerusalem: as they would otherwise have been disposed to do. But they were to remain there, in order to receive the Holy Ghost together in one and the same place; and in order that the miracle of the descent of the Holy Ghost upon them might be more striking and convincing as wrought in the capital of Judea, and at the next great Festival after the Crucifixion, viz. at the Festival of Pentecost, when strangers from all parts of the world would be gathered to Jerusalem, and would carry back the tidings of that manifestation into all lands; and also that the Christian Law might go forth from Mount Sion (Isa. ii. 3. Micah iv. 2), and so show its harmony with the Levitical Dispensation.

It is recorded on ancient authority, that our blessed Lord enjoined His Apostles to remain at Jerusalem for twelve years after the Ascension. See the passages cited by Bp. Pearson, in Acta, § xi. Routh, Rel. S. i. pp. 471. 484. Blunt, Lectures, pp. 43, 44. Cp. below, vi. 2; viii. 1.

It is probable that the Apostles made circuits in Palestine during that time, and did not quit the Holy Land till about

- την επαγγελίαν του Πατρός] the promise of the Father. Another expression connecting the Acts of the Apostles with the Gospel of St. Luke. See there, xxiv. 49, ίδου έγω ἀποστέλλω την έπαγγελίαν τοῦ Πατρός μου ἐφ' ὁμᾶς.

— ἡν ἡκούσατέ μου] which ye heard of Me. For a similar change of the oratio obliqua to recta, cp. Luke v. 14, and below, xvii. 3, and xxiii. 22, and see Winer, G. G. § 60, p. 482, and § 63, 2, p. 511.

5. όμεις δε βαπτισθήσεσθε εν Πνεύματι άγίφ] but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost. See below, xi. 16.

But were not the Disciples baptized before

It would seem that they were, and with Christ's Baptism (John iii. 22; iv. 2), and that Baptism differed from the Baptism of John; for John baptized unto repentance and faith in Christ to come (Acts xix. 4), and they who were baptized by John, were baptized afterwards into Christ (Acts xix. 5). But we do not hear that any which were baptized into Christ before the Ascension and day of Pentecost, were baptized again after it. What the Disciples received by Baptism with water into Christ before the day of Pentecost, is a question on which various opinions have been offered (see Aquinas, 3, p. 9. 66, art. 2, and 73, art. 5, and A Lapide here).

But this is clear, that whatever it was, it was consummated as it were by a χρίσις τελειωτική, in the full effusion of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost.

See further on Acts x. 47.

- οὐ μετὰ πολλάς ταύτας ἡμέρας] after not many days, and those days ταύτας, namely, dating from this present time. Cp. Winer, § 23, p. 146.

He says that the days are not many, that they may hope. but He does not say how few they are, in order that they may watch. (Chrys.)

6. Κύριε] O Lord. Jesus is often called in this book, written for Hellenists, by the name $K\acute{o}p\iota os$. And (as Valck. well observes) the word $K\acute{o}p\iota os$ in the LXX Version, read by the Hellenists, is used for Jehovah: "ut adeò parùm intersit (adds Valck.), utrum Jesus $K\acute{o}p\iota os$ dicatur an $\Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$." See below, on v. 21, and on xxv. 26.

— ἀποκαθιστάνεις τ. β.] The ordinary meaning of ἀποκαθ-ίστημι in the LXX and N. T. is to restore. In the LXX it is used for the Hebr. קשר reverti fecit, from root שום reverti, reducere. See Gen. xxix. 3; xl. 13. 21. Ps. xxxv. 17, and

So in the N. T. it often means restoration or return, Matt. xii. 13. Mark iii. 5; viii. 25. Luke vi. 10. Heb. xiii. 19. It seems to have this meaning here; but it signifies something more.

According to the Jewish expectation, the times of the Messiah would bring more than all the pristine glory to the City and Nation of the ancient people of God.

They looked for an amplification of the power and splendour of David and Solomon, in Christ. See the Hebrew authorities in Lightfoot here. Therefore it seems that the word ἀποκαθίστημι and ἀποκατάστασις, as used in this respect, imply something more than restitution; viz. a consummation of all that had, in their opinion, been promised by God to His people when redeemed and restored under the glorious reign of the Messiah. And this sense of the word appears clearly in iii. 21.

The question therefore addressed to our Lord is, Art Thou at this time intending fully to establish the Kingdom of the Messiah? καθιστάνω is stabilio, and the preposition ἀπὸ (as in ἀποδοῦναι, Matt. xxii. 21) intimates that what is established is, as it were, due, and to be paid as a debt. The temporal kingdom of the Messiah for which they looked, was, they supposed, promised in ancient Prophecy, and pledged to Israel by solemn stipulations σαι = τελειῶσαι, and cp. Mark ix. 12, and note below, iii. 21. The question of the Apostles appears to be mentioned here, in order to show how much they needed the grace of the Holy Ghost to enlighten their minds as to the true nature of Christ's Kingdom. They thought of temporal Sovereignty, but He spoke to them of the witness which they must give (v. 8), and by which the Kingdom was to be advanced. And that witness was a witness of suffering. Compare the similar conversation, Matt. xx. 21 - 23.

Hence ἀποκαθιστάναι is used by the LXX for to pay, Gen. xxiii. 16: cp. Job v. 18. See also Gloss. Hesych., ἀποκαταστῆ-

7. χρόνους η καιρούς] times or seasons. χρόνος = πολλών καιρών συνοχή, καιρός = μέρος χρόνου. (Thom. Mag.) Hence Sophocles, Elect. 1306, χρόνου καιρός. See below, I These. v. 1.

It is not for you to know the time which will elapse before My Kingdom will be established; nor the season in which it will be established.

- έως ἐσχάτου τῆς γῆς] Here is the clue to the design of Jerusalem to the ends of the earth. Observe the order of that progress, as here pre-arranged and foretold by Christ. First, Jerusalem, next all Judæa; next Samaria; lastly, the ends of the earth. A precept to the Christian Church to begin with missionary work at home, and thence to enlarge that work to foreign parts. Thus the mustard-seed of the Gospel, taking root in the soil, becomes a tree, and covers the earth.

9. ἐπήρθη] he was lifted up. Our Lord is said ἀναληφθῆναι (Mark xvi. 19. Acts i. 2. 11. 22. 1 Tim. iii. 16) and ἐπαρθῆναι here; and He is also said to go, as on a journey, $\pi o \rho \epsilon \theta \epsilon \sigma \theta a_i$, v. 10; and so St. Peter says (1 Pet. iii. 22), $\pi o \rho \epsilon v \theta \epsilon l s$ $\epsilon l s$ οὐρανόν. As His Resurrection is said to be God's act (Acts ii. 24. 32; iii. 26; xiii. 33, 34; xvii. 31), and yet His own act (John ii. 19; x. 18); so His Ascension (as Chrysostom observes) is called in Scripture an ανάβασις, as well as an ανάληψις, showing at once His Humanity and also His Divine power and Unity with the Father.

By His Ascension into Heaven, our Great High Priest fulfilled the type of the Levitical Law (Levit. xvi. 2), and entered with His own Blood, once for all, into the Holy of Holies, even Heaven itself, where He ever liveth to make intercession for us. Heb. ix. 12; vii. 25. By. Pearson, On the Creed, Art. vi.

- νεφέλη] a cloud. He did not vanish by degrees; but a cloud comes as a chariot to convey Him to Heaven. Ps. civ. 3. (Chrys.) And in like manner He will reappear at the last Day. Daniel vii. 10—13. Matt. xxiv. 30; xxvi. 64. Luke xxi. 27. Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. Rev. i. 7, ίδου έρχεται μετὰ νεφελών, behold He cometh with clouds. Accordingly 'the cloud' is the γνώρισμα of Christ in the Apocalypse. See Rev. x. I and xiv. 14-16.

- ὑπέλαβεν] a cloud received Him; as a horse receives its rider on its back. Cp. Psalm lxviii. 4. Observe ὁπό, beneath.

Cp. Herod. i. 24.

10. ἀτενίζοντες] 'intentis oculis, rectis:' "tendere oculos." Lucret. i. 67: "tendens lumina," Virg. En. ii. 405, one of the words used only by St. Luke (iv. 20; xxii. 56. Acts iii. 4, and eight other times in the Acts, iii. 12; vi. 15; vii. 55; x. 4; xi. 6; xiii. 9; xiv. 9; xxiii. 1) and by St. Paul (2 Cor. iii. 7. 13).

One of the numerous evidences from diction, of identity of St. Luke with the Author of the Acts, and of his connexion with

On the origin of the word areviçue, to gaze intently, see Valck. here, who says, "ἀτενης significat paldè tendens, nervos tendens, valdè intentus. Euripides (in Alcmæon. ap. πορευομένου αὐτοῦ] as He was going up, in the cloud; as in a chariot of triumph to His heavenly city. Cp. Psalm civ. 3.
 - ἰδοὺ ἄνδρες δύο παρειστήκεισαν] behold, two men were standing near them, while the Apostles were gazing up to heaven. The look and the tense of the verb mark the suddenness of the appearance of the Angels.

He calls them ανδρες, men, as Luke xxiv. 4, ανδρες δύο, which he explains in v. 23 to be Angels (cp. also x. 3 with x. 30); so that there is no ground in this word for the allegation of some modern writers, that St. Luke does not mean to affirm that these two ἄνδρεs were angels. And these two men announce Christ's reception into heaven, and declare that He will come again from heaven in like manner.

But why did not the Holy Spirit call them Angels? Because their message showed them so to be, and because they appeared as $\check{a}\nu\check{\delta}\rho\epsilon s$. Observe also they address the Apostles as άνδρες, - άνδρες Γαλιλαίοι, -and thus remind them and us, of the dignity to which our human nature is raised by the Ascension of the Man Christ Jesus, and of our own nearness to Angels, and of the glorious hope to which we men—even though we be obscure Galilæans—are thus advanced, of being equal to the Angels (ἰσάγγελοι) in the world to come. (Luke xx. 36.) The name of the Angel Gabriel, who is specially employed on embassies concerning the Incarnation,—or union of the Manhood to God,—is equivalent to arho Ocov, man of God. See on Luke

Serm. 265, on the Ascension,—a festival observed in his time on the fortieth day after the Resurrection: see ibid. This Festival is reckoned by Augustine (Epist. ad Januar. 54) as one of universal observation; and as dating perhaps "ab ipsis Apostolis."

Lightfoot, i. p. 740, and ii. p. 637.) The distance is not very clearly determined, on account of the difference of the measure of the cubit. Lightfoot and De Dieu reckon it at about five stadia; Reland, Pal. i. 52, at six. See Williams, Holy City, p. 371.

Chrysostom's remark here, δοκεῖ μοι ἐν σαββάτω γεγονέναι ταῦτα, is only put forth as a private conjecture. But Bengel well says (p. 489), "Colligit hine Chrysostomus die Sabbati eos reversos esse in urbem. Malim statuere proprium in toto Oliveti Monte Ascensionis locum hâc ab urbe distantiâ notari." See next Note concerning the place of the Ascension.

St. Luke says that our Lord led out His disciples from Jerusalem, εως είς Βηθανίαν, as far as Bethany (xxiv. 50), and blessed them, and ascended into heaven.

The village of Bethany was about fifteen furlongs from Jerusalem (John xi. 18), or about twice a Sabbath-day's journey (see on v. 12).

The village of Bethany was also on the eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, which was reckoned as five or six furlongs from Jerusalem. (Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. 6. B. J. v. 2. 3.)

Hence it has been inferred by some persons, that our Lord did not ascend from the summit of the Mount of Olives, but from the eastern slope of it. See note on Luke xxiv. 50.

But this opinion, which has been strongly affirmed by Dr. Robinson (Palest. i. 375), may be questioned; and it is more probable that the Ascension took place either at the summit of Mount Olivet or near that point. See Williams, Holy City, pt. ii.

The passage in the Acts (i. 12) being written by St. Luke after the passage in his Gospel (xxiv. 50), ought to be taken to 13 " Καὶ ότε εἰσῆλθον, ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ ὑπερώον, οὖ ἦσαν καταμένοντες ὅ τε n ch. 9. 39. & 20. 8. Matt. 10. 2-4. Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης καὶ Ἰάκωβος καὶ ἀνδρέας, Φίλιππος καὶ Θωμας, Βαρθο-Luke 6. 15.

explain and complete it; and not vice versa; i. e. the mention of the Mount of Olives is designed to be supplementary to the reference to Bethany, and to interpret it.

The term Bethany, as Lightfoot has shown (i. 252; ii. 485), is often used to describe the district of that village; which stretched toward Jerusalem, and touched the suburb called Bethphage, which extended eastward from Jerusalem to a distance of about 2000 cubits, or six furlongs, or a Sabbath-day's journey, on the Mount of Olives. (See Lightfoot, i. 252.)

When, therefore, St. Luke says that our Lord led His disciples out as far as Bethany, he means that He led them to its point of contact with Bethphage on the Mount of Olives.

This opinion, which has been well illustrated by Lightfoot, is confirmed by what Dr. Robinson himself calls (i. 375) one of the "earliest traditions of Palestine, and which points out the place of our Lord's Ascension on the summit of the Mount of Olives."

Lightfoot says (i. 252), "The Jews' Chorography will here They tell us, two thousand cubits was the suburbs of help us. They tell us, two thousand cuous was the said cubits a city (Maym. in Schabb. per. 27); and two thousand cubits a city (Maym. in Schabb. per. 27); an the bounds of a Sabbath, or a Sabbath-day's journey.

(Talm. in Sotah, per. 5.)

"Belhphage was of this nature; it was not a town upon Mount Olivet, as it hath been very generally supposed, and accordingly placed in most maps; but it was that space of ground that lay from Jerusalem wall forward towards Mount Olivet, and up Mount Olivet to the extent of two thousand cubits from the wall, or thereabout; and hereupon it was reputed by the Jews of the same qualification with Jerusalem, as a part of it, in divers respects. Talm. Bab. Pesachin. fol. 63, fac. 2, 'He that slays a thanksgiving sacrifice within, while the bread belonging to it is without the wall, the bread is not holy. What means without the wall?' R. Tochanan saith, 'without the wall of Bethphage.' And the same gloss useth the very same words again upon the same Tract, fol. 91, fac. 1. And again in the same Treatise, fol. 95, fac. 2, the Mishna saith thus: 'The two loaves and the shewbread are allowable in the Temple court, and they are allowable in Bethphage.' Nay, the Gloss in Sanhedr. fol. 14, fac. 1, saith, 'Bethphage was a place which was accounted as Jerusalem for all things.' So that the place called Bethphage began from Jerusalem, and went onwards to and upon Mount Olivet, for the space of a Sabbath-day's journey, or thereabout; and then began the coast that was called Bethany. hence it is that Luke saith that Christ, when He ascended into heaven, led forth His disciples as far as Bethany (Luke xxiv. 50), which elsewhere he showeth was the space of a Sabbath-day's journey (Acts i. 12), which cannot be understood of the town Bethany; for that was fifteen furlongs (John xi. 18), or very near two Sabbath-days' journey from Jerusalem; but that He led them over that space of ground which was called Bethphage, to that part of Olivet where it began to be called Bethany, and at that place it was where Christ began His triumphant riding into the city."

The tradition that Christ ascended from the summit of the hill Olivet, is mentioned by Eusebius, Bishop of Casarea in Palestine, in his Demon. Evang. vi. 18, written about A.D. 315. Referring to the prophecy (Zech. xiv. 4, "His feet shall stand upon the Mount of Olives"), he says, "The feet of our Lord and Saviour -the Logos, or Word, Himself-by means of the Tabernacle of Humanity which He hath exalted (i. e. in His human Flesh), stood on the Mount of Olives, near the grotto there shown at this day; after that He had prayed, and had delivered to His disciples the Mysteries concerning the consummation of all things, on the summit of the Mount of Olives; whence He made His ascent into heaven." It is also corroborated by S. Cyril writing at Jerusalem in the fourth century, and Bishop of that city. See on Luke xxiv. 50. So Cassiodor. p. 159.

In pictures of the Ascension, the prints of our Lord's feet are often represented, impressed on the soil of the Mount of Olives.

This tradition is sometimes traced to S. Jerome, and he is quoted as saying (de locis Hebraicis, in Acta, in v. Olivetum), "Ultima vestigia Domini humi impressa hodie cernuntur." This Treatise is not by S. Jerome (he himself is cited in it v. Smyrna); but it is not without its use, as representing the local opinion.

It has indeed been alleged as an objection, that on this supposition the Ascension would have been in sight of Jerusalem.

But this opinion seems to be grounded on a misconception of the nature of our Lord's personal appearances after His resurrection.

When He walked on the public road to Emmaus, He was not recognized even by the two disciples for some time (Luke xxiv. 16). And He Who appeared suddenly on several occasions to the disciples in the city of Jerusalem (John xx. 19. 26), and on the sea-shore in Galilee (xxi. 1), and to more than five hundred brethren at once (1 Cor. xv. 6), so ordered His disappearance at His Ascension, that He made it manifest, " not to all the people, but to witnesses chosen before of God, even to those who did eat and drink with Him after He rose from the dead." (Acts x. 41.)

This opinion that our Lord ascended from the Mount of Olives, at a distance of about six furlongs from Jerusalem, sheds light on other passages of Scripture, and is fraught with spiritual instruction.

David, the type of Christ, wept as he went up the Mount of Olives, when he was rejected and resisted by his own people (2 Sam. xv. 30-32.)

On the Mount of Olives Christ, the Son of David, had wept

over Jerusalem. (Luke xix. 41.)

When David came to the top of the Mount of Olives, he worshipped, and sent his friend, Hushai the Archite, back to the city of Jerusalem (2 Sam. xv. 32-37), and Hushai's counsel prevailed over that of Ahitophel, the type of Judas. (2 Sam. xvii. 1-23.)

May there not be here some typical reference to the parting of our Lord from His faithful Apostles in this place?

Dr. Lightfoot says (ii. p. 486), "That place of Mount Olivet, where Christ ascended (viz. that part of the mount where Bethphage ended and Bethany began), was perhaps the very same place mentioned 2 Sam. xv. 32, or certainly not far off, where David in his flight taking leave of the Ark and Sanctuary, looked back and worshipped God; where, if any one would be at the pains to inquire why the Greek interpreters retain the word 'Pès, Ros, both here and in ch. xvi. 1, ἢν Δαβίδ ἐρχόμενος ἔως τοῦ 'Pès, and David came unto Ros: and Δαβίδ παρῆλθεν βραχύ τι ἀπὸ τοῦ 'Pòs, and David passed on a little way from Ros, he will find a knot not easy to be untied."

So Lightfoot. But is not the word 'Pas of the LXX in those passages, the same as the Hebrew word used in both these places, rosh, the head, or summit of the Mount (of Olives)? And was not the summit so called in the popular language? And if so, then this circumstance seems to increase the probability that our Lord ascended from the summit of that mount. Again, on the Mount of Olives Christ had predicted the future destruction of Jerusalem (Matt. xxiv. 3), and His own second coming to Judgment (xxiv. 30).

What more suitable than that the scene of suffering should also be the scene of glory purchased by suffering?

What more proper, than that He should ascend in that place, where He had pre-announced His future descent in glory?

The Angels themselves seem to refer to this fitness of place in their address to the Apostles (Acts i. 11), "This same Jesus shall so come, as ye have seen Him go;" and it is worthy of remark, that the voice of Ancient Prophecy points to some future manifestation of the Messiah's glory on the Mount of Olives.

(Zech. xiv. 4. Ezek. xi. 23.)
Again; it was from the border of Bethany, and its point of contact with Bethphage on the Mount of Olives (see on Mark xi. 1), that our Lord had begun to ride in triumph, as King and Saviour, into the City of Jerusalem. That triumphal entry seems to have been typical and prophetical. It is an appropriate and beautiful circumstance, that, at that point in the Mount of Olives where He began His triumphal entry into the earthly city, He also began His triumphal journey to the Jerusalem that is above, as King and Saviour of the World, riding on the clouds of heaven.

Hence also we may perhaps recognize the reason why the remarkable term "a Sabbath-day's journey" is used here to describe the distance which the Apostles walked, from what is here specified as the place of the Ascension.

This is the only passage in the New Testament where "a Sabbath-day's journey" is mentioned at all; and it seems surprising at first, that it should be mentioned by St. Luke writing for Gentiles, and should be specified in reference to an event posterior to the Resurrection, when the Jewish seventh-day Sabbath had ceased to be obligatory.

There surely must be therefore some inner meaning in this expression, "a Sabbath-day's journey," used in connexion with that glorious event, the consummation of Christ's earthly ministry, His Ascension into heaven. What can that be?

The Sabbath was a type of that rest, which, after their week of this world's work, remaineth to the people of God, in that place of repose where they rest from their labours (Heb. iv. 9. Rev. xiv. 13), and whence they will pass, by a joyful Resurrection and Ascension, to the heavenly city of the great King.

The return of the Apostles with joy by a Sabbath-day's journey to the earthly Jerusalem from the place of Ascension, whence their Saviour mounted in glory to the heavenly Jerusalem, may be designed to suggest the cheering assurance, that they who contemplate on earth the Ascension of the Lord, and stand looking up stedfastly into heaven, and ascend in heart and mind with Him Who is the Prince of Peace, and continually dwell in spirit with Him there, will pass by a Sabbath-day's journey through the grave and gate of death into the Jerusalem -or City of Peace—that is above, and there enjoy the beatific vision of eternal peace. "Qui gloriam Domini ad Patrem ascendentis intus intueri merebitur, hic Sabbati itinere urbem perpetuæ pacis ingreditur." (Bede.)

13. το ὑπερφον] sc. οἴκημα. ὑπερφον is properly an adjective (Valck.); not an upper room, but the upper room, אַלָּקָה (Vitinga, de Synag. p. 145, and Lightfoot here, p. 638). The definite article points to some place already used as the resort of the Apostles, οδ ήσαν καταμένοντες, as is said here. Ancient authorities assert that this was no other than the large ανώγεον or upper room (see on Mark xiv. 15), in which our Blessed Lord had celebrated the last Passover, and had instituted the first Eucharist, and where He had appeared on the two successive Sundays after His Resurrection from the dead.

Here it would seem the Apostles were afterwards assembled when the Holy Ghost descended upon them. S. Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem, affirms (Catech. xvi.) that τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἄγιον κατηλθεν ἐνταῦθα ἐν τῆ Ἱερουσαλημ, and that this Upper Room was afterwards called ἡ ἀνωτέρα τῶν ἀποστόλων ἐκκλησία. Cp. S. Jerome, Epist. 86, Ep. Paulæ, and Bede, De locis sanctis, c. 3. Cave, Primitive Christianity, i. 6. Hither the Apostles resorted for prayers, and for the Holy Communion. See note below on Acts ii. 2. 46; v. 42. And so says Bp. Pearson here, "Ibi Ecclesia videtur esse constituta. Nam, ut narrat Epiphanius, lib. de Pond. c. 14, cum Adrianus imperator Hierosolyma adiret, invenit urbem totam funditus eversam, et templum Dei dirutum, παρεκτὸς δλίγων οἰκημάτων, καὶ τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησίας, μικρᾶς οὕσης, quam ibi collocatam asserit, ubi discipuli reversi, cum Salvator ascendit à Monte Oliveti, ἀνέβησαν εἶς τὸ ὁπερῷον. Ἐκεῖ γὰρ ἀκοδόμητο, τουτέστιν ἐν τῷ μέρει Σιών. Nicephorus etiam tradit, Helenam Constantini matrem amplissimum in Sione templum erexisse; in cujus postico domum circumclusit, ubi facta est ή τοῦ ἀγίου Πνεύματος κάθοδος ἐν τῷ ὑπερώφ, lib. viii. c. 30."

Therefore this "upper room" on Mount Sion at Jerusalem was the first Church in the world,-the primitive Church of Christendom.

There is one God, and in this one Godhead there is one Father, one Son, and one Holy Ghost; and there is one Church of God from the beginning to the end of the world. Perhaps the continuous unity of the Church was marked by the fact, that the same upper room which had seen the celebration of the last Passover, saw also the administration of the first Eucharist by Christ. And perhaps this unity was displayed further when this same upper room saw the first appearance of the Son of God to His assembled Apostles after His Resurrection on the First Lord's Day; and when this upper room, to which they resorted for prayer to God the Father (see Acts iv. 23, 24), saw also the descent of God the Holy Ghost upon them. See below, ii. 46.

- 'Iwavvns] John. So A, B, C, D. Elz. places James before John. In the three Lists of the Apostles (Matt. x. 2. Mark iii. 16. Luke vi. 14) before the Ascension, James comes before John, and in the two former of them, Andrew comes next to Peter. In the three Lists in the Gospels, Bartholomew comes before Thomas: in both of St. Luke's lists, Simon Zelotes comes before Jude. The only names which occupy the same places in all are,

1. Peter.

5. Philip.

9. James, the son of Alphæus, probably the same as the Lord's Brother. See next note.

— 'Ιάκωβος 'Αλφαίου] James the son of Alphans. It has been inferred by some, that this St. James, the Apostle, was not the 'Lord's brother,' because it is added here that the brethren of the Lord (v. 14) were also present. But James might well be distinguished from the other brethren of the Lord, as Mary is from the other yuvaîkes here, and as Joseph is from the other Patriarchs in vii. 9, and as Peter is from the other Apostles in 1 Cor. ix. 5. See below on xii. 17, and the Introduction to the Epistle of St. James; and the article on St. James in Dr. Wm. Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, 1860.

12. Judas, succeeded by Matthias.

— Σίμων δ Ζηλωτήs] Simon Zelotes. See Matt. x. 4. He is called the Cananite by St. Matthew and St. Mark iii. 18, but Zelotes (the Greek synonym of Cananite) by St. Luke vi. 15, as here; a mark of connexion between the Author of St. Luke's Gospel and the Acts.

This mention of Simon, thus placed between James and Jude, the brother of James, confirms the opinion of some ancient writers, that Simon Zelotes, or the Cananite, was the same as the Simon who is mentioned as one of "the brethren of our Lord" ("James, Simon, and Jude") in Matt. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3; and therefore that Simon Zelotes is no other than Symeon (which is the same name as Simon, see below, xv. 14. 2 Pet. i. 1), who succeeded his brother James, "the Lord's brother," in the Episcopal See of Jerusalem. See Euseb. (iii. 11, cp. iii. 22), who says that after the death of St. James, the survivors of the Apostles and disciples at Jerusalem met together, and unanimously chose Symeon, the son of Clopas, to be the successor of St. James; this Symeon being a cousin of the Lord (cp. Euseb. iv. 22); for Hegesippus testifies that Clopas, his father, was brother of Joseph. Cp. Euseb. iv. 22, where Clopas is called by $Hegesippus\ \theta \epsilon \hat{o}os$ of Christ. In another place Eusebius (iii. 32) designates this Symeon as a son of the Mary described in the Gospel as wife of Clopas, and asserts that this Symeon, the second Bishop of Jerusalem, suffered martyrdom under Trajan, at the age of 120. Hegesippus also states that several persons of this family were chosen to preside over Churches, on the ground of their relationship to Christ. (Euseb. iii. 20.)

 - Ἰούδας Ἰακώβον] Jude, brother of James: cp. Luke vi.
 16. Jude 1. Examples of this ellipsis of ἀδελφός, or brother, from profane writers, may be seen in Valck. and Kuin. Cp.

Winer, G. G. p. 171.

Doubtless the words 'Ιούδας 'Ιακώβου might mean Jude, son of James; but it is not probable that James would have had a son old enough to be an Apostle; and the context must determine how the ellipse is to be supplied; and probably when St. Luke published the Acts, most Christians knew what the relationship between James and Jude was. See below, the Introduction to St. Jude's Epistle.

14. προσκαρτερούντες One of the words often repeated in the Acts in relation to Church communion, and declaring its duties and privileges. Here the duty prescribed is perseverance and stedfastness in Christian faith and worship. See ii. 42. 46; vi. 4.

Cp. Rom. xii. 12.

- δμοθυμαδόν] With one heart and soul. The Holy Spirit writing by St. Luke, is constantly inculcating this word in this history of the Primitive Church. He applies it to the Apostles here; to the 120 (ii. 1), to the whole body of believers (ii. 46). Cp. iv. 24; v. 12; xv. 25, and Rom. xv. 6.

He thus reminds all future generations, that maintenance of Unity of Pastors among themselves, and of Pastors and People, is the duty of each and all, and is the characteristic of the Church. It was a fruit of Christ's doctrine (John xv. 12) and prayer (xvii. 21), and of His legacy (xiv. 27), and of His breathing upon them (xx. 22), and was matured by the descent of the Holy Ghost.

On έπλ τὸ αὐτὸ, see v. 15.

 - τῦ προσευχῦ] Elz. adds, καὶ τῷ δεήσει, which is not in A, B, C, D, E, H, nor in the Vulgate, Syriac, and other Versions.
 Another note of connexion with St. Luke's Gospel. See on Luke v. 16.

- σὺν γυναιξί] with the women. A remarkable notice; in the Jewish Temple, the Women were not admitted to worship God together with men, but were parted off into a separate court (Joseph. Ant. xv. 11. 5), "the Court of the Women;" and in the Synagogues also the women were separated from the men (Philo, ii. 476). But in Christ Jesus, Who is the Woman's Seed, "there is neither male nor female" (Gal. iii. 28), and the wall of separation is broken down. The women here assembled with the disciples, were probably Mary Magdalene, Salome, Joanna, and Susanna, and others mentioned in Luke viii. 2, 3; xxiii. 49. 55;

— Mapla Mary. "Propter excellentiam distinguitur à cæteris." (Valck.) In the Gospels the blessed Virgin Mary is not mentioned as accompanying Christ from place to place with His p Ps. 41, 10. John 13, 18, & 18, 3.

Apostles; and this is the last place where her name occurs in Holy Scripture.

The Holy Spirit takes leave of her here, associated with the Apostolic company of worshippers in the Upper Room at Jerusalem. She is one of those who there continue stedfast in prayer. How unlike the spirit and language of the Holy Ghost is that will-worship, which takes her out of that holy fellowship of prayer, and makes her an object of adoration!

In recent times the blessed Virgin is often represented in Paintings as present at the Ascension; but Arator, writing at Rome in the sixth century, in his poetical Version of the Acts, addressed to Pope Vigilius, speaks of her as waiting at Jerusalem for the return of the Apostles from the Mount of Olives, v. 55:

> " Moenia nota petunt, qua tunc statione sedebat Porta Maria Dei, Genetrix intacta Creantis A Nato formata suo."

15. ἀδελφῶν] So A, B, C. Elz. μαθητῶν.

— ὁνομάτων] names. A Hebraism for persons. Vorst. de Hebr. p. 350. Cp. Rev. ii. 13; iii. 4, and Wetst. here. But it may have a deeper Christian sense: see on iv. 36.

έπι το αὐτό] together; at the same place and time. A favourite expression with the Author of the Acts, and like δμοθυμαδον, a note of Church-unity (see v. 14), a watchword of the Church, and of every faithful member of it. See below, ii. 1, δμοθυμαδον έπὶ τὸ αὐτό. ii. 44, ἦσαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό. Cp. on ii. 47. Hence Ignat. ad Magnes. 7, ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό μία προσευχὴ, μία δέησις, εἶs νοῦς, μία ἐλπὶς, ἐν ἀγάπη. Clemens Romanus, i. 34, ἡμεῖς έν δμονοία έπι το αυτό συναχθέντες.

16. ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί] On this speech, see S. Iren. iii. 12.

17. 3τι] because He was their δδηγόs, or leader; because being one of us "he knew the place" (John xviii. 2) where, and the time when, He might be taken; and because it had been prophesied that one of His familiar friends should betray Christ. Ps. xli. 9.

 - ἐν ἡμῶν] Elz. has σὸν ἡμῶν. But ἐν is in A, B, C, D, E, H, and in Vulg., Syriac, and other Versions, and is more expressive. He was not only numbered with us, but in us, i. e. in our Apostolic body.

- ξλαχε τὸν κλῆρον] He calls it a lot (see below, v. 26), because it was not by their own desert, but by God's grace that they were called to their office. (Chrys.) Hence the word Clerus, or Clergy. See Vales. in Euseb. vi. 43.

The Acts of the Apostles, if we may so speak, prepared a Christian Onomasticon, or Vocabulary for the Church, e. g. in its use of the words έπισκοπή, v. 20, πρεσβύτεροι, χριστιανοί, and

18. ἐκτήσατο] he was the moving cause of the purchase (see Gregor. Moral. i. c. 9). It has been alleged by some recent Expositors, that this statement is at variance with Matt. xxvii. -8, where it is said that the Chief Priests purchased the field with thirty pieces of silver; and that St. Luke could not have been acquainted with St. Matthew's Gospel, or he would not have inserted this statement. But the fact is, that St. Luke's assertion is in harmony with St. Matthew's, and is supplementary to it.

The Holy Spirit in Scripture is wont to trace human actions to their first causes; and to treat the principal agents as accountable for the whole transaction, though done, as Scripture itself records, by the instrumentality of others.

This is what might be expected in divine history; and there is a solemn moral lesson in it.

Thus in this book the Jews are four times said to have crucifled Jesus (Acts ii. 23 and 36, and iv. 10 and v. 30), though they could not put any one to death (John xviii. 31); but they are said to have crucified Him, because they used the instrumentality of Pilate for that purpose. Thus Pilate is said to have scourged Jesus (John xix. 1), and Joseph to have hewn a tomb (Matt. xxvii. 60), and Christ to have baptized disciples (John iv. I), though they only caused these things to be done. also (vii. 9) the Patriarchs are said to have sold Joseph into Egypt, though they had no intention that he should go there. Thus the Jews are even said to have laid Christ in the tomb heathen power, at their instance.

If such modes of speech as these—and others that could be adduced-are considered, it will hardly be denied, that Judas. who received the thirty pieces of silver, and who returned them to the Chief Priests, and, as it were, forced them upon them by throwing them down in the Temple (Matt. xxvii. 5), was the cause and prime mover of the purchase of the field, which was bought with that sum; and that he may be said to have been its purchaser.

It cannot be rightly argued, that there is a discrepancy here between the two Evangelists, and that one of them is in error; and that St. Luke was not acquainted with St. Matthew's statement, because he does not repeat it. It might as well be inferred, that St. Luke, or the Apostles, or those whose speeches he is recording, were not acquainted with the facts of the Crucifixion itself, because we read in the Acts that the Jews crucified Jesus, and laid Him in a tomb; or that St. Luke in writing the Acts did not remember what he himself had said in his "former treatise," his Gospel, because he does not repeat his own words concerning the same events, but adds some new incidents to his narrative: e. g. with regard to the Ascension.

Rather, he thus shows the independence of his own testi-

It may also be conjectured with probability, that Judas might in other respects be regarded as the purchaser of the field:

For, it is evident from St. Matthew's account (xxvii. 5), that as soon as he had cast down the thirty pieces in the Temple he went and hanged himself;

It appears also from St. Peter's speech here (Acts i. 19), that the field was the place of his death: see on v. 19; And the Field was purchased after his death (Matt. xxvii. 6).

It is remarkable, that a field in the neighbourhood of a great City, which was to serve as a Public Cemetery, should have been purchaseable for so small a sum as thirty pieces of silver, or shekels, i. e. for less than five pounds;

How is this to be explained? Probably from the circumstance intimated by St. Peter, that it had been polluted by the horrible death of Judas; whence it was called Aceldama; and that it was regarded with a feeling of execration on that account. Hence also it was, that when purchased for this paltry sum, it was applied to an unclean use, i. e. to be a burial-place; a burialplace for Eévoi, strangers, heathers, unclean persons, whom the Jews would not admit into their cemeteries.

It might well be said then, that in this sense, by defiling it, Judas had been instrumental in the purchase of the field; he had made it unavailable for any other than an unclean use, and had rendered it purchaseable by the Chief Priests for the miserable sum of thirty pieces of silver, which he had received from them as the wages of iniquity, and had then thrown back in remorse into their hands.

See below, vii. 9; xiii. 29, and Whitby's note here; and above on Matt. viii. 5.

— ἐκ μισθοῦ] So A, B, C, D, E, H. Elz. τοῦ μισθοῦ.

- πρηνής γενόμενος] falling on his face, "pronus in faciem prolapsus. πρηνής, ἐπὶ πρόσωπον." (Hesych.) ἐπὶ στόματος. (Phavorin.)

Judas, the betrayer of Christ, was prefigured in the manner of his death, i.e. hanging, by Ahitophel the traitor, and Absalom the rebel against David. (Bede.)

 - ἐλάκησε μέσοs] he burst asunder in the midst; after he had hanged himself. St. Matthew says clearly (xxvii. δ), ἀπήγξατο, he hanged himself: the same word as is used by the Septuagint in 2 Sam. xvii. 23 to describe the death of Ahitophel. Ahitophel was a type of Judas in his nearness to David's person, in his treachery, and in his death. And the word used to describe Ahitophel's death by the LXX may serve to remove the sup-posed ambiguities with regard to the manner of the death of his antitype Judas. See on Matt. xxvii. 5, where Kuin. after Wetstein (p. 459) and Valck. (p. 324), well says, "Locus Matthæi

Cp. Cholin, f. 56 (ap. Wetstein), "Ara-mæus quidam vidit hominem qui de tecto in plateam decidit, et ruptus est ejus venter, et viscera ejus effluxerunt." Meyer says (p. 30) that St. Luke is at variance with St. Matthew, and "follows another tradition, according to which Judas did not destroy himself." Others (Strauss and Zeller), on the plea of this alleged discrepancy, deny the fact of his death altogether!

With this account in the speech of St. Peter compare the narrative of the death of Judas by Papias, the contemporary of the Apostles, and Bishop of Hierapolis, in the fragment preserved by Theophylact (pp. 16. 195. Œcumen. p. 11), and in Cramer's Catena, p. 12, where Apollinarius says, ούκ εναπέθανεν τῆ ἀγχονῆ Ἰούδας, ἀλλ' ἐπεβίω, καθαιρεθείς πρό τοῦ ἀποπνιγῆναι: and he then introduces the relation under the name of Papias (cp. Routh, R. S. i. p. 9), which explains St. Peter's words, πρηνής γενόμενος ελάκησε μέσος, by the πρησμός and δγκωσις of the body, and which states that Judas died in his own field, εν ίδιω

Chrys. (on v. 26) observes that this name was given by the Jews, by a providential dispensation from God: ωνόμασαν

This citation is from two Psalms, lxix. 25, cix. 8, and almost verbatim from the LXX Version used by the Hellenistic Jews, for whom, as well as for Gentile converts, St. Luke specially wrote, and has been well harmonized with the original Hebrew by Surenhusius, p. 383.

The only notable variation is advod for advadv.

This substitution of αὐτοῦ for αὐτῶν may be explained from St. Peter's own words, that Judas was leader to those who took Jesus, v. 16. In a word, 'Ιούδας, the false Apostle who betrayed his Master to death, stands forth as the representative of the faithless Ἰουδαῖοι. His end is a type of theirs. The same may be said of the word κληρος, clerus, as used here, vv. 17. 25, 26 (see note there), as a preparation for its application to the Ministers or Clergy of the Church.

We may observe here the purpose of Almighty God in having prepared a Greek Version, i. e. the LXX, made by Jews themselves, of the Old Testament Scriptures, for the use of the Apostles and Evangelists in adopting names for the regimen and officers of the Church, and in disseminating the Gospel throughout the world.

 — λαβέτω] So A, B, C, D. Elz. λάβοι.
 21. δ Κύριος 'Ιησοῦς] the Lord Jesus. This word Κύριος = Lord, Jehovah (see on v. 6 and ii. 36), applied to Christ, the Lord of the world, and Head of the Κυριακ'), or Church, ever regulating her affairs by His Spirit, and maintaining her cause by His Power from His Throne in heaven,—may be regarded as the Key-note to the History of the Acts of the Apostles.

He it is who chooses Matthias in place of Judas (i. 24). He sends the Holy Ghost to His Church (ii. 33-35). He adds believers to her daily (ii. 47). He works Miracles by the hands of His Apostles (iii. 6; iv. 10). To Him St. Stephen prays at the hour of death (vii. 59, 60). He calls Saul with a voice from heaven (ix. 5). He sends Ananias to baptize him (ix. 10. 15). He sends Peter to Cornelius (x. 4. 14. 36). His Angel delivers Peter and destroys Herod (xii. 7. 23). He calls Paul to Macedonia (xvi. 9, 10). He comforts Paul at Jerusalem (xxiii. 11). And, finally, the book closes with the declaration, that Paul preaches at Rome, the heathen capital of the world, "the things concerning the Lord Jesus" (xxviii. 31).

23. και έστησαν δύο] And they set out two, apart from the rest. Our Lord did not supply the place of Judas, when He was on earth, but left that place vacant at His Ascension, and to be supplied after it; and He did supply it from heaven, in answer to their prayer to Him as God. See vv. 24—26: "Show whom Thou hast chosen." "The lot was cast into the lap, but the disposing thereof was of the Lord." (Prov. xvi. 33.)

Thus He educated them in the fundamental doctrine of Church polity, viz. that the Church is ruled and protected by Him,—not visibly present in body, but sitting on His Royal Throne, in power and glory, at the right hand of God.

^{29.} Cp. lix. 11-15), imprecates on him, He imprecates on them; and the death of their leader is a warning to those who were led by him, what their destruction will be, unless they repent. In Judas the Holy Spirit sees the Jewish nation personified; and finally, Jerusalem herself, because she would not repent, became an Aceldama, or field of blood.

Clement of Rome (i. 5) to have gone, after his labours and martyrdom, είς του δφειλόμενον τόπον της δόξης. Cp. Polycarp ad Phil. 9, where he speaks of St. Paul and other Christian martyrs: ότι ουτοι πάντες ουκ είς κενον έδραμον, άλλ' εν πίστει καί δικαιοσύνη, και δτι εἰς τὸν ὀφειλόμενον αὐτοῖς τόπον εἰσὶ παρὰ τῷ Κυρίφ, ῷ και συνέπαθον. The Rabbinical writers interpret Numb. xxiv. 25 in a cognate sense: "Balaam ivit in locum suum, i. e. in gehennam. Targum Eccles. vi. 6, Die mortis suæ descendit anima ejus in gehennam, in locum unum, quo omnes peccatores abeunt." (Lightfoot, Hor. Hebr. et Talm. ad h. l., and Wetstein here.) And this, though it be perhaps an incorrect exposition, yet shows the meaning conveyed by the phrase to a Jewish ear.

The place of Judas was locus suus, a place of his own proper procurement; devils were not ordained of God for hell-fire, but hell-fire for them. Hooker, Appendix to bk. v. p. 571.

On this text see also Bp. Bull's two Sermons, proving that "the soul subsists after death in a place of abode prepared for it by God, till the Resurrection; and that this middle state of happiness or misery is allotted by God to every man immediately after death, according as he has done good or evil in this life." (Serm. ii. and iii. vol. i. pp. 23-82.)

Against the erroneous notions of a sleep of the soul, and of a purgatory, see above, on Luke xvi. 22.

26. Καὶ ἔδωκαν κλήρους] And they gave lots. For the Holy Spirit was not yet given. While this was so, they committed the matter to lot; but never resorted to it after the day of Pentecost. (Chrys.) They had a precedent in the Scripture of the Old Testament for the use of lots. The Land of Promise was divided by lot (Josh. xiv. 2), and the first king of Israel was chosen by lot (1 Sam. x. 17).

The word Clerus, as applied to the Clergy, appears to have been suggested by the use made of the term in the LXX and in this passage. As Chrys. says on έλαχε: Έλαχε τον κλ ηρον της διακονίας ταύτης κληρον δέ αὐτὸν καλεί δεικνύς της τοῦ Θεοῦ χάριτος το παν δν, και αναμιμνήσκων αυτούς των παλαιών, δτι δ κλήρους αὐτῶν does not mean 'their lots' (which would have been τοὺς κλήρους), but lots on which their names were written; and if this is the right reading, then it is probable that the names of the two were put into an urn, and he whose name first fell out

The precise mode, which was here used in the election of Matthias, seems to have been left in uncertainty, that it might not be used as an example for the future ordinations of the Christian

An important text, as showing the equality of Matthias (chosen by Christ after the Ascension) to Peter, and to any other of the rest of the Apostles, chosen by Christ on earth; and showing also the equality of the several eleven Apostles among themselves. This principle of Apostolic equality was still further extended in the Second Apostolic Ordination mentioned in the Acts,-the Ordination of Barnabas and Saul. See note below on xiii. 1-3.

CH. II. 1. ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τ. ἡ.] when the day of Pentecost, or the Fiftieth, was being filled up, as the complement to the forty-nine, which were counted from the morrow of the day of unleavened bread. Cp. Luke ix. 51, ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ἀναλήψεως αὐτοῦ. St. Luke is the only one of the writers of the New Test. who uses the word συμπληροῦν.

As to the day on which the Holy Ghost was given, it is to be

(1) That after forty-nine days from the sixteenth day of Abib or Nisan had passed, the next day was the Feast of Pentecost, or Fiftieth. (Jahn, Archæol. § 354.)

(2) This is clear from the texts of Scripture (Levit. xxiii. 15, 16. Numb. xxviii. 26. Deut. xvi. 9), as explained by Jewish writers, especially Josephus, Antiq. iii. 10. 5: τη δευτέρα τῶν 'Αζύμων ἡμέρα, εκτη δ' έστιν αθτη (cp. Levit. xxiii. 6) και δεκάτη του μηνός δε Νισάν παρ' ήμιν καλείται, των καρπών οθε έθέρισαν μεταλαμβάνουσι . . . θύουσι δ' έπλ ταις άπαρχαις των καρπῶν ἀρνίον εἰς όλοκαύτωσιν τῷ Θεῷ΄ ἐβδόμης δὲ ἐβδομάδος διαγεγενημένης μετὰ ταύτην τὴν θυσίαν, αὐται δ' εἰσὶν αἰ τῶν έβδομάδων ήμέραι τεσσαράκοντα καὶ ἐννέα, τἢ Πεντηκοστῆ προσάγουσι τῷ Θεῷ ἄρτον.

(3) The counting of the forty-nine days began from the end of the sixteenth of Nisan. See R. Solomon in Lightfoot, i. p.

746, and Maimonides quoted by Whitby (in loc.).

(4) Hence, therefore, in the year of our Lord's Passion, we have the following calendar of days (cp. Lightfoot, i. p. 748, and ii. p. 642):

Thursday, XIVth Day of the Month Nisan, Christ institutes the Holy Eucharist.

Friday, XVth Day of Nisan, He is crucified.

Saturday, XVIth Day of Nisan, He rests in the Grave. Sunday, XVIIth Day of Nisan, He rises from the Dead. From the end of Saturday, the XVIth Day of Nisan, forty-nine days are counted; and the Fiftieth, or Feast of Pentecost, falls on a Sunday. And it was the universal belief of the ancient Christian Church, that the Holy Ghost came down from heaven on the same day of the week as that on which our Lord arose from the dead, viz. the First Day of the week.

These particulars are to be noted, because in modern times some have been found to deny that our Lord was crucified on a Friday, or that the day of His Crucifixion was the XVth of Nisan, or that the Holy Spirit descended on the Lord's Day.

It may be inquired,

Why was the Holy Spirit given at the Feast of Pentecost?

And why at this particular Feast of Pentecost?

(1) Because Pentecost was the Feast on which two loaves of common leavened bread were offered (Levit. xxiii. 17-20). corn sown was ripened and made into bread. And now in Christ, who is the Bread of Life, the corn which had fallen into the ground and was risen, had reached its perfect maturity.

Also, the Feast of Pentecost was the ingathering of the Harvest; and now the Holy Spirit would enable the Apostles to gather from the Field, "which is the World," the spiritual harvest, of which the seed had been sown by Moses, the Prophets, and by Christ. Now the sickle was to be put to the corn of the spiritual harvest of souls by the Apostolic reapers, who were to gather them in sheaves, and consecrate them to God.

(2) Because the Law, graven in tables of stone, had been given at that time on Mount Sinai (Exod. xix. 1, 2), and it was fitting that the new Law should be written on the fleshy tables of the hearts of the Disciples (Jer. xxxi. 33. 2 Cor. iii. 3. Heb. viii. 10) at the same time on Mount Sion, from which it was to come forth; and that it might be understood that the Law and the Gospel are from the same Divine Author. (Severian, Theophyl.) See on i. 4.

Unde et Pentecostes celebratur solemnitas, et postea Evangelii Sacramentum Spiritûs Sancti descensione completur-et divisis linguis credentium totus Evangelicâ prædicatione mundus im-

This calculation is authorized by the Jewish doctors of the Law: see the rabbinical authorities in Wetstein, p. 461. It is not indeed expressly said in Holy Scripture that the feast of Pentecost coincided with, and commemorated, the Giving of the Law on Mount Sinai; but the calculations grounded on Scripture, and the testimonies of the most learned Jews, and the consent of the ancient Christian Church, authorize that opinion: and it is remarkable, that one of the noblest prophecies of Holy Scripture itself, predicting the Gift of Tongues at Pentecost, connects that Gift with the giving of the Law on Mount Sinai. Let the reader peruse that prophecy, the Sixty-eighth Psalm (one of the Proper Psalms appointed for Whitsunday), and he will see that those two gifts seem to be there joined together in the mind of the Holy Ghost. God so ordered events, that the principal seasons of dispensing Evangelical blessings (e.g. in the Death and Resurrection of Christ and Descent of the Holy Ghost) coincided with those times, in which the Legal benefits, most resembling and representing them, were bestowed and commemorated; and thus He made the Law to be preparatory to the Gospel; and showed the harmony of both. Cp. Dr. Barrow, Sermon on Acts ii. 38, vol. iii. p. 473.

(3) Because the Feast of Pentecost was the first great Feast following after the Passover; and because it was fitting, that the vast numbers of people who were at Jerusalem at the Passover (about two millions and a half; see Whiston's note on Josephus, vi. 9. 3), and saw or heard of the Crucifixion of Christ (Luke xxiv. 18), might also see the glorious and triumphant manifestation of His Exaltation and power, in the descent of the Holy Ghost. (Chrys., Severus ap. Theophyl.) And thus on their return to their several countries, the Pilgrim Tribes of the Law became Preachers of the Gospel.

(4) Because the Law had been given to the Israelites on Mount Sinai, at the season (afterwards called Pentecost) next following the first Passover, which commemorated their Deliverance from Egypt, and prefigured the universal Redemption by Christ. And it was fitting that the Christian Law, which was to be written, not on tables of stone, but on the fleshy tables of the heart, by the finger of the Holy Ghost (Severian), should be given at the Pentecost next following the completion of the work of Redemption by the Sacrifice of the True Passover, which is

(5) The name itself, πεντηκοστή, the Fiftieth, might suggest the name of Jubilee, which was significant of the preaching of "the acceptable year of the Lord." And on this Fiftieth Day the Holy Spirit anointed the Church, Christ's mystical Body, to preach that acceptable year to the world (see Aug. Epist. exix. and Jerome, in Mans. xii.), "sicut priori populo,—quinquagesimo die, vero Jubileo et vero anno remissionis Lex data est, in Apostolos quoque descendit Spiritus Sanctus."

Cp. Bp. Andrewes, Sermons, iii. p. 111, on Acts ii. 1-4.

(b) Besides, this was the first great Festival after Christ's Ascension to Heaven, and it was fitting that, according to the sure word of Prophecy (Ps. lxviii. 18), the great event of His triumphant Inauguration in glory, of His Coronation in His glorified Humanity, and of His Enthronization at God's right hand in Heavenly places, should be solemnized and celebrated by public manifestations on earth, of royal bounty, and spiritual His own word to His Apostles (John xvi. 7. Acts ii. 33).

Cp. Bp. Andrewes, pp. 226, 227, and Barrow's Whitsunday Sermon, iii. pp. 473—494.

(7) Because Seven is the number of perfection; and when Seven times seven days had been completed, then came the fulness of Christ's power in the Holy Ghost (Greg. Naz. Or. xli. pp. 732—734). He came personally in His first Advent, after seven times seventy years from the command to rebuild Jerusalem (Dan. ix. 24-27). And now He comes in the power of the Spirit, after seven times seven Days from the day of restoration, by His own death and burial in the grave.

It is observable that in this year, the fifteenth of Nisan fell on a Friday, the day on which Man had been first created; and so man was created in the first Adam, and restored in the Second Adam, on the same day of the week. The Resurrection, which according to types and prophecies was to be the third day after the Passion, took place on the first day of the week; the day on which God said, "Let there be light" (Gen. i. 4, 5). And the Feast of Pentecost in this year fell also on the First Day of the week. And thus the First Day of the week has been consecrated to all the Three Persons of the Ever-blessed and Undivided Trinity (FATHER, Son, and HOLY GHOST); and the blessings of Creation, Redemption, and Sanctification are commemorated on Cyril, Bp. of Jerusalem, states that the place in which the Holy Ghost descended on the Apostles, was the large apartment which afterwards was converted into a Church (Catech. xvi. 4), well known in his day, probably the ὁπερῶου mentioned i. 13, in which our Blessed Lord before His Crucifixion ate the Passover, and had instituted the Holy Eucharist; and in which, after His Resurrection, He had appeared on two successive Sundays to His Apostles. See note above on i. 13, and Greg. Nazian. in Caten.

If it had been, as some have supposed, a chamber in the Temple, St. Luke would hardly have failed to mention that circumstance; and it does not seem likely that the use of an olkos in the Temple would have been conceded to the Apostles by the Priests. Indeed, after the Sacrifice of Christ on the Cross, and the rending of the Veil, the Christian Church had become the Temple of God; and it is not probable that any spiritual dispensation, such as the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, would be connected with the material Temple at Jerusalem.

As Chrys. says, the olkos, in which they were assembled, may be regarded as typical of the universal Church, which is illumined by the Holy Spirit in the Gospel, and which was humble and private in its primitive state, but afterwards spread itself from the ύπερφον at Jerusalem throughout the world; and by its instrumentality the graces of the Holy Ghost, which are poured forth on the Apostles, flow down as it were from one heavenly source, by the streams of those different nations, which were assembled at the Day of Pentecost, and thence returned to their own homes; and so diffuse themselves in all parts of the earth, and irrigate and fertilize the world.

They were all assembled there early (see v. 15), either by a previous direction from Christ, or by some special intimation, or because it was the First Day of the week, when they met for public worship. They there remained in an attitude of expectation, sitting.
3. διαμεριζόμεναι — ἐκάθισε] The Tongues of Fire parted themselves of like streams from one source; or like branches from one root (Chrys.), and distributed themselves among them.

See St. Luke's use of διαμερίζω, Acts ii. 45. Luke xxiii. 34, and St. Paul's words, 1 Cor. xii. 4—11, διαιρέσεις χαρισμάτων, and πάντα ταῦτα ἐνεργεῖ τὸ ἐν καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα, διαιροῦν καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα, Νιαιροῦν καὶ τὸ κα ίδία ἐκάστφ, and Heb. ii. 4, Πνεύματος άγίου μερισμοίς.
Also the Tongues rested on the head of each. Hence the singular number ἐκάθισε (cp. Valck. and Winer, § 58, p. 458), showing that these gifts were from one Spirit, and that they were έπλήσθησαν ἄπαντες Πνεύματος άγίου, καὶ ἤρξαντο λαλείν έτέραις γλώσσαις, καθώς τὸ Πνεθμα ἐδίδου ἀποφθέγγεσθαι αὐτοῖς.

not to be a mere transitory boon, but an abiding presence. Christ | ascended up on high and gave gifts to men, that the Lord God might dwell among them. (Ps. lxviii. 18.)

They had

(1) Tongues given them, that they might preach. (2) Of Fire, that they might do it with power.

(3) The Tongues were distributed among them, that none might envy the other, and none exalt himself over the other, and that each of them might do his part in edifying the whole.

(4) The tongues sat on the head of each of them, that each might do that work constantly, especially by means of the Word of God.

On whom did the Holy Ghost come? S. Aug. (in Joann. xcii.) says, "Venit in die Pentecostes Sanctus Spiritus in centum viginti homines congregatos, in quibus et Apostoli omnes erant, qui illo impleti linguis omnium gentium loquebantur." Chrys. : "Other believers besides the Apostles received the Holy Ghost, enabling them to speak with tongues. But the Apostles alone appear to have been endued with the power of conveying to others the gift of the Holy Ghost, enabling them to speak with tongues." See viii. 18.

4. ηρξαντο λαλεῖν ἐτέραις γλώσσαις] they began to speak in languages not their own,—other than they had ever learned. (Bp. Andrewes, p. 138.) The phrase is from Isa. xxviii. 11, LXX, διὰ γλώσσης ἐτέρας (see 1 Cor. xiv. 21), and it announces the fulfilment of the prophecy of Ps. xix. 3, 4 (Ambrose); and is explained by v. 8, τη ιδία διαλέκτφ, and v. 11, ταις ήμετέραις

Hence, ελάλουν ξέναις γλώσσαις και οὐ πατρίοις, says Greg. Nazian. (p. 742, Orat. xli.), but ταις ίδίαις των ακουόντων. Some of them spake in the language of India, some of Scythia, some of Crete and Arabia, -- nations hostile to the Jews. (Ccum.) "Prædicaturi multis gentibus accipiunt genera linguarum." (Jerome, iv. 178, ad Hedib. 9, where are some excellent remarks on "Loquebantur linguis omnium gentium." (S. Aug., this text.) Serm. 316. Cp. below, x. 46; xi. 15, 16.) "Quia futura Ecclesia in omnibus linguis prænuntiabatur." (Serm. 266.) "Loquebatur unitas Ecclesiæ in linguis omnium gentium." (Aug. Serm. 267.)

The Apostles were gifted with the Tongues of all Nations, because Christ sent them to preach to all Nations, - ἐπειδή παυταχοῦ διέρχεσθαι ἔμελλον. (Chrys. here, and on 1 Cor. xiv. 3, and Theodoret in 1 Cor. xiv. 2, Augustine in Ps. xviii., Serm. 175.

Theophyl.)

All other interpretations of the words έτέραις γλώσσαις, with other tongues, are irreconcilable with grammatical rules and historical truth. The miracle was not (as some have thought) in the ears of the hearers, but in the tongues of the speakers. pearance of tongues indicates this; of tongues sitting on the heads of the Apostles. As S. Cyril says (in Caten.), "they spake with languages they had never learnt;" and thus was fulfilled the prophecy, "there is neither speech nor language, but their voices are heard among them; their sound is gone out into all lands, and their words into the ends of the world." (Ps. xix. 3, 4. Rom. x. 18.) The Spirit was given in the form of Tongues in order to consecrate 1 the preaching of Apostolic doctrine (Severus); and thus they were ordained by the χειροτονία of the Spirit, laying as it were His own Hands on their heads, to the Apostleship of the world. (Severian, in Caten. Chrys. Aug. Tr. xciii. in Joan., Cyril, Cateches. 17. Nazian. Orat. xli. p. 743; xliv. Leo, Serm. in Pentec., and Greg., Hom. 30 in Evang. cited by A Lapide.) "Thus each of them became as it were a $\theta \rho \delta vos$ of the Holy Ghost." (Severian.)

Besides, as the Fathers observe (see Chrys. here, and Aug. pussim; cp. Bp. Andrewes, p. 130), the miracle of Pentecost at Sion was the durlatoxxxv, or antithesis of the Confusion of Tongues at Babel. "There," says Chrys., "the one language had been divided into many; here many languages are united in one man." So Gregory Nyssen, Homil. in S. Stephan. ii. p. 787.

And it is truly and beautifully said by Leo M. (Serm. lxxiii. p. 155), "O quam velox est sermo sapientiæ, et ubi Deus ma-gister est, quam cità discitur, quod docetur! Non est adhibita interpretatio ad audiendum, non consuetudo ad usum, non tempus ad studium, sed spirante ubi voluit Spiritu Veritatis, proprie Gentium voces factæ sunt in Ecclesiæ ore communes. Ab hoc igitur die tuba evangelicæ prædicationis intonuit; ab hoc die imbres charismatum, flumina benedictionum, omne desertum et universam aridam irrigaverunt." Cp. ibid. Serm. lxxiv. p. 159.

This is also well expressed by Arator, v. 122:

66 ___ — igne magistro Imbuit ora calor, dictisque fluentibus exit Linguarum populosa seges; non littera gessit Officium, non ingenii stillavit ab ore Vena, nec egregias signavit cera loquelas; Sola fuit doctrina Fides."

And our own great poet says,

" ___ The SPIRIT, Pour'd first on His Apostles, whom He sends To evangelize the nations, then on all Baptized, shall them with wondrous gifts endue To speak all tongues; and do all miracles, As did their Lord before them."

Milton, P. L. xii. 497.

The Building of the Church, by the Divine Spirit of Love at Sion, was designed to remove the evil of the Building of the Tower by the human spirit of pride at Babel. And though it did not please God to bring all Nations back to one lip (Gen. xi. 1), yet by enabling the one Apostolic company to speak the same Gospel of Peace in all languages, He showed how the sin and misery of Babel would find their remedy in Sion. The same member, the tongue, which had scattered mankind through all the world, was now, when attuned by the Spirit of peace, used to bring back the world to the fold of Unity. So the curse was taken away, and a world to the fold of Unity. blessing poured forth in its place.

Therefore, the Church of England well says in her Com-munion Office, in the Proper Preface for Whitsunday and Six days after, "It is very meet, right, and our bounden duty, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto Thee, O Lord, Holy Father, Almighty Everlasting God, through Jesus Christ our Lord, according to whose most true promise, the HOLY GHOST came down, as at this time, from Heaven, with a sudden great sound, as it had been a mighty wind, in the likeness of fiery tongues, lighting upon the Apostles, to teach them, and to lead them to all truth, giving them both the gift of divers languages, and also boldness with fervent zeal constantly to preach the Gospel unto all Nations, whereby we have been brought out of darkness and error into the clear light and true knowledge of Thee and of Thy Son Jesus Christ. Therefore with Angels and Archangels, and with all the company of heaven, we laud and magnify Thy glorious Name, evermore praising Thee and saying, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of hosts, heaven and earth are full of Thy glory, Glory be to Thee, O Lord most high."

On the Gift of Tongues-its Design and Use.

One of the most convincing proofs of the truth of the Ancient Interpretation of this text, as thus declared by the Church of England, is to be found in the almost countless discrepancies of the Expositors who have deserted that Interpretation.

There is a large and consistent body of Interpreters, dating from the second century, and continued for many hundred years in all parts of Christendom, in favour of the Ancient Exposition; whereas, on the contrary, the Expositions at variance with it, which have been propounded in modern times, have no ancient authority in their favour; and are as inconsistent with one another as they are irreconcilable with the teaching of Christian Antiquity.

It would be fruitless to enumerate all these conflicting speculations. They may be seen in De Wette's Einleitung, where they occupy ten pages (pp. 27 to 37), or in Meyer's Kommentar, p. 42; and Bunsen's Hippolytus, &c., ii. p. 12, 2nd ed.

It has been recently alleged, even by some English Expositors, who allow that the Apostles spoke with foreign tongues on the Day of Pentecost, that there is no evidence in the Acts of the Apostles, or in any other part of Holy Scripture, that the Apostles were supernaturally endued with power "to preach the Gospel in divers languages," which they had never learnt, or that they ever did preach it in such languages.

But on this allegation it may be observed,

1. That our Lord's promise to His Disciples was general,

¹ The words in the printed edition of the Catena (p. 20) arc, ὑπέρ τοῦ τὸ κηρυγμα ΑΝΘΗ UYN της αποστολική, ἐιδασκαλίας- read ANAGEIOYN, to consecrate.

5 "Ησαν δὲ ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ κατοικοῦντες Ἰουδαῖοι, ἄνδρες εὐλαβεῖς ἀπὸ παντὸς έθνους των ύπὸ τὸν οὐρανόν. 6 Γενομένης δὲ τῆς φωνῆς ταύτης συνῆλθε τὸ πληθος, καὶ συνεχύθη, ὅτι ἤκουον εἶς ἔκαστος τῆ ἰδία διαλέκτω λαλούντων

Mark xvi. 17, 18, "These signs shall follow them that believe; In my Name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; . . . they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

The signs there mentioned by Christ were not for momentary display, but for continual profit and edification.

The power of speaking with new tongues is combined in Christ's promise with that of healing the sick, and casting out devils. The Apostles were led to expect to receive a supernatural ability to do all these things; and the need of the gift of new tongues was certainly not less than that of those other gifts which are joined with it. And it can hardly be said that the Divine Promise was fulfilled, if the power of speaking with new tongues was limited to one or two special occasions, and not applied to the noblest of all uses of speech, that of preaching the Gospel.

2. The miraculous power of preaching in new tongues may also be said to have been presupposed in our Lord's commission to His Apostles, Galilæan Fishermen, "unlearned and unlettered men" (ἐδιώτας καὶ ἀγραμμάτους), "Go ye and teach all Nations." "Go ye, μαθητεύσατε, make ye disciples of the learned Greek and of the proud Roman; convert the many-tongued Nations of the Earth; 'Preach the Gospet to every creature.' 'Ye shall be My Witnesses to the ends of the Earth.'" (Acts i. 8.)

How were they to do this without the knowledge of foreign languages? It is not sufficient to reply that they knew Greek, and that with a knowledge of Greek they could preach to all the world.

For, first, it is not clear that they did know Greek, or at least, know it in such a way as to speak it with fluency, and in such a manner as not to expose their message to contempt.

And if Greek was all that was necessary, why were they gifted with the tongues of so many nations on the Day of Pente-

They did not go forth to preach till they had received the gift of Pentecost; but they complied with Christ's command, when they had been endued with power from on high. As Irenœus says, iii. 1, "Posteà quam induti sunt supervenientis Spiritûs Sancti virtutem ex alto, exierunt in fines terræ-evangelizantes."

Their prompt obedience to Christ's command, and the immediate success which attended their Missionary labours in all parts of the world, seem to indicate that they had the power of communicating readily with all Nations in their vernacular languages. And how could this be but by a supernatural gift?

3. The evidence derivable from the Acts of the Apostles of the possession of this power, is also cogent,- 1st, Positively.

We see the Apostles in the first instance using their confessedly miraculous power, in order to preach the Gospel to the various tribes, speaking different languages, collected at Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost. Here certainly is a proof that the power was employed for the propagation of the Gospel. And this specimen of its use for a permanent and necessary end, seems to suggest a belief that it was vouchsafed to, and used by the same persons, according to the need, on other occasions for the same purpose.

It is worthy of remark here, that the Apostle, who takes the lead in preaching on this occasion, is St. Peter. And he is also prominent in preaching to different congregations and persons in the earlier portion of this History. And his preaching is inva-riably attended with success. Yet of St. Peter it is noticed in the Gospel, that he could not, of himself, speak his own vernacular language with accuracy. (Matt. xxvi. 73. Mark xiv. 70.) How was the fisherman of Bethsaida, with his Galilean barbarisms, to work such effects as he did in preaching, without a supernatural gift of language? Cp. note on xxiv. 1.

Again; in the Acts of the Apostles we see St. Paul preaching to the various Tribes of Asia Minor, and to the barbarous (i. e. foreign) inhabitants of Malta (see notes on xiii. 15; xiv. 11, and xxviii. 2-4), doubtless in their own languages. And St. Paul's case seems to afford a strong corroboration of what has been now asserted.

He was the most learned of the Apostles. Humanly speaking, he had more of ordinary qualifications for addressing foreign congregations, than any of the rest. And yet he was more gifted supernaturally than others with the power of speaking with λῶσσαι, or foreign languages. (1 Cor. xiv. 18.) And why? Because his Missionary travels were more extensive than theirs.

He who, as "the Apostle of the Gentiles" (Rom. xi. 13), had a commission to preach to more nations, was more gifted with the power of speaking with tongues; and his case shows the need and reason of the gift.

2ndly, Negatively, also

The evidence from the Acts of the Apostles is strong. In this divinely-inspired record of the Missionary labours of the Primitive Church, we never hear that any one of the Apostolic Missionaries of the Gospel ever sat down for a single hour to learn a foreign language; or ever was retarded or deterred for a single moment by ignorance, or defective knowledge, of any foreign language, from preaching the Gospel to any person or congregation in any part of the world. What is there similar to this in any annals of modern Missions? And how is this to be explained but by a supernatural ability to preach in foreign tongues? See further below, xiv. 11.

It has been recently objected in some Expositions of this passage, that there is no early patristic evidence of a spiritual gift of speaking in different Languages for the preaching of the Gospel.

On this it may be observed;

There is early Patristic evidence that the Apostles went forth to preach the Gospel in all lands; and that they did preach it. But there is no evidence that the Apostles ever learnt a foreign language, or could not speak the language of any country to which they went.

Besides; even if there existed no testimony such as is described from the few surviving works of the Fathers of the Second and Third Centuries, yet the concurrent Testimony of the Fathers of the Fourth and Fifth Centuries proves what the Tradition of the Church was on this point.

But there is early patristic testimony of the continuance of the gift of tongues for preaching the Gospel;

S. Irenœus, the disciple of Polycarp, the scholar of St. John, says (v. 6; cp. Euseb. v. 7), "We hear many brethren in the Church, having prophetic gifts, and speaking with all kinds of tongues by means of the Spirit, παντοδαπαῖε λαλούντων διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος γλώσσαις, and bringing to light the hidden things of men's hearts for edification, and declaring the mysteries of God."

How Irenœus understood the passage before us, appears also from his words (iii. 17), "Luke relates that the Spirit descended on the disciples after the Ascension of the Lord, on the Day of Pentecost, in order that all Nations might be enabled to enter into life; wherefore they united in all languages in praising God the Holy Spirit, bringing distant Tribes into Unity, and offering the first-fruits of all Nations to God."

It is not indeed necessary to suppose, nor is it probable, that the power of speaking in foreign languages, without previous study, was long continued in the Church. Soon after the completion of the Canon of the New Testament, the Holy Scriptures were translated into various languages, and native Churches were formed in the principal countries of the world. As S. Gregory I. says (in Marc. xvi. 16), when the Tree of the Gospel was first planted, it was watered with extraordinary effusions of the Holy Ghost; but when it had taken root, then ordinary means sufficed for its growth.

— ἀποφθέγγεσθαι αὐτοῖs] So A, B, C, D. Elz. has αὐτοῖs ἀποφθέγγεσθαι. The alteration may have been made for greater ease of construction; but trajections of this kind (as Alford well observes) are usual with St. Luke. And there is something marked in the reservation of $ab\tau o is$, i. e. them especially (according to Christ's promise), them, who were lately so weak and timid,—the last and emphatic word. Cf. αὐτοῖς and αὐτῶν in the preceding verse.

The word ἀποφθέγγεσθαι (used only in Acts ii. 14, and xxvi. 25) has a special force; it is not simply to speak, but "magnificè loqui" (Valck.), to pour forth short sentences (Chrys., Œcum., and Bloomfield here). This word seems to explain the mode in which those who received the gift of tongues on the day of Pentecost spoke, viz. by ejaculatory ascriptions, perhaps in orderly sequence, of glory to God, and by short and fervent exhortations to their several hearers.

5. κατοικοῦντες] residing there, in expectation of the appearance of the Messiah then looked for (see Lightfoot here); or having come up for the Feast to Jerusalem, and tarrying there

6. συνεχύθη] was confounded, or was in confusion, from doubt and astonishment; and the confusion showed itself in the conflux of people, and in the passions by which they were agitated, and in the variety of languages which they spoke; an image of Babel.

St. Luke here happily uses a word (συνεχύθη) which reminds the reader of ξτζ (Babel), which the LXX render by σύγχυσις, δτι έκει συνέχεεν δ κύριος τὰ χείλη πάσης της γης, Gen. xi. 9. Babel, built by human pride, is on the one side; and the Church of Christ, animated by the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Love, on the other. Here are two opposite Powers brought into contact on the Day of Pentecost. The din of the one rages against the peace of the other; and the eddying streams flow together. The confusion of Tongues is calmed by the effusion of the Holy Ghost; and by the diffusion of the Truth, under the gracious influence of the Holy Spirit, the Tongues of Babel are brought into harmony, and preach the One Gospel of Christ, and sing in a holy concert the Songs of Sion.

— ήκουον] they were hearing; the imperfect tense marks the continuance of the miracle: hence what follows, εξίσταντο πάντες, και έθαύμαζον, they were all in astonishment, and wondering. Cp. the imperfects in v. 12, εξίσταντο -διηπόρουν-ξλεγον.

 Cp. what is said below, x. 45, of the miracle at Cæsarea.
 — διαλέκτφ] dialect. Something more than γλώσση, or language. See Valck. p. 327. The Apostles—illiterate Galilæans, who, as Valck. observes, p. 349, knew only one dialect of one language—spake in different languages and in different dialects of the same language (Bede, Retract. p. 104). For example, the Medes and Elamites (Persians) spake the same tongue, but in different dialects. And so it was with many other races enumerated in vv. 9-11. Hence we may explain 'Ιουδαίαν in v. 9.

The Christian Church speaks in all dialects of all languages.

It shoots out its roots and fibres every where, and consecrates all nations and races of the world.

8. πως ήμεις ακούομεν, εκαστος] how is it that we are hearing, each of us in our own dialect, in which we were born? It is not said that each of the Apostles had the power of speaking all languages. But as at Babel the tongue, which a certain number of persons spoke, served as a guide to lead them away together to settle in a given place, and so the world was colonized: so, it would seem, at Pentecost, the foreign tongue, which each disciple was enabled to speak, collected about him a group of those strangers then at Jerusalem who spoke that particular tongue; and so all were evangelized.

It has been supposed by some (e.g. Severus in Caten. here), that the gift of a special language was like a spiritual intimation to each of the Apostles, signifying to what country he should direct his attention; δίδοται ἐκάστφ γλῶσσα καθάπερ κανών that is, it was as it were his appointment or χειροτονία to a particular charge; and S. Jerome says (ad Hedibiam, iv. 178), "accipiunt genera linguarum, ut nosceretur qui Apostolorum quibus deberent gentibus nunciare.

9-11. Πάρθοι καὶ Μηδοι] Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, &c. &c. The arrangement of the names in these three verses is very remarkable. It follows the order of the three principal διασποραί or Dispersions of the Jews throughout the World, as

(1) The earliest διασπορά or dispersion, that of the Ten Tribes in Media and Assyria, and of the Two Tribes in the neighbourhood of Babylon, now subject to the Parthians, who are therefore placed first.

(2) The διασπορά or dispersion of Jews in Asia Minor, the dwellers in Cappadocia, &c., an offset from the Assyrian dis-

(3) The Egyptian dispersion, planted by Ptolemy Lagus.
On these dispersions cp. Mede's excellent Essay, Works, book i. Disc. xx. pp. 74-77; Lightfoot, ii. p. 1144; and Howson, i. pp. 21, 22.

It is observable, that St. Peter, the Apostle of the Circumcision, provided instruction for all these dispersions;

(1) He went in person to the Parthians; for he wrote his first Epistle from Babylon. See on 1 Pet. v. 13.

(2) He wrote his two Epistles to the Asiatic διασπορά.
 (3) Lastly, he sent "Marcus his son" to the Egyptian

διασπορά. S. Jerome (Scr. Eccl. 8). See note below on 1 Pet. v. 13. On the providential pre-arrangement for the spread of Christianity by means of these διασποραί, or Dispersions, throughout the world, see Bp. Pearson's admirable remarks in one of his excellent discourses recently recovered by Archdn. Churton, ii. pp. 30, 31. He there says: "On the day of Pentecost Jews were present from every nation under heaven. Sojourners also were there, the causes and witnesses of the miracle. And when they returned to their own land, what did they report with greater joy, than that their own mother-tongue had been ennobled at Jerusalem by the revelation of divine mysteries? Thus the preaching of the Gospel, at first communicated to the Jews of all nations at Jerusalem, followed them to their own homes." He adds, p. 36: " In order that the kingdom of Satan might be overthrown by the Gospel, preached by the Apostles and Apostolic men, it was requisite that they should speak in tongues understood by all na-

The enumeration of these tribes (Parthians and Medes, &c.) as present at the day of Pentecost, and as then evangelized by the Apostles (v. 41), has a special interest as displaying the fulfilment of Ancient Prophecy. See the passage in Isa. xi. 11, appointed as a Proper Lesson for Whitsunday, "It shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the representations." second time to recover the remnant of His people that shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the Islands of the Sea." και τους διεσπαρμένους Ἰούδα συνάξει ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων πτερύγων τῆς γῆς. (LXX.)

The regions mentioned by Isaiah correspond very nearly with those specified here by St. Luke; and in the reception of the first-fruits of these various Dispersions into the Christian Sion, the Church, it may be rightly said that they have been recovered, and brought back again to their true home in Christ, the spiritual Observe also as a remarkable circumstance, that the nation here placed first is the Parthian, viz. that which occupied Babylonia. They who dwelt in that region, in which had been built the Tower of Babel, or Tower of Confusion, are mentioned first as brought into the Christian Sion, the city of Unity. So God overrules evil with good by His Spirit in His Church. See on 1 Pet.

v. 13. 9. 'Ελαμίται] 9. Έλαμῖται] Elamites dwelling east of Tigris, north of Susiana, and south of Media. The prophets before the captivity give a wider sense to Elam, and make it almost co-extensive with Persia, and Daniel designates Susa as the capital of Elam (viii. 2). In later times Elymais is the name of a Persian province.

'Iovoalar] Judæa. Since they who spake were Galileans (v. 7), and the Galilæan dialect differed from that spoken in Judea (Mark xiv. 70), they who dwelt in Judea might well express surprise at what they heard; and therefore there is no reason for abandoning the reading of the MSS. here for 'Idovualar, 'Irolar, or Βιθυνίαν, with some Commentators.

'Aglav] Asia. That district called Ionia and Lydia, of which Ephesus was the capital, and sometimes called Proconsular Asia. Cp. Acts vi. 9; xvi. 6; xx. 16. Rev. i. 4. 11. The Asia of the New Testament may be said to bear the same relation to "Asia Minor" that Portugal does to Spain. Cicero (pro Flacco, 27) says, "Asia vestra constat ex Phrygiâ, Mysiâ, Cariâ, Lydiâ," and comp. Solinus, c. xl.; but here Asia is distinguished from Phry-gia. It seems to be regarded by St. Peter (i. 1) as the region est of Cappadocia and Bithynia: cp. Wetstein here, and Winer, R. W. B. p. 96.

10. ἐπιδημοῦντες 'Ρωμαΐοι] There should be no stop after 'Pωμαΐοι, and the sentence should be rendered, 'Jews of Rome,' whether by birth or conversion, and now sojourning at Jerusalem for the Feast. (Valck.)

13. ἔτεροι δὲ διαχλευάζοντες] The native Jews were mocking, because they did not know the foreign languages spoken by the Apostles, and those foreign tongues seemed to them like a jargon of unmeaning sounds, -a proof that the miracle was not in the ears of the hearers (as some thought even in ancient times; see Bede, Retractat, in Act. ii. p. 103), but in the tongues of the Apostles, and a refutation of several modern theories on this δια-χλευάζοντες, the compound verb, is a stronger word than the simple verb, and means vehemence and continuance in mock-futed not only by reference to the time of day (as St. Peter confutes them), but from the time of year. "Behold," says Severian, "their folly convicted by the season itself. How could there be new wine at Pentecost? But calumny is blind."

And yet, like Caiaphas, and Pilate, and other enemies of the truth, they were overruled unconsciously to declare what was true. For the new wine of the Spirit was now poured into new bottles. (See on Matt. ix. 17. Luke v. 38.) See Augustine on v. 15. "Jam enim," says Bede after him, and Cyril. Hieros. Cat. 17, "vinum novum in utres novos venerat, cum Apostoli, non in vetustate literæ sed in novitate Spiritüs, Dei magnalia resonarent." This is happily versified by Arator, v. 150:—

> " Hos etiam musto typicâ ratione moveri Error verus ait, quos ebria fonte recenti Complevit doctrina poli ; nova vasa liquorem Suscepere novum; nec corrumpuntur acerbo Quo veteres maduere lacus, de Vite bibentes Quæ, Christo cultore, dedit convivia verbis, Unde rubent quas vertit aquas."

The word γλεῦκοs is rightly rendered 'mustum' in Vulg, and 'new wine' in the Auth. Vers. And the suggestions that have been made of another rendering would destroy the spiritual sense of the passage, as declared by ancient Expositors.

This saying of the multitude might have served as a warning against the abuse of the χάρισμα, or gift, of Tongues. See 1 Cor.

xiv. 23. 25, and Chrys. there.

14. Σταθείς] having taken up his station,—a sign of boldness; see next note. So ἀπεφθέγξατο, he spake aloud.
In his reports of speeches, St. Luke is wont to begin with describing the attitude and gesture of the speaker (x. 34; xiii. 16; xvii. 22; xxiii. 1; xxvi. 1).

A proof of the gift of the Holy Spirit is here shown in the change wrought in the recipients. What a contrast between Peter in the hall of Caiaphas before the Crucifixion, and the same Peter now on the day of Pentecost after the descent of the Holy Ghost! He who had faltered at the voice of a woman and denied his Master, now confronts the multitude which had killed Him, and reproves them for the deed; ένθα γὰρ ἃν παραγένηται τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἄγιον, χρυσοῦς ἀντὶ πηλίνων ποιεῖ. (Chrys. Severian.) See further below, iv. 8, and the admirable specimen of sacred eloquence in Greg. Nazian. Or. xli. pp. 741, 742, and the following comment of S. Augustine (Tract. in Joann. xcii.):

"When the Comforter is come, ye shall bear witness of Me" (John xv. 26, 27). So said Christ, for the Comforter will give you courage; which Peter had not, when being affrighted by a woman's voice, he would not bear witness to Christ, but through fear denied Him. After the Resurrection he thrice professed his love for his Master, but as yet his love was infirm, till it was strengthened by the Holy Ghost, which was poured into his heart in a copious stream of grace, and inspired him with such fervour and eloquence, that more eagerly than the rest he rushed forth to bear witness of Christ, and to confound His adversaries with the doctrine of the Resurrection. If any one is delighted with so joyful and holy a sight, let him read the Acts of the Apostles. There the same Peter, for whom we had wept when denying Christ, is seen and admired, preaching Him. There that Apostolic tongue is transfigured from fear to valour, from slavery to liberty; that tongue, which at the sound of one was driven to denial, now inspires many thousand enemies to confess Christ. "Quid plura? Tantus in illo fulgor gratiæ, tanta Spiritus Sancti plenitudo apparebat, tanta de ore prædicantis pretiosissimæ veritatis pondera procedebant, ut ingentis multitudinis adversarios, interfectores Christi Judæos, faceret pro Illo paratos mori, à quibus cum illo formidarat occidi. Hoc fecit Spiritus Sanctus, tunc missus, ante promissus."

— συν τοῖς ἔνδεκα] with the eleven Apostles. It is probable that the Eleven spoke also to several companies of persons in various languages; and that St. Peter's speech is recorded as a specimen of what was spoken by the Apostles, and because it was addressed specially to the Jews of Jerusalem, and was probably spoken in their language. See Lightfoot here (i. p. 754), and note on αρα τρίτη] the third hour. The hour at which the Morning Sacrifice was offered in the Temple, and until which it was the custom to fast. On Sabbaths and Festivals the fast was continued to noon. See Lightfoot here.

The ἔσχαται ἡμέραι, or last days, are the Days of the Messiah, or the Christian Dispensation. See Moses Stuart, on Heb. i. 2. St. Luke adopts here almost verbatim the words of the LXX.

On these verses (vv. 16-21) see Bp. Andrewes' Sermon, vol. iii. p. 301.

17. ἐπὶ πᾶσαν σάρκα] upon all flesh: Gentiles as well as Jews.
— ἐνυπνίοιs] So A, B, C, D, H, and some cursives. A Hebraism, as in Joel iii. 1. (Meyer.) Elz. ἐνύπνια, and so LXX.

 ἐκχεῶ] I will pour out; future, a later form (Winer, § 13, p. 71), found in the LXX, Ezek. vii. 8; xxi. 31, and elsewhere. 19. δώσω τέρατα] I will give prodigies. The Fathers apply

(1) To the signs at the Crucifixion—the eclipse—the rending of the rocks—the earthquake at the Resurrection. (Cyril.)
(2) To the phenomena before the siege and fall of Jerusalem. (Chrys. and Theophyl. referring to Josephus, B. J. vi. 5.)

— τέρατα και σημεῖα] The LXX thus render the single word στρίο Cp. Exod. xi. 9, 10. For the most part they use πρίο for τέραs, as in Exodus iv. 21; vii. 3. 9; and Deut. iv. 34;

The Jews had said, "His blood be upon us and upon our children" (Matt. xxvii. 25), and that blood was upon them, when the blood of 1,100,000 persons was shed in the siege of Jerusalem: and then the $\pi \hat{\nu} \rho$ kal $\delta \tau \mu ls$ ka $\pi \nu o \hat{\nu}$ consumed the Temple and the City. (Cyril, Severian.)

20. πρὶν ἡ ἐλθεῖν τ. ἡμέραν—ἐπιφανή] before the great and glorious Day of the Lord come. St. Luke adopts ἐπιφανή from the LXX, from נוֹרֵא terribilis, which they render elsewhere in the prophetical books (Hab. i. 7. Mal. i. 14; iv. 5) by ἐπιφανὴs, which is very proper to describe our Lord's Coming to judge Jerusalem, and to judge the world.

As at the Ascension, the Angels passed immediately from speaking of that event, to speak of Christ's Second Coming to Judgment (i. 11), so here on the Day of Pentecost, St. Peter proceeds to speak of that Second Advent, because (as Bp. Andrewes says, iii. 315), "from Christ's Departure till His Return again, from this Day of Pentecost, 'a great and notable Day,' till the last 'great and notable Day,' between these two Days no more such Day. Therefore he called them the last Days." Revelation or outpouring of the Spirit is to be expected.

 21. πâs] every one—not Jew only, but Gentile also.
 — δs ἃν ἐπικαλέσηται τὸ ὄνομα] This expression both in the Greek and in Hebrew is much stronger than to invoke; the Hebrew is אָשֶׁרִיקְרָא רְשֵׁם, whosoever shall call on the Name of and signifies, whosoever shall trust in, adore, and obey the Lord in all His glorious attributes. See below, ix. 14; xxii. 16. 1 Cor. i. 2, 2 Tim. ii. 22.

Hebraica phrasis ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὸ ὅνομα Κυρίου significat Deum colere Gen. iv. 26; xii. 8. Rosenmüll., so Chrys., Didy-mus, and Theophyl.

Some of the ancient Fathers (e. g. Julius Africanus, in Routh, R. S. 238) understand this phrase to mean προσαγορεύ-εσθαι ὀνόματι Κυρίου. (Cp. Gen. iv. ult.) This part of the prophecy, "Whosever shall call on the Name of the Lord shall be saved"—had a literal fulfilment, in the first instance, in the escape of the Christians from Jerusalem and Judæa to Pella, before the destruction of Jerusalem. (See Matt. xxiv. 16.) It has a still more comprehensive and spiritual fulfilment in the escape of all, who believe in Christ, from the wrath to come.

22. Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον] Jesus the Nazarene. St. Peter begins by preaching Christ in His humanity and condescension,— Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον; so styled by Pilate in the Inscription on the Cross. He then raises his hearers gradually by appealing to His mighty works, known to them. (Athanas. Chrys.) On this speech see also S. Iren. iii. 12.

It may be observed here that S. Irenœus (in iii. 12) cites a large portion of the Acts of the Apostles (i. 16; ii. 4. 22. 37; iii. 2; iv. 8. 22. 31; v. 30; vii. 2. 55; viii. 26. 32; ix. 4. 20; x. 1. 15. 34, 35. 37; xiv. 1; xv. 7. 23; xvii. 24) to show that the Apostles acknowledged and preached One and the same God as the Author of both Testaments and Dispensations, the Mosaic and Christian; and One and the same Christ, God and Man, the Creator of all things by His word, and the Redeemer of all men by His

ol. i. 2. Winer, § 47, p. 332.
23. &ρισμένη βουλή] with the determined counsel and fore-knowledge of God. In order that they may not imagine that they have triumphed over God, and conquered Christ by the Crucifixion, he says that it was done with the Divine foreknowledge and counsel.

But, in order that they may not therefore think themselves innocent, he adds, διὰ χειρῶν ἀνόμων, by wicked hands. Cp. Matt. xvi. 21. Acts iii. 18; iv. 28.

There was no excuse to them; "but yet the act was done by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, Who most wisely and powerfully ordered those various and vicious motions of the creature, for the effectuating of His own most glorious and gracious purposes." Bp. Sanderson, Serm. ix., 1 Tim. iii. 16, vol. i. p. 231; and see below, note on iv. 28.

The speeches of St. Peter recorded in the Acts are to be compared with and illustrated by the writings of the same Apostle in his two Epistles. On this verse see 1 Pet. i. 11. 20.

24. λύσας τ. ἀδῖνας τ. θανάτου] having loosed the birth-pangs of death; as showing that Death and the Grave, instead of being the destruction of Christ, were by the Divine power made, as it were, the Womb from which He was to be born to new life. See above on John xvi. 21; below on Acts xiii. 33.

שׁאָלוֹע is the word used by the LXX for תָּבֶל (Angl. cable, cord). See Ps. xviii. 5, and Theodoret there, and Ps. cxvi. 3. -ωδίνες θανάτου are της. Hence the combination of the word with λύσαs, having loosed, here. By that glorious Birth from Death, the whole World was delivered from darkness into light, through Him Who was the First-born from the dead (Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5). Cp. the beautiful expressions of Ignatius (ad Rom. 6), looking forward to a Martyr's death as his own birth: δτοκετός μοι ἐπίκειται μὴ ἐμποδίσητέ μοι ζήσαι μη θελήσητέ με άποθανεῖν έκεῖ παραγενόμενος άνθρωπος Θεοῦ ἔσομαι ἐπιτρέψατέ μοι μιμητην είναι τοῦ πάθους τοῦ Θεοῦ μου ἀφετέ με καθαρὸν φῶς λαβεῖν. What Sophist could have written thus?

How appropriate therefore was the name given to the day of the Christian's martyrdom. It was called his Natalia or Birthday. Cp. on Rom. viii. 22. Life is death; and death is birth to the Christian. To him the darkness of the tomb is the womb of

In considering such expressions as this (ἀδῖνες θανάτου), in the LXX Version-prepared for the Gospel-we can scarcely fail to notice the work of a superintending Providence.

25. els αὐτόν] els, with reference to Him. Eph. v. 32. Gal. iii. 24. So πρὸs, Heb. i. 7. Cp. Job xlii. 8. Glass. Phil. p. 486, and so Ignat. Phil. 9.

25-28. Προωρώμην-προσώπου σου] I was seeing the Lord always before me. The Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Peter, interprets here the prophecy which He had delivered by King David (Ps. xvi. 8—11). The words of the Psalm are given almost verbatim as they stand in the LXX Version, read in the Synagogues by the Hellenistic Jews. Particularly (v. 26) where the Hebrew original has קבוֹדְי (my glory), the LXX, whom St. Luke follows, have γλῶσσά μου, my tongue. On the reason of this rendering, see Surenhusius, p. 393, and Bengel here. The Tongue may be called the glory of man, either because it is "the best member that he has" (Ps. lvii. 8; cviii. 1. Barrow, i. p. 301), or as the instrument by which he glorifies God (James iii. 9), and so procures true glory to himself. And this paraphrase of the word glory was very appropriate on the day of Pentecost, when in a special manner the Tongues of the Apostles were made instruments for declaring God's glory in the world, and of promoting their own glory in heaven.

might afterwards be used without offence, v. 31.

Some interpret this as meaning that God did not leave His body in the grave; but that sense is weak and tautologous. signification is, as St. Peter himself explains it, v. 31,-making a distinction between Christ's human σὰρξ and ψυχλ, which were severed by death,—Thou didst not leave my soul in אָלָה אָל Sheol, i. e. in the place of departed Spirits. Cp. the use of αδης, Luke xvi. 23, and note.

Next, "Thou didst not suffer my body to see corruption," which, strictly speaking, can be said of no one's body but Christ's. As S. Aug. explains it (on Ps. xvi.), "non sanctificatum corpus, per quod alii sanctificandi sunt, corrumpi patieris." Cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. v. pp. 351. 377. The opinion of that great Expositor, that our Lord's human soul went to the place where the part of the property of the corpus of the corpu to the place where the souls of men are kept that died in their sins, seems hardly compatible with our Lord's words, "To-day thou (i. e. as to thy human soul) shalt be with Me in Paradise."
(Luke xxiii. 43.) See Barrow on the text, v. pp. 34-36. Serm. 28, and Bp. Bull, i. p. 33.

Compare St. Peter's own language in that remarkable passage where he speaks of the preaching of Christ to the spirits in prison, 1 Pet. iii. 19.

- τον "Οσιόν σου] Thy Holy One, where some MSS. of the original have in the plural τροπ. Thy Holy Ones; but the Masorites, and the best ancient Versions, read the singular. And so the LXX, τὸν ὅσιον. It is of little moment which reading is preferred. The deliverance of God's Saints and Holy Ones from the corruption of the grave is due to the Resurrection of The Holy One, their Head, "Who is the First-fruits of them that slept," and "in Whom all are made alive." (1 Cor. xv. 20—22.) See also next note, and cp. xiii. 36.

One of the blessed fruits of the Day of Pentecost was, that the Holy Spirit, Who had spoken of old by the Prophets, and in the Palms (2 Pet. i. 20, 21), now interprets their words by the Apostles. On that Day He founded in the Church a School of Scriptural Hermeneutics. He declared on His own Divine authorities. rity, that certain Scriptures, which He expounded by the mouth of Apostles, who were inspired by the Divine Comforter, refer to Christ. Thus He has provided a safeguard against that sceptrue sense (2 Pet. iii. 16). He teaches us how they apply to Christ, and has put into our hand a key for unlocking other prophecies of a like import. See above, Introduction, p. 16.

Vol. I.—Part II.

29. $\xi \delta \nu$ (sc. $\xi \sigma \tau \omega$)— $\tau \delta \mu \nu \hat{\eta} \mu \alpha \alpha \hat{\upsilon} \tau o \hat{\upsilon}$] Let me speak freely to you concerning the Patriarch David, that he both died and his sepulchre is with us even to this day. See Joseph. Ant. xiii. 8. 4, on Δανίδου τάφος, David's tomb, sacrilegiously opened by

Herod. Joseph. Antiq. xvi. 7. 1.

The fact that St. Peter does not say body but sepulchre has been used by some as the groundwork of an opinion, that David's body was one of those which rose a little before (Matt. xxvii. 53), and was carried by Christ with others into heaven. But not to say more, this opinion is contradicted by v. 34.

30. το κατὰ σάρκα—Χρισ, part of part the sense appears to be incomplete without them, or something like them. See also Bornemann's note here.

31. ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτοῦ] omitted by A, B, C*, D, and some Versions. 33. $\tau \hat{\eta}$ $\delta \epsilon \xi i \hat{a}$ $\tau o \hat{v}$ $\Theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$ of the right hand of God; so the Ethiopic Version. See v. 34, $\epsilon \kappa$ $\delta \epsilon \xi i \hat{a} v$, and, as to the dative, Matt. xxi. 2. Rev. ii. 5, and Winer, § 31, 5, p. 192. The other interpretation, "by the right hand of God," is authorized by the Valente. by the Vulgate, Syriac, Arabic, and English Versions, and by many learned Expositors. It is difficult to decide between them; on the whole the former seems preferable. Cp. ch. v. 31. 34. εἶπεν ὁ Κύριος] the Lord said. See on Matt. xxii. 44.

36. καl Κύριον αὐτὸν καl Χριστόν] So A, B, C, and other MSS. and Versions, more clearly explanatory of St. Peter's argument (which is that Jesus is both Lord Jehovah and Christ) than the reading of Elz., Κύριον καὶ Χριστὸν αὐτόν.

- ὑν ὑμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε] whom ye crucified. On the purport of this speech, see Athanas. Orat. 11, adv. Arian., pp. 379—383, who observes that it is to be interpreted by reference to the opinions of the Jews, viz.

(1) That Christ would not suffer (see John xii. 34); cp.

Luke xxiv. 26, and

(2) That He would be man, like other kings and conquerors of the Earth; but in their zeal for the doctrine of the Divine Unity, as they conceived it, of Jehovah, they did not expect the Messiah to be God in the Flesh. Athanasius therefore compares the Jews to the Arians, and confutes both by the same Scriptures.

As has been observed by Professor Blunt, some of the passages of Scripture which the Fathers used against the Jews, and some of the arguments with which the Fathers confuted them, afford the strongest weapons against the Socinians. See above on Matt. xvi. 14. John x. 33.

"37. κατενόγησαν] "compuncti, defixi sunt corde." See on Rom. xi. 3. They who pierced Christ with nails, and slew Him (v. 23), were now pierced by the stings of remorse and compunction.

38. βαπτισθήτω εκαστος ύμων έπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι 'Ιησοῦ Χριστοῦ] let every one of you be baptized in the Name of Jesus Christ. Since Jesus commanded His Apostles to baptize in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, therefore the Baptism administered by them in Christ's Name was Baptism in the Name of the Holy Trinity, "according to the form which had been prescribed by Christ." Cp. Waterland, Serm. viii. vol. ii. p. 175, and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. i. p. 58.

He that is baptized in the Name of Christ, is baptized in the Name of the Holy Trinity; for the Father and the Holy Spirit are inseparable from the Son. (Didym.) One Person of the Holy Trinity does not exclude another, but includes it. Therefore the Scripture sometimes mentions one Person, sometimes another Person, sometimes all the Persons, to show that all the Three Persons are of the same substance and power. S. Aug. c. Maximin. 17.

Hence also we may prove the Divinity of Christ. To be baptized in the Name of Jesus, is to be baptized in the Name of the Triune God, which could not be, unless Jesus Christ were

40. σώθητε] be ye saved by God, Who desires your salvation and that of all men. 1 Tim. ii. 4, πάντας ἀνθρώπους θέλει σωθῆναι. Do not, by obstinacy or carelessness, frustrate His gracious purposes for your everlasting good. (Luke vii. 30.)

It is by no means probable, that 3000 persons were dipped by the Apostles and their assistant ministers, in one day, at

For an explanation of the readiness with which they ac-

Therefore it is said Peter stood up with the eleven (v. 14); and the hearers said to Peter and the rest of the Apostles, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" (v. 37.) Cp.

42. προσκαρτεροῦντες τῆ διδαχῆ τ. ἀ.—τῆ κοινωνία—καὶ ταῖς προσευχαῖς] "Here," says Bp. Pearson (in Acta Ap. i. 33; ii. 41. 48), "is the image of the Primitive Church. They who received the Apostles' word were admitted into the Church by Baptism; nor could they be received or become Christians by any other way than that; being admitted, they resorted to the Assemblies of the Church, in which they gave diligent heed to the teaching of the Apostles, and partook of the Holy Eucharist, and joined in the Common Prayers. And thus they were a model to joined in the Common Prayers. And thus all Churches, even to the end of the world."

Bp. Andrewes, in his admirable Sermon on this text (vol. ii. p. 55, "On the worshipping of Imaginations"), has developed these principles, and has applied them to the history of the Church in every age; and has shown that they are a safeguard against all innovations in Doctrine and Discipline.

To examine particulars,

Apostolic doctrine, τῷ διδαχῷ. Cp. Eph. iv. 5.

(2) They communicated in fellowship, τῷ κοινωνίᾳ, rendered by the Vulgate in communicatione fractionis panis, the words being combined with what follows, and being understood according to an εν διὰ δυοίν. Cp. 1 Cor. x. 16. And so Blunt, Early Church, p. 32. But 'fellowship' seems to be the true rendering. They were all of one heart, and they made open profession of communion in the same faith by external acts of fellowship with the same Apostolic Ministry. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, ii. 62, who observes that the Ministry of the Church consisted at this time "of two degrees,—(1) the Twelve, (2) the Seventy; both which wave over the result in this participate (-2)." were over the people in things pertaining to God;" and the Aads, or people, communicated in holy offices with them.

(3) τη κλάσει του άρτου] in the Breaking of Bread preparatory to the Holy Communion. Cp. 1 Cor. x. 16. "Eucharistiæ mentionem hic facit Syrus." (Rosenm.) See also Blunt, p. 32, and note below on v. 46.

Bp. Pearson says here, "Licet fractio panis possit victum communem tantum significare, tamen cum in coena Domini panis signanter frangi dicatur; cum in vetustissimis ecclesiis quotidie Eucharistiam celebrare moris esset; cum ex oblationibus à populo factis sumi solerent panis et vinum ad eum usum sacrum; dubitari vix potest, quin hic ter mille homines in quotidianâ communione et fractione panis cænam Domini celebraverint."

(4) ταιs προσευχαιs, in the Prayers; probably some stated common form of prayer or liturgy. Cp. Blunt, on the Early Church, p. 32.

Bp. Pearson remarks here, "Erant perseverantes in orationibus, publicis nempe atque communibus, in ipso cœtu ab Apostolis etiam factis. Sub lege Mosis nullum de precibus conceptum videtur mandatum; pii tamen sæpius in templo orabant; Baptista discipulos suos docuit orare. Unde unus ex discipulis Christo dixit, Domine, doce nos orare, sicut docuit et Joannes discipulos suos. (Luc. xi. 1.) Unde Christus Orationem eam protulit, quam Dominicam vocamus. Apostoli igitur, quibus Spiritus Sanctus omnia in memoriam revocavit, quæcunque antea Christus illis revelaverat, et ea Oratione usi sunt, et etiam alias usurpabant, à quibus vetustissimæ precum formulæ in omnibus ecclesiis pene eædem derivatæ sunt."

43. ἐγένετο-ἐγίνετο] Mark the difference of tense. Fear was inspired into the hearts of the multitude once for all, and remained there: signs and wonders were being wrought often by

 τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα] Cp. v. 19.
 44. εἶχον ἄπαντα κοινά] they had all things common. See on iv. 32-35. "Liberum cuique fuit facere hoc, aut non facere, ut ostendit Ananiæ exemplum (v. 4) et Apostolorum tempore collectæ in usum pauperum frequentatæ sunt, ex Apostolorum præ-scripto. I Cor. xvi." (Rosenm.)

There was a special reason for this communion of goods at

Jerusalem, where converts to Christianity would be regarded as renegades by the Jews, and be cut off from domestic intercourse, and from former means of subsistence.

Though this example does not bind now in the strictness of the letter, yet it always binds in spirit. See Rom. xii. 13. Gal. vi. 6. Heb. xiii. 16. Cp. Bp. Beveridge on Art. xxxviii. "Christian Men's goods not common."

45. ἐπίπρασκον] they were selling.—Observe the imperfects here and in the next verses, ἐπίπρασκον, διεμέριζον, μετελαμβανον, προσετίθει—giving a vivid picture of what was continually happening then, in the infancy of the Church, and has never been seen since that time in the same degree.

46. καθ' ἡμέραν π. δ. ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ] every day continuing with one accord in the Temple. A warning against the sin of schism. Although the Priests who officiated in the Temple at Jerusalem had slain the Prince of Life (v. 23. 36; iii. 15), yet His Disciples

See also next note.

- κλώντες-άρτον] breaking bread. Hence S. Ignatius, Eph. 20, ἔνα ἄρτον κλῶντες, i.e. receiving the Holy Eucharist. See on v. 42. "Significatur (says Bengel) victus quotidianus, cum quo persæpe conjuncta erat Eucharistiæ administratio: cf. xx. 7.
 1 Cor. xi. 20." Doubtless it describes the Christian ἀγάπαι. The words "daily bread," in the Lord's Prayer, were applied by Primitive Fathers to the reception of the Holy Eucharist as joined to the daily meal. See Clem. Alex. Pædag. ii. 10. Cyprian, Ep. 54. Blunt, p. 106, and note above on v. 42.

κατ' οίκον] at home, or in the house, or room to which they habitually resorted for worship. At home. So our English margin and the Syriac, and so Bengel, Meyer, and Alford. For this use of kar's olkov, see Rom. xvi. 5. Philem. 2. 1 Cor. xvi. 19. Clem. Rom. i. 1. Mart. Ignat. 7. There is a contrast between the Public Worship of the Temple and the religious offices of Christian Assemblies at home.

The sense is, While they resorted daily to the public service of the Temple, they celebrated (what they could not have in the Temple) the Holy Communion in their own oratory at home, perhaps in the same olkos, or room, as that mentioned above, ii. 2 (see note there), where the Holy Ghost descended on the Church upon the Day of Pentecost. See also below, v. 42, $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\tau\hat{\phi}$ $l\epsilon ρ \hat{\varphi}$, και κατ' ο lκον, where there is the same contrast.

The Apostles and primitive Disciples would not separate themselves from the Temple, but resorted habitually to it, in order that it might not be supposed that the Gospel, which they preached, was at variance with the Law of Moses; and in order that they might give a practical confirmation to their argument that Christ had been foretold by Moses and the Prophets, whose office it was to prepare the way for Him. At the same time they would not tempt any one to imagine that the Temple, with its ceremonial, "which was a shadow of good things to come" (Heb. x. 1), and whose body and substance was Christ (Col. ii. 17), could supply the spiritual needs of the faithful worshipper; they therefore assembled κατ' οἶκον, for prayer and praise, and for the administration of the Sacraments; probably in their own upper room, which had now become the Church of God. Happily for her, the difficulties hence arising were solved a few years afterwards by the destruction of the Temple, and by the abolition of its services. The demolition of the Jewish Temple was the

was the building up of the Christian Church. See above, p. 29.

— μετελάμβανον τροφῆς ἐν ἀ. κ. ἀ. κ.] they were partaking of food with one another, the rich being glad to distribute (1 Tim. vi. 18).—ἐν. ἀγαλλιάσει, rejoicing in the privilege of giving; and not doing it in a scrupulous or ostentatious spirit, but in singleness of heart, ἐν ἀφελότητι, in simplicity (Rom. xii. 8. Col. iii. 22). On the sense of ἀφελής—properly applied to land exempt from stones and pebbles, rendering the land sterile; and to smooth roads, - see Ruhnken, Lex. φέλλια, and Valck. here. And the poor were thankful for what they received (James i. 9), and did not conceal their gratitude.

47. Κύριος] the Lord. Observe the word Κύριος as used here.

The Apostles preached and baptized; but it was the Lord Who was adding those, who received the Word and Sacraments of Salvation, to the Church. Kúpios in the Old Testament is Jehovah, and in the New is Christ. Christ is one with Jehovah, and He adds believers to the Church, Κυριακή, the Lord's House; cp. on Luke x. 1, and above on i. 6, and i. 21. - προσετίθει] was adding.

 τουs σωζομένουs] present participle in a middle sense;
 and it designates those who were escaping (as it were) from the Flood, and taking refuge in the Ark, the Church; those who were flying from the bondage of a spiritual Egypt, and were entering on the way of salvation, toward the land of Promise; those who were being delivered from the death of sin, by incorporation into the σωτήριον σώμα τοῦ Σωτήρος, Eph. v. 23. Cf. v. 40, σώθητε ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς τῆς σκολιᾶς ταύτης, and S. Ignat. Polyc. i. πάντας παρακαλεῖν Ίνα σώζωνται, to escape, save themselves. And see below on xiii. 48.

"Calvinism has made great use of this text, and important consequences have been deduced from it. But the phrase of the original is τους σωζομένους, where the tense employed shows that the expression applies only to those who are in a state of salvation; as τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις (I Cor. i. 18) applies to the opposite; discouraging the Calvinistic interpretation." Professor Blunt (Duties of the Parish Priest, Sect. ii. p. 51). "It is remarkable that the tense used (viz. the present) is the only tense which excludes the Calvinistic interpretation; both the Future (σωθησο-μένους) and the Past (σεσωσμένους) would have favoured it." (Bp. Middleton, p. 369.) See further below on the kindred text, — καθ' ἡμέραν τῆ ἐκκλησία] daily to the Church. So E and the great majority of cursive MSS. D has ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ἐν τῆ έκκλησία. The words τη έκκλησία are not in A, B, C, and some ancient Versions, which read καθ ημέραν έπι το αὐτό Πέτρος δὲ The words τŷ ἐκκλησία are not in A, B, C, and some και Ἰωάννης ἀνέβαινον, as in the next chapter, v. 1. It is not improbable that τη ἐκκλησία may be a gloss here. In v. 41, St. Luke says simply προσετέθησαν ψυχαί ώσει τρισχίλιαι, but we have προσετίθεντο τῷ Κυρίῳ in v. 14. The use of ἐπὶ after προστίθημι is illustrated by Luke xii. 25, προσθείναι ἐπὶ τὴν ἡλικίαν αὐτοῦ πῆχυν ένα. And the junction of ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ with ἀνέβαινον is somewhat constrained and harsh.

Perhaps therefore with Bengel, Lachmann, and Alford we ought to read προσετίθει τους σωζομένους έπι το αυτό, and to commence the next chapter, Πέτρος δε και Ίωάννης. The words έπλ τὸ αὐτὸ are very significant, as expressing the Unity of Faith in which all were knit together; see i. 15.

Other Editors (Tischendorf, Bloomf., Meyer) retain the words τη ἐκκλησία, with Elz.

In such a case as this it seems best to allow the words to remain undisturbed, and to leave the question to the judgment of the learned reader.

If the words $\tau \hat{\eta}$ 'Eκκλησία are genuine, then this is the first place where the term Ecclesia, or Church, occurs, in this the divinely inspired History of the Church, where the word Ecclesia is repeated about twenty times.

The Holy Ghost does not specify any time of the imposition of the name "Church" on the congregation of Christians; but He introduces the word at once with the definite article (see v. 11). He displays the Church as already in being, and known as the divinely instituted Society which Christ had redeemed and purchased by His own blood. See xx. 28.

On the word Ἐκκλησία, see Matt. xvi. 18, and cp. below,

v. 11, the next place in the Acts where Έκκλησία occurs.

 CH. III. 1. ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό] See on ii. 47.
 Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης] Peter and John were going up. Chrys. remarks on the constant union of Peter and John in the later portions of the Gospel, and the earlier ones of the Acts. See John xviii. 16; xx. 3; xxi. 2—21. Acts iii. 3, 4. 11; iv. 19; viii. 14, and an excellent note by Mr. Humphry here, and on v. 6.

From the circumstance, that St. John is so often mentioned in combination with St. Peter, up to the time when Peter and John are sent to Samaria to confirm the baptized converts (viii. 14), and that St. John is never afterwards mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles; though St. Peter is mentioned nearly forty times after that occasion; it may perhaps be reasonably inferred, that St. John departed from Judæs, perhaps into Asia, not long after that time. St. John is mentioned as present at Jerusalem on the occasion of St. Paul's visit, Gal. ii. 9. Cp. Acts. xv. 2.

The connexion between St. John's Epistles and St. Peter's Epistles has been noticed in the Editor's Lectures on the Canon of Scripture (Lect. xi. 288), and below, in the Introduction to St.

John's Second Epistle.

The Fathers regard St. Peter as a representative of the practical life, and St. John of the contemplative. The junction of both under the influence of the Holy Ghost is necessary for the building up of the Church. Both must be united; both must seek for grace from above; both must go up together to the Temple to pray.

Concerning St. John's personal history, see above, Intro-

- την ἐνάτην] the ninth hour: when the evening sacrifice was offered. Joseph. Ant. xiv. 4. 3, below, x. 3, and see the Rabbinical authorities in Wetst. p. 471. The ὅρα τρίτη, third hour. the hour of the morning sacrifice, has been already mentioned,

 - θύραν - ὡραίαν] the door called Beautiful. Either of Nicanor, Joseph. B. J. v. 5. 3, or the Door named Susan, perhaps so called δια την ώραιότητα, as the City Susa was the City of Lilies (see Kuin. and Winer, ii. 580). Both these were on the eastern side of the Temple.

Here we have the word $\theta \iota \rho a$, in v. 10, $\pi \iota \lambda \eta$. The reason seems to be, that they used to bring the man to the $\theta \iota \rho a$, or door, before it was opened (see xiv. 27; xvi. 26, 27; xxi. 30), and when persons were passing through it he lay at the $\pi \psi \lambda \eta$, βλέψον εἰς ἡμῶς] look to us. "This suffices (says Sever. in Caten., where the MS. has ἀρέσκει, read ἀρκεί) for thy instruction and health. Look to us, the Apostles of Christ. In His Name, by His power, not ours, arise, and walk."

It appears that the Apostles had the power of discerning the spirit of this man whom they healed; for he showed his thankful piety by entering the Temple, and praising God (v. 9). And the clung to Peter and John (v. 11), and continued with them in their perils (iv. 14). Cp. Acts xiv. 9, and see below, where they speak of his faith (v. 16), which may supply a comment on this

Compare the healing of those who were bitten by fiery sers in the wilderness. The brazen serpent healed them by pents in the wilderness. The brazen serpent healed the the power of Him Who is the Saviour of all (Wisd. xvi. 7). in order to be healed, they must look at it. (Numb. xxi. 8.)

5. ἐπείχεν αὐτοίς] sc. τὸν νοῦν, Luke xiv. 7.

6. ἀργύριον και χρυσίον οὐχ ὑπάρχει μοι] silver and gold there is not to me—to me, who am a poor Galilæan. A proof of his compliance with Christ's command, Matt. x. 9, μη κτήσησθε

- πεποιηκόσι τοῦ π.] This use of ποιεῖν, followed by τοῦ, and an infinitive, and indicating the effect designed, is derived from the LXX. See Josh. xxii. 26, ποιῆσαι τοῦ οἰκοδομῆσαι. Cp. 1 Kings xvi. 19. A somewhat similar use occurs below, vii. 19, ἐκάκωσε τοῦ ποιεῦν, and xxvii. 1. Cp. Winer, § 44, p. 292.

— ἐδόξασε] he glorified Jesus. Observe the aorists. Ye denied Him and killed Him; but God glorified Him—even by

13. τὸν παῖδα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν] His servant Jesus. The word παῖs is applied to Christ in Acts iii. 26; iv. 27. 30. It is observable, that it is followed by the word ' $i\eta\sigma\hat{v}\hat{v}$, and is never used to describe the Eternal generation of the Divine Logos, but is employed to designate His generation in time as the Man Christ Jesus, and so marks the distinction of the two Natures in One Person.

It is probable that wais in these passages is not to be rendered child, but servant, being used by the LXX for the Hebr. עבר servus, and in this sense applied to Christ: see Isa. xlii. 1; xlviii. 20; xlix. 3. 5, 6; lii. 13; liii. 11; liv. 17. Zech. iii. 8, where δούλοs is used by LXX. Cp. Matt. xii. 18, and so Theophyl. p. 207, δούλον τον Ἰησούν καλεί διά το άνθρώπινον: cp.

The expression παι̂ς Θεοῦ, as applied in this sense to Christ by His disciples, is peculiar to the Acts of the Apostles. But this is what might be expected; and is an evidence of its genuineness and truth. At the time described in these earlier Chapters of this book, the minds of the Apostles must have been deeply impressed with a sense of the condescension, humiliation, and obedience of Christ, as seen in the scenes they had lately witnessed of His Agony and Passion. And it was a doctrine, which they were most concerned in inculcating now on the minds of the

St. Peter's speech is addressed to the Jewish people, and is still applicable to them. In the Unit St. Peter's speech is addressed to the Jewish people, and is still applicable to them. In it the Holy Spirit declares a solemn truth, viz. that the Coming of the seasons of Refreshment from the presence of the Lord, and of the Second Advent of Christ, and the Restitution of all things, are so ordered by Divine Wisdom as to depend on the Repentance of the Jews, and on their reception of the Gospel. Cp. Rom. xi. 25—27. Zech. xii. 10, and xiii. xiv.

Their Conversion must precede those glorious manifestations. Here is the true ground of appeal to the Jews. Repent ye, and believe, in order that the number of God's elect (which cannot be completed without you, cp. Heb. xi. 39, 40) may be accomplished, and His Coming and Kingdom may be hastened, and the happiness of the saints of old, who have departed in faith, may be consummated by the resurrection of their bodies, and you may be admitted in soul and body with them to the full fruition

This remarkable truth is expressed by St. Peter himself in his Second Epistle (2 Pet. iii. 12), where he exhorts his Jewish-Christian readers to live in holiness, expecting and hastening the Coming of the Day of the Lord. This is one of the many internal evidences of the genuineness of that Epistle.

— καιροὶ ἀναψύξεως] seasons of refreshing: ἀνάψυξιs is used by the LXX for π, from root π, respiravit se, Exod. viii. 15, applied to Pharaoh when he had a respite, or breathing-time,

The re-appearing of Christ is compared to a season of deliverance from antecedent grievous calamities. Cp. Luke xxi. 28, and Rom. viii. 19—23, quoted here by Chrys. The Church must expect severe tribulation from the power of Antichrist, before the Second Advent of Christ. The one will be followed by the other.

Then the present material world will be dissolved; and the faithful will be translated to the new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness, 2 Pet. iii. 13.

- ἀπὸ προσώπου] from the face. A Hebraism.—See Vorst. p. 337. Cp. 1 Thess. ii. 19.

20. καί] και appears to have here the sense of the Hebrew Vau, and to be used to join clauses which we should combine by when. See Gen. xix. 23. 2 Sam. iv. 7. Schroeder, Synt. Hebr. § 109, p. 329.

— προκεχειρισμένον] So A, B, C, D, E, and many cursive MSS. and Versions, for προκεκηρυγμένον. προκεχειρισμένον = προβεβλημένον, ήτοιμασμένον. (Hesych.) "præparatum" (Iren.). "destinatum" (Tertullian). Cp. Acts xxii. 14; xxvi. 16.

21. δέξασθαι] δέχομαι—connected with δέξια—to contain, to hold, to keep, suscipere. (Vulg.) Cp. Acts vii. 38; xxi. 17. James i. 21. This sense is authorized by Justin Martyr (Apol. i. 60), who uses the word κατέχειν, and by Theophyl., Œcumen., and others. So accipio is used by Virg. (Æn. vii. 209), "Hinc illum Corythi Tyrrhenâ a sede profectum Aurea nunc solio stellantis regia cœli Accipit, et numerum divorum ætatibus auget'' (Wetst.). The heavens contain Christ as Man; but as God He is ἀκατάληπτος, incomprehensible.

The Divines of Rome have endeavoured to reconcile this statement of St. Peter with the doctrine of Transubstantiation: but with what success may be seen by the following note of one of the most learned and ingenious among them, Corn. a Lapide: "Non docemus Christum cœlo evocandum ad Eucharistiam, quasi cœlum deserens locali motu descendat, hoc enim tantum fiet in die Judicii; sed quod manens in cœlo per Omnipotentiam Dei præ-sentem (i. e. carnaliter) se sistat in Eucharistiâ, sive id fiat per corporis Ejus replicationem, sive per acquisitionem novi loci (de quo disputant scholastici) idque invisibiliter et indivisibiliter, cum in calo sit visibiliter et divisibiliter respectu loci; alio enim loco (sc. cœli) est Christi caput, in alio collum, in alio pectus, in alio pedes; cum in Eucharistia omnia Christi Membra sint in eodem loco, puta in eâdem hostia eodemque hostia puncto."

- άχρι χρόνων ἀποκαταστάσεως] not to the season, καιρού, as if transitory, but to the times (permanent) of the fulfilment and consummation of those things which God promised by the and consumation of those things which God promised by the Prophets. See on Mark ix. 12, and on Acts i. 6. ἀποκατάστασις = τελείωσις (Hesych.): συμπλήρωσις (Schol. Mosq. ap. Grinfield); "plena rerum exhibitio" (Valck. on Luke vii. 10). So Œcumen. and Didym., who says, "Christ, having been received into heaven, remains there till the end of the world, when He will come again with power, and all that the Prophets have foretold will be accomplished;" and then all Christ's enemies, Satan and the world will be put under His fact and His mediatorial and the world, will be put under His feet, and His mediatorial kingdom be complete, and God will be all in all. See I Cor. xv. 25, 26. Heb. x. 12, 13; and Grotius and Rosenm. here, and note above on Matt. xxviii. 18.

The καιρός ἀναψόξεως is the season when Christ will re-appear. Cp. Luke xxi. 28, "Look up, for your redemption draweth nigh." But the χρόνοι ἀποκαταστάσεως, or times of restitution, in Christ and His kingdom. 22. Μωϋση̂s μέν] Having said that the Prophets all speak of Christ, he next appeals to Moses, the giver of the Law; and proves, that Jesus Christ is not contrary to the Law and the Prophets, but was preached by them, i. e. by all the Scriptures of the Jews, whom he is addressing.

 ω s èμέ] like unto me. Deut. xviii. 15; Moses said that God would raise up a Prophet like unto himself; viz. as a man persecuted in childhood, and saved in Egypt; resisted by those whom he came to save, and even by some of his own household; and as confronting and vanquishing the false prophets of Egypt, and a Mediator with God; speaking to God face to face,—speaking as "the meekest of men," yet zealous for God; a worker of miracles; dividing the sea (a type of Baptism); giving water from the rock, and bread from heaven (types of the Word and Sacraments); raising the serpent on the pole in the wilderness, as Christ was lifted up to die upon the cross.

Like unto me, and yet greater than I (cf. Heb. v. 3—6); for ye shall hear Him in whatever He shall say to you. He fulfilled the Levitical Law, and so took away that which was published by Moses, and therefore is greater than he. The likeness of Christ to Moses is beautifully, though silently, traced by St. Stephen in his speech to the Sanhedrim, Acts vii.; see the Preliminary note to that speech.

23 έξολοθρευθήσεται έκ τοῦ λαοῦ] The LXX have here (Deut. xviii 19) έγὰ ἐκδικήσω έξ αὐτοῦ.—ἐκδικήσω in the original is της, from root try, exquisivit, 'I will require it of him;' which is explained here by the Holy Spirit speaking by St. Peter to be tantamount to-He shall be punished with death, he shall be cut off, έξολοθρευθήσεται, -a word familiar to St. Luke's readers from the LXX, where εξολοθρεύω occurs frequently for της, exscidit, Gen. xvii. 14. Exod. xii. 15. 19. Lev. xvii. 4. 9. 14, and passim. See Aben Ezra in Surenhus. p. 401.

St. Luke does not follow here the LXX exactly, nor the Hebrew, but he gives the sense. This is one example among many of the practice of the Holy Spirit in the New Testament giving an explanatory paraphrase of His own words in the Old.

See on Matt. ii. 23.

24. ἀπό Σαμουήλ] from Samuel. Cp. 2 Sam. vii. 12-15.

CH. IV. 1. οτρατηγός του lepou] the captain of the Temple.

The officer of the Priest and Levites who kept guard at the Temple,-not a Roman functionary. See on Luke xxii. 4. Romans do not appear, in the Acts, as Persecutors of the Apostles.

- ol Σαδδουκαΐοι] the Sadducees, who say there is no resurrection (Matt. xxii. 23. Acts xxiii. 8); and therefore foresaw that their own influence with the people would be impaired, if the Apostles succeeded in convincing them of the truth of the Resurthe Resurrection. The High Priest and many of his assessors and associates were Sadducees. See v. 17. Cp. Joseph. Antiq. xiii. 9; xviii. 2.

Referring to a son of Annas, Ananus, who was afterwards High Priest, and a Sadducee, Josephus observes, that the Sadducees were distinguished above all his fellow-countrymen for cruelty in judicial causes, $-\pi\epsilon\rho l$ ràs $\kappa\rho l\sigma\epsilon is$ è μol $\pi a\rho a$ $\pi d\nu \tau as$ τobs 'Iovôalous. (Joseph. xx. 9. 1.) Such were the judges before whom the Apostles were arraigned (see v. 17). This circumstance, and the fact that the Sadducees rejected the belief in all spiritual and Angelic agency, and in the doctrine of a future Resurrection, may serve to account for what has been deemed in-credible by some, viz. the obstinate infatuation of the Sanhedrim in continuing to persecute the Apostles after the miraculous interference of God in their behalf.

For another reason see below on v. 23.

Gamaliel the Pharisee is better disposed to receive that evidence in their behalf. See v. 17. 33, 34.

4. ἐγενήθη] became.

ώσει χιλιάδες πέντε] about five thousand men. Here was a — ωσει χιλιάδες πέντε] about five thousand men. Here was a spiritual fulfilment of the prophecy contained in Christ's miracle on the mountain of Bethsaida, when He said to His Apostles, "Give ye them to eat." (Luke ix. 13. See Chrys.) Those who ate of the food provided by Him were about five thousand men:— ἄνδρες; cp. ἀνδρών here, and Matt. xiv. 21. Both miracles were wrought in the evening. Cp. Mark vi. 35. The Gospel is God's last reveletion. last revelation.

He Who fed the bodies of the 5000 on the mountain, by the hands of His Apostles, now feeds the souls by an Apostolic Ministry with the bread of life from heaven; and He will always continue to do so. Cp. John vi. 9. 13, and at end of the chapter.

6. καὶ 'Ανναν τὸν ἀρχιερέα καὶ Καϊάφαν] and Annas the High Priest and Caiaphas. Why is Annas here called the High Priest, and placed before Caiaphas-who was High Priest?

The reason seems to be, that though Caiaphas was High Priest de facto, being intruded into the office by the civil power of Rome (see on Matt. xxvi. 3), yet Annas was High Priest de jure, and was regarded as such ecclesiastically (see on Luke iii. 2). Hence our Lord was taken to Annas first (John xviii. 13, where see note).

Hence also St. Luke designates Annas as the High Priest here and in his Gospel (iii. 2), at the same time that he mentions Caiaphas in both places with, and next after, Annas.

After the Crucifixion, and for many years, the Civil power of Rome seems to have done no overt act spontaneously against the Christian Church:

Pontius Pilate, though he was Procurator till A.D. 36, is never mentioned as a persecutor in the Acts.

Indeed, what Tertullian records concerning the "Acta Pilati"—almost in conscience a Christian, "conscientia sua Christiani,"—and the consequent proposition of the Emperor Tiberius to the Roman Senate to divinize Christ (Tertullian, Apol. 21, and Apol. 5. Euseb. ii. 2), is too well grounded to be rejected (see Bp. Pearson, Opera Post. i. 342, and ii. 21); and it derives some confirmation from the remarkable fact, which appears from the silence of St. Luke, that for some years after the Ascension, Christianity had nothing to fear from the Roman

The persecutions of the Apostles and Christians at Jerusalem and in Palestine were set on foot, and carried on, by the spiritual power of the Jewish Hierarchy. Thus the bitterness of the Jewish Rulers against Christ and His Church is brought out more strongly by the contrast of the comparative mildness of the Heathen power of Rome. No wonder, that the agency of Rome was employed by God to destroy Jerusalem.

Annas was the Head of the Jewish Hierarchy. The nominee of Rome, Caiaphas, had, as such, a subordinate place. This seems to be the reason, why in the Evangelical narratives of the Crucifixion, which was the act of the Roman power, instigated by the Chief Priest and people,—and could not have been done without the fiat of the Roman Procurator (John xviii. 31),—Caiaphas, the Roman High Priest, holds the chief place. But, after that act, the Roman power was quiescent, and the responsibility and guilt of persecution lay with the Jewish Sanhedrim; and Annas, the spiritual Head of the Nation, is mentioned first, as here. See above on Luke iii. 2, and John xviii. 13.

It was probably on account of the position of Annas, as Spiritual Head of the Jewish Hierarchy, that five of his Sons were appointed to the High Priest's office by those who desired to conciliate the Jews, and paid some regard to the original law of here-ditary succession in that office.

Yet we read such observations as the following, in one of the most celebrated modern commentaries on this passage: "Da damals nicht Hannas, sondern Kaiaphas regiernender Oberpriester war, so muss hier wie Luk. iii. 2. eine irrige Angabe zugestanden werden." (Meyer, p. 87.) As if St. Luke, the friend and companion of St. Paul, the scholar of Gamaliel, and commissioner of the Sanhedrim, to say nothing of St. Luke's inspiration, did not know who the High Priest was, and is now to be set right by a modern Expositor!

— Ἰωάννην καὶ ἸΑλέξανδρον] John and Alexander. John was probably the son of Annas; and Alexander was the brother of the famous Jewish Historian Philo (Josephus, Ant. xviii. 8. 1. S. Jerome, Cat. Scr. art. Philo), and a man of great wealth. Josephus, B. J. v. 5. 3. Bp. Pearson.

7. $\ell \nu \, \tau \hat{\omega} \, \mu \ell \sigma \omega$] in the midst. The Sanhedrim sat in a semi-circle. See on vi. 12.

— ἐπυνθάνοντο] they were inquiring. St. Luke in the Acts is very fond of the imperfect tense; as if he had a picture of what he is describing, present to his eyes. See ii. 12. 44. 47; iii. 1, 2;

— ἐποιήσατε τοῦτο] ye did this; they will not say this mi-racle; they insinuated that it was done by some evil power, or by magic, as they had said of Christ's miracles (Luke xi. 15. John viii. 48); and so some said even in the fourth century. See Aug. de Con. Evang. i. 8 (quoted by A Lapide).

— $b\mu\epsilon\hat{\imath}s$] ye, spoken with contempt, and therefore reserved as the last word of the sentence—ye Galilæans!

8. Πέτρος πλησθεὶς Πνεύματος ἀγίου] Peter being filled with the Holy Ghost. Compare Peter a few days since in the Palace of the High Priest, thrice denying his Master from fear of prison and death, and now brought forth from prison, and confessing Christ before the same High Priest and the Sanhedrim, which had delivered Christ up to Pilate for crucifixion, and charging them with His murder; and declaring that the stone rejected by you, the builders of God's house, is become the Head of the Corner; nor is the salvation, which is promised by God, to be found in any other than Him, Who was crucified by you. How is this change to be accounted for? By inspiration—by the gift of the Holy Ghost. This is the only solution of this and of a wast number of other phenomena in Holy Scripture. Faith in the Holy Ghost, and in His Divine agency on the soul, makes those phenomena clear; without it they are unintelligible. above on ii. 12.

In the earlier Chapters of the Acts of the Apostles we see Peter and John on one side, and Caiaphas and Annas on the other: the former the Representatives of the Christian Church, the latter of the Jewish Hierarchy. There is a remarkable contrast between these two parties. May not Caiaphas and Cephas perhaps be from the same root NPD? At first Cephas had quailed before Caiaphas, but now that the Holy Ghost is given, Caiaphas cannot resist Cephas (v. 14); the one falls, the other rises. The reason is, because Caiaphas rejects the Corner Stone, and is bruised to pieces by it. (Matt. xxvi. 64. Luke xx. 18.) But Cephas is a lively stone, and is built upon it. (Matt. xvi. 18. 1 Pet. ii. 4.)

Annas and Jo-hannes are from the same root (gratiosus fuit), but John is strong in the Grace of God, and conquers thereby.

9. εὐεργεσία ἀνθρώπου] good deed done to the man; ἀνθρώπου is the genitive of the object. See on Matt. x. 1, ἐξουσίαν πνευμάτων. Luke vi. 12, προσευχ \hat{g} τ. Θεοῦ.

10. Ἰησοῦ Χ. τοῦ Ναζωραίου, ἐν ὁμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε] Jesus Christ the Nazarene, whom ye crucified. Think not that we desire to conceal His country, Nazareth, or His death, on the Cross. Ye crucified Him, but He was raised by God, and He now works miracles from heaven. (Chrys.) He quotes the title on the Cross.

11. ύμῶν τῶν οἰκοδομούντων] of you the builders (τῶν οἰκοδόμων, A, B, E), the appointed Teachers of Israel. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 2, and John iii. 10, σὸ εἶ ὁ διδάσκαλος Ἰσραήλ.

— els κεφαλὴν γωνίαs] to the head of the corner. Cp. St. Peter's declaration in his Epistle (1 Pet. ii. 6-8).

 ή σωτηρία—τὸ δεδομένον] Observe the articles ή and τὸ, which find a proper place in a speech to the Rulers of the Jews, who confessed that man's salvation had been provided for by God, and that in His Name men might be saved. St. Peter teaches them that the means of that salvation are to be found in Christ, and in His Name alone, which is therefore declared to be Divine.

Here is a proof of Inspiration. The Apostles and Evangelists were ἀγράμματοι και ἰδιῶται. They themselves confess it. And yet, who ever spoke, or has written as they did?

(3) The Heads of the Twenty-four courses of Priests, and all who were chosen into the Sanhedrim. Lightfoot, i. p. 439; ii. p. 109. And see on Matt. ii. 4.

24. δμοθυμαδόν ήραν φωνήν πρός τ. Θεόν] with one accord they lifted up their voice to God. The circumstances here mentioned confirm the opinion that the primitive Church at Jerusalem had a common place of resort for united prayer. As soon as Peter and John are released, they come to their own people (πρὸς τοὺς lδίους), and immediately all join in prayer, and the place is shaken where they were assembled, and they are all filled with the Holy

The refuge of the Church in the time of Persecution is Common Prayer. Cp. xii. 5.

One of the many incidents recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, by which the Holy Ghost teaches the Church her duty in all emergencies that may arise. This Book may, therefore, be called the Chart and Compass of the Church, in her voyage over the sea of this world to the haven of Eternity. See Introduction, pp. 12-20.

— Δέσποτα] The Hebrew Adonai, Lord and Master of the Universe. The God of the physical world is here invoked by the Church as one with the God of Grace; a refutation of the false notion which afterwards grew into a Heresy, in the hands of Marcion and the Manichæans, who separated the One from the Other, and made an opposition between them. Cp. S. Polycarp's Prayer at his Martyrdom, p. 620, ed. Jacobson, and Clem. Rom.

25, 26. Tra τί-αὐτοῦ] verbatim from the LXX. Ps. ii. 1, 2. ἔθνη (the Gentiles), and λαοl (the Tribes of the Jews collected at the Passover and the Crucifixion), have no article here: they have none in the Hebrew.

25. εφρύαξαν] properly said of horses, and their fremitus or snorting. (Ammon., Suidas, Wetst., Valck.) The Gentile world was typified by the untamed colt ridden by Christ. Matt. xxi. 2.
The word φρυάσσω is used by the LXX for the Hebrew expresses, therefore, rage and pride.

-Kiss the Son.'

28. ποιήσαι δσα-γενέσθαι] to do whatsoever things Thy hand and Thy counsel predetermined to take place; γενέσθαι, not πεποιῆσθαι. God decreed the salvation of the World by Christ, but He did not command or approve the means by which that consummation was brought about. But He showed His infinite power and wisdom by eliciting the greatest good from the worst evil, and by making Satan himself, the Arch-Enemy of God and men, to be an instrument in advancing God's glory, and the Salvation of Mankind. Cp. S. Leo (Serm. xvi. de Passione Christi, p. 142), who says—Did the sin of those who killed Christ arise from the counsel of God? No—we must not so deem of divine Very different and altogether contrary was that which was foreknown in the malice of the Jews, and that which was fore-ordained in the Passion of Christ. "Impias furentium manus non immisit in se Dominus, sed admisit: nec præsciendo quid faciendum esset, coëgit ut fieret; nec egit ut hæc vellent, sed cessit ut possent; et sic usus est occæcatæ plebis insanià, quomodo et perfidia traditoris, quem ab immanitate concepti sceleris beneficiis est revocare dignatus," &c. Besides (as S. Leo observes), "Nec ipsis interfectoribus suis misericordiam denegavit; sed impiorum malum in bonum credentium commutavit."

Cp. Bp. Sanderson's Lectures on Conscience, Lect. ii. 7, "Deus utitur alieno malo in bonum, sed nunquam facit malum, ut inde proveniat bonum; et omninò cavendum est, ne ejusmodi locutiones intelligantur, ac si Deus malum aliquod antecedenter vellet, approbaret, aut eligeret, velut medium ex sui naturâ conveniens ad alicujus boni finis consecutionem.'

See also note above on ii. 23.

In all discussions on this and other similar texts we must not lose sight of certain great principles.

 That God is the One Great First Cause.
 That He wills that all should act according to the Law which He has given them.

3. That it is His Will that Man's will should be free. As Aquinas says, 1^{ma} qu. 83, Art. 1 ad 3. "Non hoc est de necessitate libertatis, quod sit prima causa sui ad quod liberum est; sicut nec ad hoc, quod aliquid sit causa alterius, requiritur, quod sit prima causa ejus. Deus igitur est prima causa movens et naturales causas et voluntarias; et sicut naturalibus causis movendo, eis non aufert quin actus earum sint naturales, ita movendo causas voluntarias, non aufert quin actiones earum sint voluntariæ. Sed potius hoc in eis facit; operatur enim in uno-quoque secundum ejus proprietatem." See further on Predestination and Freewill, below, the Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans, pp. 194—198.
29. ἔπιδε] Some Editors have received ἔφιδε here from A, D, E, and so Winer, p. 43. Cp. Phil. ii. 23.

30. τασιν— Ἰησοῦ] Seemingly a paronomasia. The Greek and Latin Fathers gladly availed themselves of the resemblance in sound between 'Ιησοῦs and ἴασις (e. g. Cyril, Catech. x. Cp. Vol. I.—Part II.

Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 130), as they did of that between $\pi d\sigma \chi \alpha$ and $\pi d\sigma \chi \omega$. See Matt. xxvi. 2. And indeed these allusions do not seem to be despised by Holy Scripture itself. Cp. Luke xxii. 15, and on the paronomasias in other parts of the N. T., see 2 Thess. iii. 11.

Below, in chap. ix. 34, we have the expression, Airéa, laral σε Ἰησοῦs, perhaps the very words uttered by St. Peter, who may have had a special satisfaction in combining them together, as having felt the healing comfort of his Saviour's love after his own fall. Again, in x. 38 we read, Ἰησοῦς τος διῆλθεν ἰώμενος πάντας. The writer of the Acts, 'the beloved Physician' (Col. iv. 14), may also have felt peculiar pleasure in connecting the name of Jesus with his own healing art, and in fixing on the memories of his Greek readers, by a happy play of words, the gracious assurance that Jesus is the true Physician both of body and soul.

Unity.

— ἄπαντα κοινά] all things common. See on ii. 44. They — πith one heart and one soul, regarded themselves as one family, with one heart and one soul, with common needs and common joys and common sufferings. This is the perfection of that Unity in His Church, for which Christ prayed (John xvii. 21), and it showed as in a pattern, what all should aim to realize in spirit; though in this world it be not possible to exemplify it in the letter, as the history of the primitive Church itself shows; for even John the Apostole of Love had a house to offer to the Blessed Mary, and the Apostolic Epistles abound with precepts of almsgiving. And this unity of the primitive Church at Jerusalem is like a vision and foretaste of that perfect Love which will be the Life of the Church glorified in the heavenly Sion.

33. ἀπεδίδουν] were rendering (Matt. xxii. 21) their appointed testimony.

- χάριs] grace-from God.

34. κτήτορες χωρίων η οἰκιῶν] possessors of lands or houses. They gave the price of their lands and houses—not the lands and houses themselves. Perhaps there was a reason for this—partly in the commission of Christ to the Apostles to go forth "into all the world," and partly in the knowledge derived from the pro-phecies of Christ, that wars and public commotions were about to arise in Judæa; and from a feeling that it was their duty to wean their affections from the things of the earthly Canaan, and to fix them on those of their heavenly inheritance. The zeal of the primitive Church is happily described by Arator, v. 389:

> - turba perennem Portatura crucem, Dominumque secuta fidelem, Sprevit agros, habitura polos; hæc nempe facultas Fortior est de parte magis conquirere totum, Et quæstum per damna sequi."

Βαρνάβας - vids παρακλήσεως] Barnabas. The sense in which παράκλησις is here used is explained below, xi. 23, Βαρνάβας - παρεκάλει πάντας τ. π. τ. κ. προσμένειν τῷ Κυρίφ. He was the Son of Exhortation (on this Hebrew use of vibs, see on Matt. ix. 15), and therefore his name is derived from בר נבואה filius prophetiæ. Cp. ziii. 1.

It is also added there, where Barnabas is called a Prophet, that this name which is here rendered vibs παρακλήσεως was given him by the Apostles, probably at his baptism, soon after the descent of the Holy Ghost, when he was received into the Church of Christ. Perhaps also the word παρακλήσις was adopted to mark his mission from the Paraclete; for it is said that he was a good man full of the Holy Ghost (xi. 24).

This may suggest the question, whether new names, ὀνόματα канд (ср. Rev. ii. 17; iii. 12), were not commonly given at Baptism to those who were received into the Church; and whether the word ὁνομάτων may not therefore be used (Acts i. 15) with special significance for members of the Church,—
"Christian or baptismal Names."

Bp. Pearson here says, At what time Joseph surnamed Barnabas became a Christian, we are not informed by Holy Scripture. The ancients say that he was one of the Seventy Disciples. So Clemens Alexand. Strom. ii. 20. Euseb. i. 12; ii. 1. The Epistle extant under the name of Barnabas, is often quoted by ancient writers, e. g. Clemens Alexandrinus, Origen, the Apostolic Con-

" S. Hieron. in Catalogo: 'Barnabas Cyprius, qui et Joseph Levites, cum Paulo gentium Apostolus constitutus, unam ad ædificationem Ecclesiæ pertinentem epistolam composuit, quæ inter Apocryphas Scripturas legitur,'" and in cap. xliii. Ezekiel: "Vitulum autem qui pro nobis immolatus est, et multa Scripturarum loca, et præcipuè Barnabæ Epistola, quæ habetur inter Scripturas Apocryphas, nominat." "Nemo certè fuit qui hanc Scripturas Apocrypnas, nominat. Nemo certe thit diffinance epistolam Barnabæ non tribuerit, neque in eå quidquam apparet quod eam ætatem non ferat." Bp. Pearson here and in Vind. Ignat. pp. 128, 136, 195, 585; Tillemont, Mémoires, i. p. 174 and p. 298; and Hefele, Patr. Apost. p. 1.

36, 37. Λευΐτης.—ὑπάρχοντος αὐτῷ ἀγροῦ] a Levite, having land. Cp. Numb. xviii. 20 with Numb. xxxv. 1—8. Jerem. xxxii. 7. The case of Barnabas is mentioned here separately as a receptive cone, he was a Levite and so connected with the Jewish peculiar one: he was a Levite, and so connected with the Jewish Hierarchy, and entitled to receive tithe. The offerings therefore that he made, in contributing to the needs of his fellow-Christians, were more than ordinary, and gained for him justly the title which he bore. Besides, his deference to the Apostolic office was an intimation that the ministry of the Levilical Priesthood was now "ready to vanish away" (Heb. viii. 13), and that the Apostles and their successors in the Christian Church were henceforth to be regarded as the true Priests of the Israel of God. His submission was blessed by God, when he himself became an Apostle (xiii. 2). And thus the Levitical priesthood passed by a spiritual transition into the Christian Church.

the note on 1 Cor. ix. 6.

CH. V. 1. 'Aνανίας δνόματι, συν Σαπφείρη τῆ γυναικί] Ananias by name, with Sapphira his wife. As Adam with Eve his wife at the beginning.—"The woman is not without the man, nor the man without the woman" (I Cor. xi. 11) in punishment for sin, or in blessing for obedience.

On the Ionic form Σαπφείρη see Winer, p. 59. Cp. σπείρης from σπείρα, Acts x. 1; xxi. 31; xxvii. 1.

2 ἐνοσφίσατο] Something more than 'kept back part of,'—it signifies embezzled, purloined (see Tit. ii. 10), ἔκλεψεν (Gloss. Albert.), robbed another of what was his property; and here the Person defrauded is God. The offerings made were made to God, and He Who was despoiled was God. See v. 3.

It is observable, the same word had been used by the LXX to describe the sin of Achan, Josh. vii. 1, ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τοῦ αναθέματος; which was a sin of sacrilege. See on Josh. vii. 1.

Similarly, the sin of which Ananias was guilty, was sacrilege, and so Augustine considers it: "Detraxit de pecunia quam voverat Deo" (Serm. 148), and Ammonius (in Caten. p. 85) calls it ἐεροσυλία, and so Chrys. here (Hom. xii.), and S. Jerome (Ep. 8), and Ecumen. here, and others. And Hooker regards it as Sacrilege, VII. xxiv. 17, and cp. Mede's learned and instructive Essay on this narrative (Works, Book i. Dis. xxvii. p. 115), and Lord Clarendon "On Sacrilege" (Tracts, pp. 211-217, in Christian Institutes, iii. p. 405).

The substance of the comments above cited may be commended, in connexion with the awful history recorded in this chapter, to the consideration of those persons, who have been, or may be, tempted to be guilty of a like sin by robbing God in "tithes and offerings" (Mal. iii. 8), or in the matter of Church

Rates. See on Matt. xvii. 27.

3. εἶπε δὲ Πέτρος, 'Ανανία—χωρίου'] But Peter said, Ananias, why did Satan fill thine heart—. Thus Peter showed that he was enabled by the Holy Ghost to discern the spirits of men. See ψεύσασθαί σε το Πνεθμα] to defraud the Holy Ghost: ψεύσασθαι "cum accusativo (Deut. xxxiii. 29. Ps. lxvi. 3. Job vi. 10; viii. 18) aliquantò plus notat quàm cum dativo" (Bengel). Why hast thou permitted Satan to enter thy heart, and to tempt thee to endeavour to defraud the Holy Ghost, Who is in us the Apostles, and to Whom thou liest in lying to us; and to purloin a part of the purchase-money of the possession dedicated by thee to God?

4. οὐχὶ μένον] while it remained, did it not remain to thee? ad not to us. "We did not covet thy money. 'Si nolles vendere, quis te cogeret? Si velles offerre dimidium, quis exigeret totum?'" S. Aug. Serm. 148. S. Aug. Serm. 148.

- τί δτι] What is the reason that? Cp. v. 9, and Luke ii. 49. - οὐκ ἐψεύσω ἀνθρώποις] thou didst not lie to us men, but to God, Whom thou didst endeavour to defraud; thou didst not lie to us, but to the Holy Ghost in us; Θεδς οδν το Πνεθμα, Caten. to us, but to the Hoty Ghost in us; Geos our to Inventa, Caten. p. 85. Cp. Greg. Nyss. Orat. de Filio et Spiritu Sancto. Jeromin Isa. Ixiii. Ambrose, de Spir. Sancto, iii. c. 10, cited by Lorinus and A Lapide here, and Athanas. (de Incarn. p. 704). Greg. Naz. (p. 576), and Bp. Pearson on the Creed (Art. viii. p. 480), who says, "As certainly as the Apostles were men, so certainly was the Holy Ghost, in the esteem of St. Peter, God." Observe the aorist here, which makes this remark more cogent. In saying what thou didst say, obe evelow, thou didst not lie to men, but to God.

5. πεσων εξέψυξε] he fell down and gave up the ghost. It is not said, that St. Peter pronounced any sentence or imprecation upon Ananias, but that "he fell down and died." Almighty God was pleased to execute judgment without any human intervention. Aug. says, "Spiritus Sanctus mendacem sic punivit." God thus punished robbery of Himself—sacrilege. See Anonym. in Caten. p. 86, and S. Jerome's reply, Ep. 97, to the objections of Porφόβος μέγας ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς ἀκούοντας ταῦτα. 6 'Αναστάντες δὲ οἱ νεώτεροι phyry, who abused this Scripture as an occasion for charging the Apostle with cruelty. Porphyry's allegation, as Theophyl. observes, is an accusation against the Holy Ghost.

S. Jerome's words are, Ep. 97, p. 792, "Apostolus Petrus nequaquam imprecatur iis mortem, ut stultus Porphyrius calumniatur; sed Dei judicium prophetico spiritu annunciat, ut pœna duorum hominum sit doctrina multorum."

So S. Augustine (contra Parmenianum, lib. iii. c. 1). Cassian. et Isidor. Pelusiota, and Origen (Comment. in Mattheeum, tom. xv. § 15), οὐ Πέτρον γε νομιστέον ἀνηρηκέναι τὸν ᾿Ανανίαν, ἀλλ᾽ ἐκεῖνος οὐκ ἥνεγκε τὸν ἔλεγχον, καθικομένων τῶν λόγων Πέτρου τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτοῦ, βασανιζόμενος τοσοῦτον ὥστε και ἐκψῦξαι."

It is to be regretted, that some Romish Divines, in their desire to claim the temporal sword for St. Peter, and for the Roman See, have given credit and currency to the objection of Porphyry. See note on Luke ix. 54, and cp. below, xiii. 11, the case

A Lapide here is an honourable exception: "Fuit mors Ananiæ plaga à Deo inflicta. Vox Petri fuit tantum occasio et causa instrumentalis occisionis, eaque non physica sed moralis."

Almighty God also showed by this signal visitation that the Holy Spirit was indeed in St. Peter and the Apostles, and had enabled them to read the heart of Ananias, and to reveal his secret deeds; and so He established their authority in the eyes of the

If the artifice of Ananias and Sapphira had been successful, and had become known, then it would have been imagined that the Apostles had been guilty of falsehood and hypocrisy in claiming divine inspiration for themselves; and that our Lord's promise to them had failed (John xvi. 13).

It is observable, that at the first promulgation of God's laws, any breach of them has been generally punished in a signal and awful manner, for the sake of example and prevention of sin, and of punishment for sin. So it was now in the case of Ananias, on the first effusion of the Holy Spirit, and at the first preaching of the Gospel, "non crudelitate sententiæ, sed correctionis exemplo," says S. Jerome, Ep. 97. So it was in the case of Uzzah touching the ark when about to be placed on Mount Sion. (2 Sam. vi. 6-12.) So it was in the case of the man who gathered sticks on the Sabbath Day, at the first publication of the Decalogue. (Numb. xv. 32-36.) So, above all, it had been at the beginning, in the case of Adam and Eve.

Almighty God speaks audibly in His judgments upon sin once for all. He intervenes visibly in mercy, in order to prevent other transgressions, and so to save men's souls from sin and death. And having once spoken He holds His peace. He leaves these awful judgments-more awful because single-to be tests of men's faith, attention, and obedience; and for the most part He reserves subsequent transgressions for the Universal Judgment of the Great Day; of which these primary judgments have been a rehearsal, an earnest, and a warning. (See Chrys. here and Cassian.) Especially let the awful denunciations of Holy Scripture on the future punishment of liars be remembered here. Rev. xxi. 8. 27.

Whether Ananias and Sapphira repented in the hour of death, and whether they incurred death eternal as well as temporal by their sin (see Aug. l. c.), it would be presumptuous to inquire. The mysteries of Divine Judgment are inscrutable. Here is an exercise of humility. This we know, that there will be degrees of punishment and happiness in another world, and that "every one will be equitably dealt with." "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" (Gen. xviii. 25.)

6. of νεώτεροι] the young men, called of νεανίσκοι in v. 10, perhaps having an office in the Church. Cp. Blunt, p. 47. word בְּעֵרִים νεανίσκοι, is used for the military attendants of Abraham, Gen. xiv. 24.

- ξθαψαν] they buried. Cp. v. 10, where it is said that Sapphira was buried by the side of her husband.

Why is it mentioned that Ananias and Sapphira were

(1) To show that they were really dead, and to anticipate an objection which scepticism might suggest, that they only fell down

(2) To show that there was no feeling of personal vindictiveness on the part of the Apostles or the Church. A persecuting spirit in later times has mangled the dead bodies of those whom it has charged with heresy. It has even exhumed their bones (e.g. Wickliffe's) sleeping in the grave, and scattered them to the winds. But Primitive Christianity warred not with the dead; it wound up the bodies even of Ananias and Sapphira in a funeral sheet, and committed them to a decent grave.

(3) To teach the Christian duty of burying the dead; see

Among the Jews, burial took place speedily after death, not only by reason of the heat of the climate, but on account of the legal defilement from contact with the dead. Numb. xix. 11.

9. oi πόδεs] the feet: cp. Luke ix. 53, πρόσωπον πορευόμενον. The Spirit in Peter hears the sound of their feet. St. Peter had read the heart of Ananias: he now foretells the future concerning Sapphira. In neither case does he execute judgment; but in ing sapphira. In neither case does he execute jaughent; but in both cases he shows that he is inspired by the Holy Ghost, and that his authority is ratified by God. See on v. 5.

11. την ἐκκλησίαν] the Church. Hebr. της (whence Gr. καλέω, κλητοί, English call. See on Matt. xvi. 18). Here the Church of Christ is represented as already founded. Cp. above on ii. 47. Our Lord had spoken of His Church prophetically, and had used a word which St. Matthew represents by Εκκλησία to designate it (Matt. xvi. 18; xviii. 17). But it is not till after the day of Pentecost, and the events recorded in the first four chapters of the Acts, that the word Ecclesia, Church, appears to have been used to designate the Christian Society then founded and constituted. Before that time we hear of ονόματα and άδελφοί (i. 15), οἱ πιστεύοντες (ii. 44; iv. 4). Cp. notes below, vi. 3; xi. 26. But henceforth the word ἐκκλησία is of frequent occurrence, viii. 1. 3; ix. 31. αί ἐκκλησίαι, xi. 22; xii. 1, &c.

12. στος Σολομώνος] Solomon's porch. See above on iii. 2. The recollection of our Lord's Discourse delivered there, may have supplied a special motive for resort thither. Cp. John x. 23.

13. τῶν λοιπῶν] of the residue. Perhaps a temperate expression for the Rulers, contrasted with the Aads or people, as in v. 26, who were more courageous in professing Christianity (see the next verse) than their superiors, who had more to lose. So it had been with regard to Christ. See John vii. 48. Cp. 1 Cor. i. 20; ii. 8. A change for the better takes place vi. 7.

On the sense of κολλῶσθαι, to attach oneself and to cleave to, see Luke xv. 15. Acts ix. 26; x. 28.

 κάν] at least. 2 Cor. xi. 16.
 Πέτρου ἡ σκιά] Peter's shadow. From what is said in the verse following it would appear that cures actually ensued. The act itself of bringing the sick and laying them in the streets showed faith; and it might please God to bless such an act in a special manner at that time, in order to give additional authority to the doctrine preached by St. Peter and the Apostles; and to show that they were in an extraordinary degree filled with the Holy Ghost recently poured out upon them on the Day of Pentecost.

There was no cause for fear lest the people should regard the Apostles as sources of divine power, and not as channels: for Peter and the rest took care to obviate any such supposition. See iii. 13; xiv. 15. They assumed nothing to themselves, and ascribed all their efficiency to Christ. Indeed, these signs of a special outpouring of divine effluence were proofs of Christ's Ascension, and were manifestations of His glory. They showed that He had received gifts to give to men; and that He had sent what He promised. These miracles therefore were confirmatory of the faith and courage of the Apostles. They showed that though absent from them in person, Christ was present in power (cp. Matt. xxviii. 20). Christ, when on earth, had shed forth divine virtue on those who touched with faith the hem of His garment (Matt. ix. 20; xiv. 36. Mark vi. 56. Luke viii. 44). And now that He is glorified in heaven, He works by the shadow of Peter, and by the handkerchiefs of Paul (Acts xix. 12). So He fulfils His own prophecy, that they who should believe in Him when glorified should do greater works than He had done on earth (John xiv. 12), and He shows that they who touch Him by faith in His Word and Sacraments, duly ministered in His Church, may receive divine virtue from Him in their immortal souls.

Besides, the incident related in these two cases is a remarkable proof of the reality of the miracles wrought by the Apostles. The works done by them must have made a great impression to have produced such a result. They were not done in a corner. The sick were carried into the broad streets (πλατείας), and they were brought from the neighbouring cities, and were healed.

16. πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων] of unclean spirits. Another remarkable testimony against the Sadducees, now assailing the Apostles.

(1) The Sadducees said, that there is no Resurrection. (Matt. xxii. 23.) Peter preached it, and proved his doctrine by miracles.

(2) The Sadducees said, that there was no Angel. (Acts xxiii. 6.) Peter was delivered by one (v. 19).

(3) They said, that there was no Spirit. Peter was inspired by the Holy Spirit, defeated the lie of Ananias, whose heart was filled with the Evil Spirit (v. 3), and cast out unclean spirits.

So mercifully did the Holy Ghost confute error and teach the Truth. The following summary of some recent comments on St. Luke's narrative of the liberation of the Apostles shows, that the same sceptical spirit, which animated the Sadducees in their persecution of the Apostles, is still at work in endeavouring to invalidate the truth of the narrative which the Holy Ghost has vouchsafed to the Church of their sufferings and deliverances. "Der historische Bestand der wunderbaren Art und Weise dieser Befreiung ist nicht zu ermitteln. Luk. berichtet das Factum in sagenhafter Ausschmückung; jeder Versuch aber, die Umstände dieses Befreiungsactes auf einen blos natürlichen Hergang zurückzuführen (ein Blitzschlag, oder ein Erdheben habe die Thür geöffnet, oder, wie Thiess, Eck, Eichhorn, Eckerm. u. Heinrichs wollen, ein befreundeter Mensch, etwa der Gefangenwärter selbst oder ein beherzter Christ, habe den Kerker aufgethan) alterirt ganz die Tendenz und das Wesen des Textes. S. Storr Opusc. III. p. 186 f. Auffallend bleibt, dass in den nachherigen Verhandlungen, v. 27 ff. nichts über diese Befreiung und deren Thatbestand vorkommt. Daraus ergiebt sich die Unvollständigkeit des Berichts, nicht aber die Ungeschichtlichkeit der Thatsache selbst (Baur, Zeller), welche, wenn sie eine tendenzmässige Erfindung wäre, gewiss auch im Verhöre mit angebracht worden wäre. Auch die scheinbare Nutzlosigkeit der Befreiung (denn die Apostel werden doch wieder festgenommen) zeugt nicht gegen ihre Wirklichkeit, da sie, zur Festigung und Erhebung des Glaubensmuthes der Apostel selbst gereichend, schon hierin eine genügende ethische Bestimmung hat; dahingegen die Annahme, Christus habe durch seinen Engel dem Sanhedrin seine Machtlosigkeit darthun lassen wollen (Baumg. p. 108), nur dann hinreichenden Grund hätten, wenn der weitere Bericht dahin lautete, dass die Richter hier wirklich das Eingreifen himmlischer Macht in der Art der Befreiung erkannt hätten. Lange apost. Zeitalt. II. 2, p. 68, führt die Erscheinung auf einen visionären Zustand zurück; die Apostel seien befreit worden 'im Zustande des Geniuslebens, des zweiten Bewusstseins.' Das ist eingelegt." (Meyer, p. 107.)

17. ἡ οδσα αἴρεσις τῶν Ξαδδουκαίων] they who were the seet of the Sadducees. On this use of ἡ οδσα, see Kühner, G. G. 429. (Meyer.) The words ή οδσα αίρεσις seem to intimate, that the Sadducean sect, as a body, rose up against the Apostles (Alf.). The Sadducees were attached to Annas, in persecuting the Apostles, by their prejudice against the doctrine of the Resurrection. Ananias, afterwards High Priest, Son of Annas, and brother-in-law of Caiaphas, was a Sadducee. Joseph. Antiq. xx. 8: cf. Acts iv. 1; xxiii. 6.

On the word αίρεσιs = secta (from sequor), see xv. 5; xxiv. 5; xxvi. 5; xxviii. 22. Constantine (in Euseb. x. 5) calls the Christian Church, τὴν καθολικὴν, τὴν ἀγιωτάτην αἴρεσιν.

18. δημοσία] The public prison; and therefore the evidence of the miracle of their release was more notorious. So the malice of the Evil One was overruled for the glory of Christ.

19. ἄγγελος Κυρίου] an angel of the Lord. Lest it should be said that this was an earthquake, or other natural phenomenon, St. Luke adds the words which the Angel spake.

Lest also it should be thought by themselves or others, that they either might not communicate with the officers of the Temple, or were in antagonism to them, the Angel commands them to go and preach there.

On the frequency with which Angels appear in the History of the Acts of the Apostles, see below, xii. 15.

21. δπό τον δρθρον] at daybreak—so zealous were they.

— συνέδριον—γερουσία] Concerning the συνέδριον, or Sanhedrim, see Acts iv. 5—7; xxii. 5; xxiii. 6, and on Matt. v. 22, and Winer, R. W. B. ii. pp. 551, 552.

- τῷ ὀνόματι τ. - τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τ.] This name; this man. The priests falter and stammer, and do not venture to pronounce the Name of Christ. Peter utters it boldly v. 30.

It has been alleged (e.g. by Zeller, see above, v. 16) that it is incredible that, after the miracle wrought for the deliverance of the Apostles, the Sanhedrim should have continued to persecute them. And thence an exception has been taken against the veracity of St. Luke.

This objection would invalidate the History of the Old Testament as well as of the Gospel. After God's wonders wrought in Egypt, Pharaoh's heart is hardened; and even after their de-liverance from Egypt, and the miracles which God worked for them in the wilderness, the Israelites rebelled against Him. See the note on Matt. xv. 33.

So it is in the Gospel. The Sanhedrim confessed, "this man doeth many miracles" (John xi. 47), and yet they who say this are conspiring to kill Him Who wrought them.

Consider also the stoning of St. Paul at Lystra (Acts xiv. 19), after the miracle he had wrought there.

The solution of the supposed difficulty is to be found in the power of Satan over the human mind,—a power sometimes exercised on the mind even of Expositors of the Scriptures,—when it resists the evidence of truth, and is abandoned by the Holy Spirit, and is left to itself.

Besides, from the dominion then exercised by Satan in the world, and showing itself in lying wonders, the evidence from miracles was not so potent as might be supposed. The miracles of Christ and His Apostles were ascribed to the same agency as that which showed itself in Magic and Sorcery, even among the Heathen, and were confounded with their phenomena. Blunt, Lectures, p. 126.) So it will be hereafter; see the prophecies of Christ and the Apostles as to the Latter Days, Matt. xxiv. 24. 2 Thess. ii. 9.

Another reason has been suggested above, on iv. 1. But why (it has been asked by Zeller) were the Apostles delivered from prison, if on the next day they were to be arrested and brought before the Sanhedrim? Was not the miracle in vain?

No; it was a part of the evidence that God was pleased to give to the Jews, and particularly to their Rulers, of the truth of the Doctrine preached by the Apostles. It was a probationary exercise of their faith. Doubtless, though some hardened their hearts, others were persuaded. And so the work of sifting of the Nation went on, till the wheat was made ready for the barn, and the chaff for the fire.

- καὶ βούλεσθε] and ye desire to bring this man's blood upon us! The language of alarm, as Chrys. says, "Dost thou scourge!, and yet fear? Insult, and yet tremble? Judge, and yet quake?

So cowardly is sin."

They had forgotten that all the people had said (Matt. xxvii. 25), "His blood be upon us, and upon our children." (Bede.) 30. ξύλου] tree. Hebr. γ2. Cp. x. 39. Gal. iii. 13. 31. δψωσε τῆ δεξιᾶ] You lifted Him up on the Cross (cp. John iii. 14), God raised Him to His own Right Hand. Cp.

33. διεπρίοντο] they were being cut asunder in heart, as by a saw (πρίων), 'dissecabantur' (Vulg.), πικρῶς ἐχαλέπαινου (Gloss. Alb.).
34. Γαμαλιήλ] Gamaliel. The Master of St. Paul (Acts xxii. 3). Gamaliel the elder, the grandson of the famous Hillel.

It is observable that three persons bearing this name, Gama-liel, are mentioned in the Talmud; and all bore the name of Rabban, a title given only to four other doctors in Jewish history, and all were Presidents of the Council. See Lightfoot and Rosenm. Biscoe, p. 77.

These circumstances strengthen what will be said concerning Theudas in the following note.

κονία τη καθημερινή αί χήραι αὐτῶν.

36. Oevoas] Theudas. St. Luke has been charged with an historical error here (by Eichhorn, Credner, De Wette, Meyer, and even Neander), because it is related by Josephus (Ant. xx. 5. 1) that an insurrection was headed by Theudas, in the reign of Claudius, and Procuratorship of Fadus, more than ten years after this speech of Gamaliel.

On the plea of this supposed error, others (Baur and Zeller) have proceeded to deny the historical veracity of the speech of Gamaliel altogether.

The inaccuracy would be more glaring, -if inaccuracy there were, - because it is asserted by Gamaliel that the revolt of the Theudas mentioned here by him was before "the days of the taxing;" which took place only about ten years after the Nativity of Christ. See on Luke ii. 2.

In fact, if the allegation or maccuracy must have committed an anachronism of more than thirty years.

The circumstant of the surmise. The circumstant of the surmise.

cumstances of the two cases were very different.

The Theudas here mentioned had only about 400 followers, who προσεκλίθησαν αὐτῷ—a very gentle expression,—but the Theudas in Josephus πείθει τον πλείστον όχλον. They were two different persons.

The name Theudas was a common Hebrew one (see Origen, c. Cels. i. 6, and Wetstein here), from הייָה, confessio. persons bearing that name are mentioned by Lightfoot here (ii. p. 657). Indeed it is probably either the same name as Thaddæus and Judas (see Lightfoot and cp. Mintert in v.); or, if it is a Greek name, it is identical with Θεόδωρος-a very common appellation. There were two Apostles at the same time bearing the name of Judas; and two also bearing the name of John; and at least three persons of distinction, living nearly at the same time, bearing the name of the speaker himself, Gamaliel. Why then should any one be led, by the Critics above mentioned, to doubt the assertion, reported by St. Luke, that, in an age when such impostors were plentiful, there was more than one named Theudas within a space of forty years? If the Pharisee Josephus is to be believed when he writes of one Theudas, why should the Pharisee Gamaliel not be believed when he speaks of another?

Such doubts as these, however, have their use. They show, that there are many persons, of some reputation for critical acumen, who are in love with scepticism, and doubt for doubting's sake. Their doubts are, therefore, of less value, and will have less weight with reasonable men. Thus Infidelity often overleaps itself, and confirms the Truth.

- λέγων είναι τίνα έαυτόν] saying that he himself was somebody, for λέγων είναι τις αὐτὸς μέγας. Some MSS. add μέγαν (30 also viii. 9). Very different was the language of Ignatius (ad Ephes. iii.), οὐ διατάσσομαι ὑμῖν, ὡς ϐν τις. On this use of τις = some one (aliquis), see Winer, p. 163, and below, note on Gal. i. 7.

— προσεκλίθη] consented to; literally, inclined to, being swayed by him. This reading is authorized—though not literatum—by the best MSS., A, B, C, D, E, H, none of which have προσεκολλήθη, the reading of Elz.

37. 'Ιούδας ὁ Γαλιλαίος, ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῆς ἀπογραφῆς] Judas is called here a Galilæan, but Josephus (Ant. xviii. 1. 1) calls him ἄνδρα Γαυλανίτην. And if that had been the only passage of Josephus in which Judas was mentioned, St. Luke would, doubtless, have been charged with an inaccuracy here also by some sceptical expositors. But, fortunately, Judas is mentioned in another place by Josephus; and there he is called a Galilæan (Joseph. Ant. xx. 5. 2. B. J. ii. 8. 1).

Similarly, if Josephus had written more fully on the times preceding Judas, doubtless he would have mentioned another Theudas. See v. 36. In the present case, Gamaliel and St. Luke are confirmed by Josephus (Ant. xviii. 1. 1; xx. 5. 2. B. J. ii. 9. 1), and St. Luke's words "in the days of the taxing," are happily explained by the fact recorded by the Jewish Historian, that, in the presidency of Quirinius, A.D. 6, when the Taxing, which had been only an ἀπογραφή, or Eurolment of names, or Census, at the time of the Nativity (see on Luke ii. 2), was followed up by an amortungus, or levying of imposts and rates in money on the persons and property registered, Judas of Galilee (as he is called here, and by Josephus, Ant. xviii. 1. 6, and xx. 5. 2), or Gaulanites (of Gamala, on s.E. of the sea of Galilee), arose in revolt, and said that "the ἀποτίμησις brought with it manifest slavery" to the people of God from a heathen power; and he excited the people to rise in defence of their freedom and religion.

The words of Josephus (Ant. xviii. 1. 1) are, παρῆν Κυρήνιος εἰς την Ἰουδαίαν, προσθήκην της Συρίας γενομένην, αποτιμησόμενος αυτών τας ούσίας ... οί δε, καίπερ το κατ' άρχας εν δεινφ φέροντες την επί ταις ἀπογραφαις ἀκρόασιν, ὑποκατέβησαν και ἀπετίμων χρήματα. — τους Έβραίους] the Hebrews. Jews, specially of Palestine, who spoke the Syro-Chaldaic tongue, and read the Scriptures in Hebrew, or in Chaldaic paraphrases, and who claimed to themselves special privileges on account of their Hebrew extraction. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 22, Έβραῖοί εἶσι; κὰγώ. Phil. iii. 5, Ἑβραῖος εξ Εβραίων.

— παρεθεωροῦντο al χῆραι abτῶν] their Widows were being neglected. See below, ix. 39-41.

On the status of the $\chi \hat{\eta} \rho a i$, or Widows, in the primitive Church, see notes on 1 Tim. 7. 3-16.

2-6. προσκαλεσάμενοι οἱ δώδεκα τὸ πληθος] the Twelve having called together the People. A pattern of the true principles of Church Polity. The Twelve convene the $\pi\lambda \hat{\eta}\theta os$, or People, and propose what is to be done; the People approve the proposal (v.5), and elect seven persons, who are presented to the Apostles, and are ordained by them. Cp. Hooker, Eccl. Polity, VIII. vii.

— οἱ δώδεκα] The Twelve Apostles therefore were still at

 οὐκ ἀρεστόν] It does not please. "Non placet" (Rosenm.);
 the Apostles omit ἡμῶν in modesty; and to make the assertion more general. Cf. v. 5, ήρεσεν, and xii. 3, and John viii. 29.

— τραπέζαις] tables. Not for money-changing (as Matt. xxi.

12, and Luke xix 23), but public tables of the Church; for $\epsilon l\chi o \nu$ analy a kolvá (ii. 44; iv. 32), at which the widows were fed. Cp. the use of $\tau \rho d\pi \epsilon \zeta a$, Acts xvi. 34. 1 Cor. x. 21. The daily ministration did not consist in distributing money, but food.

It is probable that the Holy Eucharist was administered at these daily repasts. See Bp. Pearson here, who observes that these τράπεζαι were partly common and also sacred: "hoc est, in communi convictu, sacramentum Eucharistiæ celebrabant."

3-6. ἐπισκέψασθε οὖν—τὰς χεῖρας] Look ye out, therefore, brethren, men of yourselves, well reputed, seven, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may set over this exigency (xpelas). The Apostles do not disparage this business of relieving the poor widows; it is a χ_{pela} , an urgent need. But we will continue constantly in prayer and in the ministry of the Word—the special duty of Apostles, and Bishops of the Church. Up to this time there were two Orders of Ministers in the Church, -Apostles and Presbyters (see on Luke x. 1); now, under the direction of the Holy Ghost, the Apostles institute a third Order-that of

The institution of this Order arose from an occasion of a secular kind, though not altogether so; for the Tables were in some respects sacred (see on v. 2); and, as Bp. Pearson here observes, the office to which these seven were appointed was not only economical, but ecclesiastical. Men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom were chosen (v. 3), and they were ordained with prayer and laying on of hands of the Apostles (v. 6); and having been so chosen and ordained, they performed the sacred functions of baptizing and preaching the Word (Acts viii. 36. 38); but they are distinguished from the Apostles, in that they could not administer Confirmation (viii. 14, 15).

On the necessity of the Order of Deacons, as well as of Bishops and Presbyters, to the due constitution of a Church, S. Ignatius says, ad Trallianos 3, πάντες έντρεπέσθωσαν τους διακόνους . . . και τον επίσκοπον . . . τους δε πρεσβυτέρους χωρίς τούτων ἐκκλησία οὐ καλεῖται.

These Seven are not here called by the name which the Church in the time of the Apostles, and ever since, has assigned to the third Order of Ministers, viz. the name of Deacons.

But this is according to the ordinary manner of the writer of the Acts of the Apostles. We do not hear of the imposition of the word Ecclesia on the Society of believers (see above, ii. 47; v. 11; and see on the word χριστιανοί, xi. 26). But the Society is formed first, and then a name (not a new word, but one already in use in the Greek language) is used in speaking of it.

So it was with all the Three Orders in the Church. First the thing existed; there was no display made in giving it a namebut a word is used to describe the thing, already received and practised in the Church. A striking instance of this may be seen in the first mention of πρεσβύτεροι, xi. 30, where we find that they have been already installed, and were exercising authority in the Church, before we have ever heard of their name. So it is here. Seven men are appointed, and it is said, not without some prophetic intimation of their future name, that their office is $\delta i \alpha \kappa o \nu \epsilon \hat{\imath} \nu \ (\nu.\ 2)$, $\delta i \alpha \kappa o \nu \epsilon \hat{\imath} \nu \ \tau \rho \alpha \pi \epsilon \zeta a is$. The manner of their election and ordination is carefully described; their functions and acts are recorded. And so the matter rests for a time. But when we come to read the Epistles of St. Paul, we find an order of the Church in well-defined existence, and with functions fully recognized—and that Order is there called, by a name then generally known, the Order of Deacons (Phil. i. 1. 1 Tim. iii. 8. 12), and that Order can be traced downward from those Epistles through the writings of the early Fathers, e. g. Ignat. Eph. 2, Mag. 2, Trall. 2, where he says that "Deacons are not merely ministers of food and drink, but servants of the Church of God;" Philad. init. and 10, 11; Polyc. Phil. 5; Mart. Ignat. 3; God;" Friiad init. and 10, 11; Polyc. Fnii. 5; Mart. Ignat. 3; Justin M. Apol. ii. p. 92; Origen in Matt. xxi., who says, "we learn from the Acts of the Apostles that Deacons preside over the Tables of the Church." Cp. Basil, ii 306, περὶ διακόνων. Jerome, ad Evangel. Epist. 101, p. 803; Tertullian, de fugâ, c. 11; S. Cyprian, Ep. 65. See Bingham, Book ii. chap. xv., and the remarks of Hughes, Dissert. Procem. in Chrys. de Sacerdot plants.

No other time has ever been assigned for the appointment of Deacons, than the occasion which is described in this Chapter, and which has been regarded from ancient times as the date of their institution. See for example, S. Iren. i. 27, who calls Nicolas one of the Seven "qui primi ad diaconium ab Apostolis ordinati sunt," and so Euseb. H. E. ii. 1. As Bp. Pearson says here, "ἀπὸ τοῦ διακονεῖν dicti sunt διάκονοι, de quibus sæpe in Epistolis Apostolicis legimus; quorum officium nullibi quam in hoc loco (Act. vi. 1) legitur institutum. Ut autem hi septem viri Apostolis adjuncti sunt in procurando ministerio quotidiano, ita in primitiva Ecclesia Diaconi semper Episcopis, Apostolorum successoribus, adjuncti sunt."

Accordingly the CHURCH of ENGLAND, which declares that "it is evident unto all men, diligently reading the Holy Scripture, and ancient Authors, that from the Apostles' time there have been these Orders in Christ's Church, -Bishops, Priests, and Deacons" (Preface to the Ordinal), says, in the heading of this Chapter in the Authorized Version, that "the Apostles appoint to the office of deaconship seven chosen men, of whom Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, is one;" and in her office for the Ordering of Deacons she says, that "God did inspire the Apostles to choose into the Order of Deacons the first martyr St. Stephen with others;" and she appoints the beginning of this chapter of the Acts to be read as an Epistle at the Ordering of Deacons. Cp. Hooker, V. Ixxviii. 5, and Bp. Andrewes, Serm. iii. p. 66, on Acts ii. 42, and Letter to De Moulin, p. 168.

3. έπτά] seven. Not that the number of Deacons was to be limited to seven (cf. Euseb. vi. 43), but probably as being a sacred number, and perhaps as indicating the completion of the Ecclesiastical Orders; and with reference also to the Sevenfold gifts of the Spirit (Isa. xi. 2).

Στέφανον, κ.τ.λ.] Stephen. The names here of the Seven are Hellenistic, and show a deference to the desires and needs of the Ἑλληνισταί (v. 1).

S. Irenœus (iii. 12) says that "Stephanus electus est ab Apostolis primus Diaconus," and S. Aug. (Serm. 300) observes that St. Stephen is named first among the Deacons, as Peter is a significant intimation of his view of the among the Apostles,—a significant intimation of his view of the nature of St. Peter's Primacy.

— Φίλιππον] Philip; the Evangelist, Acts xxi. 8. Cp. viii.

and charged with heresy and licentiousness by S. Irenœus (i. 27), S. Hippol. (Philosophumena, p. 259), and by Tertullian, S. Hilary, S. Jerome, and others, and identified by them with the leader of the Nicolaitans. See Rev. ii. 6. 14, 15. Mémoires, ii. 20 and 223.

It has been supposed by some that the word Nicolaitan in the Apocalypse is only a Greek accommodation to the Hebrew Balaam, בַּלֶּע, from root בָּעָל dominatus est, or בָּלֶע, devoravit, and Dy, populus. The charges against Nicolas have been denied by Clem. Alex. Strom. iii. p. 436. Cp. Euseb. iii. 29.

If they are true, then the case of the last in the list of the Seven Deacons may convey similar instruction to that suggested by the last in the list of the Twelve Apostles. See on Matt.

- προσήλυτον] a proselyte. Hence it is clear that Proselytes as well as born Jews were now admitted into the Church. probable that the Author of the Acts himself was also "a Proselyte of Antioch," See above, Introduction to his Gospel.

On the providential dispensation traceable in the existence of the class of Proselytes of the Gate, as a preparatory provision for the extension of the Gospel, see the excellent remarks in Bp. Pearson's Concio, p. 32.

6. ἐπέθηκαν α. τ. χεῖραs] "Ordination" (says Ammon.) "is accompanied with Prayer and Laying-on of hands, and so the dignity of the Diaconate was given at the beginning; and this custom is still observed."

They were ordained with Prayer. Ordination consists in this. The hand of him who ordains is laid upon the head of him who is to be ordained; but the effect of the act is from God.

Precibus impositio manuum accedebat, more Judæorum (Num. xxvii. 23), ut demonstrarent δεικτικῶs pro quo precarentur, et cui bona apprecarentur, et quem sisterent Deo. 7. δ λόγος ηδέανε] the Word was increasing. Remark the imperfect tense; even under persecution the word was growing. God elicited good from evil. There had been a murmuring (v. 1), but it was made the occasion of fresh growth in the Church. Such is the History of the Church, guided by the Holy Ghost. derives strength from opposition. One of the most instructive characteristics of the Acts of the Apostles is its frequent record of the Victories achieved by her over evil and from it. See Introduction above, pp. 7-11.

 Λιβερτίνων] of Libertines. The Talmudists reckon 480 different Synagogues at Jerusalem. Lightfoot, i. p. 362; ii. p. 664.

St. Luke distinguishes the name of this Synagogue from the following names, which are geographical, by prefixing the words της λεγομένης. If the word Libertini had been designed, as some suppose, to describe the inhabitants of a country, he would hardly have described them as he does. The Aißeptivoi, libertini, were Jewish freedmen of Rome and Italy, 'Ρωμαΐοι ἀπελευθερωθέντες (Chrys.), descendants of some who had been carried away captive to Rome by Pompey. See Philo (legat. ad Caium, ii. p. 568), who mentions many Jews inhabiting the Trans-tiberine region at Rome; and adds that 'Pωμαΐοι ήσαν οί πλείους ἀπελευθερωθέντες. Tacitus (Annal. ii. 85) speaks of "quattur Millia libertini generis, Judaica superstitione infecta." Cp. below, xviii. 2; Cp. below, xviii. 2; xxviii. 17.

- Κυρηναίων και 'Αλεξανδρέων] of Cyrenians and Alexandrines. A fourth part of the population of Cyrene consisted of Jews (Joseph. Ant. xiv. 7.2; xvi. 6.1), and three of the five districts of Alexandria were occupied by them. Joseph. Ant.

Perhaps we may explain the presence of these Hellenists at Jerusalem at this time, by the supposition that it was now some great Festival,-probably the Passover, when they came up to Jerusalem; and when many of the Jews would be in a more excited state of zeal for the Law, and against the Gospel.

άπὸ Κιλικίας] of Cilicia. Perhaps Saul of Tarsus in Cilicia (xxi. 39; xxii. 3) was among them. Cp. Wieseler, p. 63.

Whether it continued to sit there at this time is not certain. The members of the Council were arranged in a semicircle, the President occupying the seat in the middle point of the curve. authorities in Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 552.

speaking words against this holy place and the Law. A similar charge of blasphemy had been made against Christ, Mark xiv. 56. 58. Cp. Matt. xxvi. 61. John ii. 19. 21.

This accusation is the clue to the interpretation of St. Stephen's speech in the following chapter.—Elz. adds βλάσφημα after βήματα, but it is not in A, B, C, D.

CH. VII. 1, 2. 'O δέ ἔφη] PRELIMINARY NOTE on the Seventh

The Sperch of St. Stephen before the Jewish Sanhedrim at Jerusalem may be regarded as the first Christian "Apologia contra Judæos."

On this Oration it may be premised,

First, that it cannot be understood unless it be regarded as the language of the Holy Grost (see vi. 10; vii. 55), speaking by the mouth of St. Stephen, and replying, not only to the words but also to the thoughts of his hearers. It is full of indirect and allusive refutations of Error, and of similar assertions of Truth, concerning Jesus Christ, Who is always present to the mind of the speaker, though-for fear of provoking some blasphemous expressions from his exasperated audience, and of being checked in his speech by an outbreak of their rage—he never mentions His Name, till at length it bursts forth in his dying ejaculation, "LORD JESUS, receive my spirit" (v. 59).

This speech is of inestimable value, as a divinely-inspired

Summary of Old Testament History; and as a divinely-inspired Commentary upon it; and as teaching the world, on the authority of the Holy Ghost, how that History is to be read; especially with regard to Christ and Christianity. St. Stephen, the Hellenist and Deacon of the Christian Church, is arraigned before the Jewish Sanhedrim, who would have restrained God's favours to particular persons (viz. themselves and their own nation) and to a particular place, viz. Jerusalem. They charged him with contempt of the Temple and Law, which were confessedly of Divine Institution; and with asserting that Jesus of Nazareth would destroy their Holy Place, and "change those customs" which Moses, the Lawgiver delegated by God, had delivered to them (vi. 14).

St. Luke distinctly says that these charges were false (see vi.

13); and St. Stephen retorts them on his accusers. The following is a PARAPHRASE of the Speech :-

St. Stephen shows that the presence and grace of God is not limited to Judgea; that the "God of glory appeared to Abraham, our Father;" and thus St. Stephen affirms that he himself—a Christian, is a son of Abraham (see also vv. 11, 12)-God, he says, appeared to Abraham, not in Judea, but when a stranger in a heathen land, Mesopotamia. Abraham, the Father of the Faithful, was, in fact, a foreigner. And in this land, Judæa, which they regarded as the special abode of God, Almighty God wanter they regarded as the special about of tody, ranges acrifice appeared to Abraham before any Temple existed, or any sacrifice was offered at Jerusalem, and He did not give to Abraham, "the friend of God," "the father of the faithful," even "so much land as to set his foot on." God said, also, that the promised seed would be foreigners in a strange land, and be in bondage there; and that afterwards they would come out and serve God in this place.

All these promises, he shows, were independent of, and prior to, the Levitical Law. They were made before Abraham received the seal of circumcision; by which Infants of eight days old were admitted into covenant with God under the Law (v. 8).

He then shows that the practice of particular persons, especially of their own ancestors and of themselves, is no safe measure and rule of what is right in the eyes of God; and thus he tacitly replies to their imaginations, that because Jesus of Nazareth, claiming to be the Messiah, had been rejected and put to death by themselves, the seed of Abraham, the favoured people, the ministers of God's Temple, therefore Jesus was justly condemned and punished. For, says St. Stephen, the Patriarchs themselves, being filled with envy, sold Joseph their brother into Egypt 1; as you for envy delivered Christ to Pilate (Matt. xxvii. 18). They rejected Joseph as you have rejected Jesus.

But God was with Joseph as He was with Jesus. He delivered Joseph from all his afflictions, as He delivered Jesus from the grave; He made Joseph ruler of Pharaoh's house, as He has exalted Jesus with His own right hand to be ruler of His Church and of the world. And when a great dearth and famine came on the land, then Joseph-the despised and rejected Joseph-sold by his brethren the Patriarchs, in whose name you glory so much, Joseph—not in Judæa, your favoured land—no, but in Egypt, heathen Egypt—he fed Jacob and the Patriarchs there. And in due time-not at first-he was made known to his brethren; as you in God's good time and by His grace may look on your brother Whom ye have pierced (Zech. xii. 10), and Who fed the bodies of five thousand with a word, and Who in His Word and Sacraments is providing for the immortal souls of all true Israelites, in what you regard as little better than a heathen Egypt, viz. the Christian Church, now open to you and to all nations, who hunger for the bread of life; and so all the world may be reconciled and meet together in a fraternal embrace in the true Joseph, Christ Jesus.

Jacob and the Patriarchs died - not in Canaan, but in Egypt -and the bones of the Patriarchs were taken from Egypt and were buried, not in Egypt it is true, but yet not in Machpelah at Hebron, the royal, priestly city in Judæa, where those of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob lie. And therefore, although it be very fitting that those of the same family should be buried together, yet do not imagine that the sanctity and blessedness of a peaceful death and burial are limited to a particular spot. No; the bones of the Patriarchs themselves were taken to a place which you now abhor, and to which you now give an opprobrious name (see on John iv. 5)—Sychem—not a Jewish city—but one which belongs to those with whom you will have "no dealings" (John iv. 9)—the Samaritans.

That place itself, Sychem, was originally the property of It was not an inheritance of Abraham; he had no inheritance in Canaan, but it was purchased by him for money of those who were uncircumcised. (See v. 16.)

In course of time Moses, our great Lawgiver, was born, and was exceeding fair (v. 20), as Christ is fairer than the children of men (Ps. xlv. 3). Moses was not born in Canaan, but in Egypt, and he did not scorn to be a learner in all the wisdom of that country (v. 22); and so was an example to you, who despise all foreign learning, especially the Hellenistic literature.

The Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Stephen, now proceeds to answer their thoughts concerning Christ, by reference to the history of their own divinely appointed Lawgiver Moses. In speaking of Moses he tacitly refers to Christ (cp. Acts iii. 22); and while we hear what he says of Moses, we may understand him as speaking of Christ.

When forty years were fulfilled, Moses came to visit his people, as Christ after forty days was presented in the Temple, and is come in the fulness of time to visit you; and when Moses saw an Israelite in distress he delivered him, as Christ has delivered those who were afflicted and oppressed by the devil (Acts x. 38). But the brethren of Moses understood not his mission; as Christ came to His own and His own received Him not (John i. 11). And when Moses would have reconciled them they resented it, and said, "Who made thee a Ruler and a Judge over And so you have dealt with Christ, Who desired to unite all God's children, Jews, Samaritans, and Gentiles, in one,—and you have said of Him, "We will not have this man to reign over (Luke xix. 14. John xix. 15.)

When forty years more were passed, Moses came forth from the wilderness, as Christ came forth from the forty days' fast in the desert, and began his ministry with a visible mission from God, Who sent him by the hand of the Angel of His presence (Christ Himself) in the fire of the Bush, the type of His Church. not always triumphant in this world, but often tried in the furnace of affliction, and yet never consumed. Therefore do not suppose that because Christ allowed Himself to be afflicted by you, and because His Church is now persecuted by you, therefore He is not God. Do not imagine that Jerusalem is the only place which is holy in God's sight. No; the Bush, the type of God's Church, was on holy ground, though it was not in Judæa, but in the wilderness of Mount Sina in Arabia (v. 33). The whole world is the field of Christ's Church. (Matt. xiii. 38.)

Your Fathers rejected Moses, and you have crucified Christ. Yet Moses was a deliverer appointed by God (v. 35). Moses was stopped by his hearers. But he spoke to Posterity and the World; and we by the light of the Gospel are able to understand his allusious which were not clear to them.

In this Paraphrase certain points of allusion are expressed which may be justly supposed to have been in St. Stephen's mind, and to have suggested the topics of his Speech, though they are not explicitly developed in it. If they had been expressed, he would have been Vol. I.—Part II.

"mighty in words and deeds," and so was Christ; Moses wrought wonders in Egypt and in the Red Sea, and in the wilderness. Christ has wrought greater wonders in delivering you from a worse bondage, and drowning the enemies of your souls by Baptism in the Red Sea of His blood; and He is ever working wonders during the whole pilgrimage of His Church in the wilderness of this world. Moses foretold, that another Prophet should arise from among them like unto himself, that is, in human form; like him in acts, and like him in being resisted by those whom he came to save. "Him shall ye hear" (v. 37). See above, iii. 22, 23. That Prophet has risen among you. In rejecting Him ye have despised Moses, of whom you boast. Not I, but you, have spoken blasphemous words and have done blasphemous deeds 'against Moses, and against this place and the Law." was with the Church in the wilderness. So Christ is ever with His Church in her journey to the heavenly Canaan. He was with Moses then (v. 38. 1 Cor. x. 3 5). Your fathers resisted Moses, and in tempting him they tempted Christ (1 Cor. x. 9). Moses received the lively oracles of God's Holy Word to give to you. Christ has authorized that Word; He is the living Word of God.

Your fathers would have returned to heathen Egypt, the land of bondage; they made a calf even in Horeb, where God gave the Law. God has witnessed against them by the mouth of His Prophet (Amos v. 25. Cp. here, vv. 42, 43). Did you offer sacrifices to Me? No; but you preferred the Tabernacle of Moloch to My Tabernacle, and the Star of your God Remphan, to the Pillar of Fire and the Cloud. He therefore threatened to carry them into captivity beyond Babylon.

God vouchsafed all these revelations to Abraham, Joseph, and Moses, at a time before even the Tabernacle existed. That Tabernacle was made from a pattern in the heavens, anterior to all God's revelations; and God in His love and mercy vouchsafed to lead you into this land by Jesus the Son of Nun, the type of the true Jesus, the Saviour of the world.

God vouchsafed His favour to David while as yet no Temple stood. The Temple of which you boast, saying, "The Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord" (Jer. vii. 4), was not built by David, "the man after God's own heart," but by Solomon, whose heart was turned away from God to worship idols. God was pleased to place His Name at Jerusalem, and to show His Glory in the Temple of Solomon; yet He declares by His prophet (Isa. lxvi. 1), that "Heaven is His Throne: what House will ye build Me? hath not my hand made all these things?" His Temple is the Universe.

Ye who boast of your Circumcision are uncircumcised in heart and ears. Ye who call yourselves the children of the Prophets, "Which of the Prophets have ye not killed?" (Matt. xxiii. 31.) Ye are always rebelling against the Holy Ghost, Who spake by them; and ye have betrayed and murdered the Just One, whose coming they foretold. Ye who make your boast of the Law, and accuse me of blaspheming it, me who acknowledge it to have been given by the ministry of Angels, and honour it as such, ye have received that Law, but have not kept it.

As to the language in which this speech was delivered, it may, perhaps, have been Greek (so Meyer and others). From Acts xxi. 40; xxii. 2, it appears that St. Paul's audience at Jerusalem were agreeably surprised when St. Paul addressed them in Hebrew. They expected that he would speak in Greek: St. Stephen was a Hellenist, and almost all his references to the Old Testament are to the LXX Version. And the use of the Greek tongue in proclaiming the Gospel to the Jewish Sanhedrim would seem to be in accordance with the purport of his speech, which was, to show that God's favour was not limited to the Hebrew Nation.

On the other hand, it may be observed, that St. Stephen would be desirous to conciliate his auditory and to consult their feelings, which were not favourable to Hellenism, and to show them that he revered the language in which the Ancient Scriptures, to which he refers, were written; and that standing, as he was, arraigned of despising the Law of Moses, he would comply with their reasonable prepossessions, and become, as St. Paul afterwards did—of whom he was the forerunner—"a Jew to the Jews." (1 Cor. ix. 20.)

in a speech beginning with the same words as St. Stephen's, i. e. addressed to the πατέρες as well as άδελφοι (xxii. 1), renders it probable that St. Stephen also spoke to the Sanhedrim in Hebrew: and perhaps this may have been one reason why they listened so long to his address.

There is an expression at its close which seems to confirm this opinion, θεωρώ τους ουρανούς ἀνεφγμένους, τ. 56, "I see the heavens opened." The word ουρανός in the singular occurs about sixty times in St. Luke's Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. But there are scarcely two or three passages where οὐρανοί in the plural is used. The only one in the Acts is ii. 34, in a speech addressed by St. Peter to the men of Israel (v. 22), probably in Hebrew. The plural of obpavol is the Hebrew קשמים; and if Stephen had spoken in Greek, he would probably have used the singular, or St. Luke, according to his custom, would have used that number, and not the plural.

Dr. Lightfoot does not hesitate to say (ii. 662), that St. Stephen "would not plead before the Sanhedrim in any language but Hebrew."

Some cautionary words are requisite here, in reference to certain criticisms of several statements in this speech.

Our Lord promised to His Disciples to give them the Holy Ghost; and accordingly, as this book informs us, He sent the Holy Spirit from heaven upon them, on the Day of Pentecost. He foretold that they would "be brought before Councils (συν-έδρια) for His Name's sake;" and that "the Holy Ghost would speak by their mouth" (Matt. x. 17. Mark xiii. 11. Luke xii. 11), and that "He would give them a mouth and wisdom, which all their adversaries should not be able to gainsay or resist" (Luke xxi. 15. Acts vi. 10). And all this should be for a Witness,— a Martyrdom. St. Luke here adopts the words of Christ and applies them to St. Stephen (Acts vi. 10), who is brought before the Council; and he calls him "a man full of the Holy Ghost, and says that his adversaries could not resist the wisdom with which he spake, and he dies the first Martyr for Christ.

Let us consider the words of Christ's promise in the Original, Mark xiii. 9, παραδώσουσιν ύμας είς συνέδρια ένεκεν έμοῦ είς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς, ὅταν δὲ ἀγάγωσιν ὑμᾶς, μἡ προμεριμνᾶτε τί λαλήσητε οὐ γάρ ἐστε ὑμεῖς οἱ λαλοῦντες, ἀλλὰ τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἄγιον. Luke xxi. 15, ἐγὼ δώσω ὑμῖν στόμα καὶ σοφίαν ἢ οὐ δυνήσονται ἀντειπεῖν οὐδὲ ἀντιστῆναι πάντες οἰ αντικείμενοι ύμιν, and Luke xxi. 13, αποβήσεται ύμιν είς μαρ-τύριον.

Compare with these promises the narrative concerning Stephen, Acts vi. 5. 10, Στέφανος πλήρης Πνεύματος άγίου. 8, Στέφανος πλήρης χάριτος (cp. vii. 55) . . . καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυον ἀντιστῆναι τῆ σοφία καὶ τῷ πνεύματι ῷ ἐλάλει.

It is true, that our Lord did not make this promise to St. Stephen personally. But surely there is no violence in applying His words to one, who is characterized, as St. Stephen is, by the Holy Ghost in Holy Scripture as the First Martyr (cp. Acts xxii. 20), and whose Martyrdom is so fully described by Him, and occupies so prominent a place in the history of the Christian Church, as the chosen specimen of all Christian Martyrdoms; and it could hardly have been said by St. Luke, that Stephen was full of the Holy Ghost, and that they could not resist his words, if (as some recent criticisms allege ') there are mis-statements in St. Stephen's speech concerning the very rudiments and alphabet of Jewish History, which any pupil of Gamaliel, and much more the learned Rabbis of the Sanhedrim, before whom he spoke, would have refuted and exploded, and which would have exposed him and his cause to derision.

The allegations in question, when reduced to their plain meaning, involve the assumption, that the Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Stephen (who was 'full of the Holy Spirit'), forgot what He Himself had written in the Book of Genesis; and that His memory is to be refreshed by biblical commentators of the nineteenth century!

This kind of Criticism is animated by a spirit very alien from that Christian temper of reverential modesty, gentleness, and humility, which are primary requisites for the discovery and reception of truth. Mysteries are revealed to the meek (Ecclus. iii. 19). Them that are meek shall He guide in judgment; and such as are gentle, them shall He learn His way (Ps. xxv. 8). But such a spirit of Criticism seems willing to accept any suppo-

Meyer concurs in the allegation of historical errors, but saye that they are not surprising. "Die historischen Verirrungen bei dem in Drange des Augenblicks extemporirten Vortrage gar nichts Auffallendes haben." (Meyer, p. 131, 3rd ed. 1854.) And on v. 1, "Ste-then hat irrthumlich u. s. w." And on v. 16, he says, "Mithin hat

Steph. eine Verweiselung begangen."

No wonder, that other Expositors, proceeding on the same supposition, should advance a step further, and deny the genuineness and authenticity of the speech,—as has been done by Baur and Zeller. It is to be deplored, that similar allegations have found their way into some English Expositions of this Speech. It is therefore more necessary to examine them.

sition, however fanciful, except that of its own fallibility! It is ready to allege that St. Luke is in error in saying that St. Stephen was full of the Holy Ghost. It is ready to affirm that St. Stephen was forgetful of the elements of Jewish History. It is ready to concede, in short, any thing and every thing, except that itself can err; or that there are some things which the Evangelists and First Martyrs knew better than itself.

No wonder that it is given over by God to a reprobate mind. No wonder that it falls into strange errors, and what is worse, misleads others into fatal delusions; and yet professes to guide them into the truth. It pretends to explain Scripture, and yet would shake our belief in its Inspiration, and sap the foundations of the Faith.

We do not indeed say, that there is nothing hard to be understood in this Speech of St. Stephen—or rather in this Speech of the Holy Ghost speaking by him. But we may confidently affirm, that the greatest difficulties here are those which are not in St. Stephen's Speech, but have been created by mis-statements of some who have criticized it. These imaginary difficulties arise from a lack of appreciation and intelligence of the scope of the Speech itself, and of the design of the speaker. And as will be shown presently (see for instance on v. 16) the difficulties themselves, which some see, who have not duly considered that scope and design, will, when more closely examined, be seen to be fraught with divine power and beauty. Understanding the control of the doubtedly, after all, some difficulties there will be ever in God's Holy Word—not from itself, but on account of our ignorance in reading what is written. The Written Word—like the Incarnate Word-is "set for the fall and uprising of many in Israel" (Luke ii. 34). These difficulties of Scripture are appointed to be exercises of our faith, trials of our meekness, stimulants of our hope, and the discipline of our wisdom; and if we treat them as we ought to do, then the time will come when they will all be cleared away from our sight, and we shall see the Truth as it is, and know even as we are known.

Having said thus much on the general tenour of the Speech, we may now address ourselves to a consideration in detail of the Objections that have been raised against certain statements in it.

It will be most convenient to place these Objections together, and to consider them seriatim, in the order of the Speech.

OBJECTIONS.

3. εlπε πρòs αὐτόν] and He (God) said unto him, Get thee out of thy country.

Objection .- Nothing is said in Gen. xi. 31, of any call that Abraham received in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran.

Reply.—But it is said, Gen. xv. 7, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees to give thee this land;" and cp. Joshua xxiv. 3, "I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood;" Neh. ix. 7, "Thou art the Lord the God who didst choose Abraham, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees."

It is therefore acknowledged by the Rabbis that there were two calls of Abraham.

(1) from his country and kindred (Ur); (2) from his father's house (in Haran).

See Philo de Abrahamo, t. ii. p. 11. 16, ed. Mang. έμα τῷ κελευσθήναι μετανίστατο-το μέν πρώτον από της Χαλδαίων γής εὐδαίμονος χώρας—εἰς τὴν Χαββαίων γῆν' ἔπειτα οὐ μακρὰν ὕστερον, καὶ ἀπό ταύτης εἰς ἔτερον τόπον. P. 12, 8, ὅπως δ' οδν βεβαιώση την φανείσαν δύιν ἐν διανοία παγιώτερον, φησίν αὐτῷ δ ἱερὸς λόγος—μετανάστηθι—διὰ τοῦτο την πρώτην ἀποικίαν ἀπὸ της Χαλδαίων γης είς την Χαββαίων λέγεται ποιείσθαι. Joseph. Ant. i. 7. 1, 'Αβραμος καταλείπει την Χαλδαίαν, έβδομήκοντα καί πέντε ἔτη γεγονώς, τοῦ Θεοῦ κελεύσαντος. Cp. Clem. Rom.

S. Chrys. and Œcumenius have suggested as probable, that Terah was induced to emigrate from Ur by the vision in which God appeared to Abraham his son; and that his obedience to the exhortation of his son, is contrasted with the disobedience of the Jews to God their Father. (See Lightfoot, i. 780; ii. 665; and Wetstein here, p. 494, and cp. Schoettgen, p. 433, and Whitby, p. 442.)

4. μετά το άποθανείν τον πατέρα αὐτοῦ] when his father was

Objection .- This is inconsistent with the history in Genesis. Terah begat Abraham when he was seventy years old (Gen. xi. 26). Abraham came from Haran into Canaan when he was seventy-five years old (Gen. xii. 4).

If then Abraham left Haran after Terah's death (as St. Stephen here says), then Terah could not have lived more than 70 + 75 years = 145 years. But in Gen. xi. 32, it is said that the days of Terah were 205 years.

Therefore (it is alleged) either St. Stephen or St. Luke is mistaken here.

Reply.—It is not said in Gen. xi. 26, that Terah was not more than seventy years old when he begat Abraham. But it is said that he lived seventy years and begat Abram, Nahor, and

According to the objection above specified, Terah had three sons in one year. But it may be said, Abraham is mentioned first, and was therefore his first-born, and was born soon after his father attained his seventieth year. But this is inaccurate. Abraham is mentioned first, not because he was the first-born, but because he was the Father of the Chosen Seed; cp. Gen. v. 32, where Shem is mentioned first for a similar reason. It is acknowledged by several of the Rabbis, that Abraham was Terah's youngest son. See Theodoret ap. Lorinum. Lightfoot, ii. 666. Bp. Kidder on the Messiah, ii. 225. Cp. Lord A. Hervey on the Genealogies, pp. 83. 200.

It is observable, that Isaac, Abraham's son, married Rebecca, the granddaughter of Abraham's brother Nahor by the youngest of his eight sons, Bethuel (Gen. xxii. 22). And such a marriage would seem to intimate that Abraham was a younger brother of Isaac was born late, it is true, when his father was a hundred years old (Gen. xxi. 5), but this was only thirty years more than Terah was, when his eldest son was born. If, as many of the earliest Rabbinical and Christian Expositors suppose, Sarah was the same as Ischah (Gen. xi. 29), then, since Abraham was only ten years older than Sarah (Gen. xvii. 17), it would seem that Abraham was born many years after Haran.

On the whole, nothing has been adduced to show that Abraham was more than seventy-five years old at the time when Terah died, being 205 years of age, and that Abraham did not abide in Haran till the time of his father's death; which indeed, on many accounts, it is very likely that he would do, as otherwise it might be said that Canaan was given by promise to Abraham's father, rather than to Abraham, and that he inherited it from his earthly father, and not directly from God.

St. Stephen is therefore careful to distinguish Abraham's acts from those of his father; hence his mention of his father's death. Abraham stands independently and alone, as the father of the faithful. It is for this reason that his call from Ur of the Chaldees is specified by St. Stephen (see above on v. 3), and not Terah's.

 Objection.—The Israelites were not in Egypt more than 215 Cp. Gal. iii. 17. Exod. xii. 40 . see the note there.

Reply. - It is not said by St. Stephen that they sojourned in Egypt 400 years, any more than it is in Gen. xv. 13. 16, that they would be in Egypt 400 years. But St. Stephen says that they were strangers for that time.

St. Stephen's argument is, that God's favour is not confined to a particular place or nation. And it was enough for him to show that Abraham and the chosen seed were sojourners, -without pausing to specify the several places in succession where they sojourned. For a considerable time the Land of Promise itself was to them a strange country. See Heb. xi. 9.

The chronology is as follows:-

Abraham in Haran	5 years
	11
From the birth of Ishmael to that of Isaac	14
	30
From birth of Isaac to birth of Jacob	60 years
From birth of Jacob to birth of Joseph .	90
To Joseph's death	110
To birth of Moses
To the Exodus	80
	400

7. λατρεύσουσί μοι έν τῷ τόπφ τούτφ] they shall worship Me in this place, i. e. in Horeb, -not in Canaan.

Objection .- These words are not found with the previous ones in Gen. xv. 13, 14.

Reply .- No: but they are found in substance in Exod. iii. 12. 18; vii. 16, with which St. Stephen rightly supposes his hearers to be conversant.

Nothing was more common among the Hebrews than the combination of two prophecies of Holy Scripture, especially in rapid addresses by word of mouth. Our Lord Himself authorized the practice. See notes above on Luke iv. 17, and on Matt. ii. 23. St. Stephen's statement is, that God had said, that the Israelites would be sojourners and bondsmen in a strange land, and that He would punish the Nation which oppressed them (Gen. xv. 13, 14), and that afterwards they should worship Him έν τόπφ τούτφ, where the second prophecy was delivered; i. e. not in the promised land, but in the wilderness of Sinai. And St. Stephen's argument is, that therefore the Jews are not to K 2 imagine that God can be worshipped only in Judæa and at Jeru-God Himself had appointed, that He should be worshipped by their forefathers in the wilderness of Arabia, at Mount Sinai, before any worship was offered to Him in the City of Jerusalem, on Mount Sion.

9. ἀπέδοντο els Αίγυπτον] they sold him into Egypt.

Objection .- Joseph's brethren sold him to the Midianites (Gen. xxxvii. 28), but they did not sell him into Egypt.

Reply.-This is a common use of the middle voice. is said to have purchased a field, because he gave occasion to its purchase (Acts i. 18). They sold him to persons who, as they saw, were going into Egypt (Gen. xxxvii. 25). And therefore Joseph himself says, that they sold him into Egypt (Gen. xlv. 4). Let not St. Stephen be censured for adopting Joseph's words in relating Joseph's history.

St. Stephen, in speaking of Joseph, has his thoughts fixed upon Christ (see PARAPHRASE above, p. 65). And he intends here to say, that as Joseph's brethren were guilty of selling their brother into Egypt, because they sold him to some who carried him there, so the Jews themselves were guilty of crucifying Christ, because they delivered Him up to Pilate to be crucified.

Cp. St. Peter's words, Acts ii. 23. 36; iv. 10; v. 30.

14. ψυχαις έβδομήκοντα πέντε] threescore and fifteen souls. Objection .- This is inconsistent with Gen. xlvi. 27. Exod. i. 5. Deut. x. 22, where it is said that the souls which went down with Jacob to Egypt were seventy.

Reply .- It is said by some that St. Stephen follows the LXX, in saying that seventy-five came down with Jacob. But this is doubtful. In Gen. xlvi. 27, the Alexandrine MS. of the LXX has not the words μετὰ Ἰακώβ. And it is said by the LXX in Exod. i. 5, that all the souls from Jacob (i. e. including those of Joseph) were seventy-five; and it is also said in the LXX (Deut. x. 22), that they who came into Egypt were seventy.

The true answer seems to be ;-

St. Stephen (as his argument led him to do) is reckoning up all the family of Jacob, inclusive of his own children and their children, and not only those who came down with Jacob into Egypt.

The Hebrew Original does not say that the souls which went down with Jacob were seventy, but

1. That all the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his loins, were sixty-six (Gen. xlvi. 26).

It says also,

2. That all the souls of the house of Jacob which came into Egypt were seventy (Gen. xlvi. 27).

In the former of these two statements the following are not enumerated-

Jacob himself.

Joseph, and Joseph's two sons, viz.

Manasseh,

Ephraim; which being added, make up seventy; the number specified in the latter statement.

But St. Stephen says that Joseph sent for his father Jacob, and all his own kindred, συγγένειαν αύτοῦ, not ἐκγόνους Ἰακώβ: έν ψυχαις έβδομήκοντα, i. e. so as to make up, or which in course of time made up, a number of seventy-five souls.

This use of ev with a dative for the Hebrew ? (see Winer, Gr. Gr. p. 349), and equivalent to els with an accusative, is very common. See Glass. Phil. p. 485.

The number seventy-five, which St. Stephen specifies, consists of the seventy mentioned Gen. xlvi. 27, together with the issue of the sons of Joseph's own sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, Machir (son of Manasseh), Galaad (son of Machir), Sutalaim (sons of Ephraim),

Edom (son of Sutalaim), as stated in the LXX of Gen. xlvi. Cp. Numb. xxvi. 28—37. 1 Chron. vii. 14—20.

And thus the number 75 or threescore and fifteen is made

The addition of these five was not accidental. Indeed the reader may be sure, that in this and all the other seeming variations between this speech and the Hebrew Original, there is no inconsistency, but agreement, and something more, viz. there is the groundwork of an additional argument in the pleading of the Speaker. The addition in question was very relevant to St. Stephen's cause; for thus he affirmed, that those born of Jacob's line in Egypt, the strange land and house of bondage, were equally children of the promise with those born in Canaan, the pro-mised land; according to what Jacob himself says of the Sons of Joseph born in Egypt, "as Reuben and Simeon; they (i. e. Ephraim and Manasseh) shall be mine" (Gen. xlviii. 5).

Thus,-in opposition to the prejudices of his hearers who would have restrained to themselves God's promises, -St. Stephen declares the antecedent probability of the extension of God's promises to all nations of the earth; which was in fact intimated in the preference given by Jacob to the younger son, Ephraim, before the elder, Manasseh (Gen. xlviii. 17-20).

 μετετέθησαν εἰς Συχὲμ, καὶ ἐτέθησαν ἐν τῷ μνήματι ἔ ὼνήσατο ᾿Αβραὰμ τιμῆς ἀργυρίου παρὰ τῶν υίῶν Ἐμμῶρ τοῦ Συχέμ] they were carried over into Sychem and were laid in the Seputchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor (Hamor) the (son-not father) of Sychem.

Objection .- This assertion of St. Stephen (it is said) is wholly inconsistent with the history in the Book of Genesis. For,

1. Jacob was not buried in Sychem, but in Machpelah, before Mamre at Hebron, in the region which afterwards belonged to Judaa; about 20 miles South of Jerusalem, and where Abraham and Sarah, Rebecca and Isaac were buried; see Gen. xlvii. 30; xlix. 29; l. 13.

Reply.-It is not said by St. Stephen that Jacob was buried at Sychem-but that the Patriarchs were.

Joseph was buried in Shechem, or Sychem (see Joshua xxiv. 32), near Mount Gerizim (see John iv. 5. 20, 21), in Samaria. And at this day there is at Sichem a tradition to this effect, "in which, by a singular coincidence, Jews and Samarians, Christians and Mohammedans agree." Robinson, Palestine iii. 109.

The other Patriarchs were buried there also. See S. Jerome, Ep. 86, who says, concerning Paula, "Venit Sichem, quæ nunc Neapolis appellatur, atque inde divertens vidit duodecim Patriarcharum sepulchra." And in his treatise De optimo genere interpretandi: "Duodecim Patriarchæ non sunt sepulti in Arbes (Hebron), sed in Sychem." Cp. Syncellus, p. 150, and Bede in loc. p. 34, and Whitby here, pp. 443-4. See also the authorities from the Jewish Commentators quoted by Lightfoot here (vol. ii. p. 668), and Wetstein, p. 496, and Robinson, Palestine iii. 119.

It is not affirmed by St. Stephen, that Jacob was buried at He knew that well. But to mention the place of Jacob's burial, would have been wholly irrelevant to his argument. He knew that Jacob's bones were carried to Machpelah, or Hebron, where Abraham's were; and that was a royal and priestly city of Judæa, the seat of David's kingdom. And it might perhaps have been retorted on St. Stephen, that the fact of the transfer of Jacob's bones to that place, showed that there was a special sanctity restricted to the region of Judsea, which was so preferred. He therefore says nothing of Jacob's bones; but proceeds to speak of those of the Patriarchs, which, he says, were conveyed to Sichem.

To Sichem! here is the strength of St. Stephen's assertion. And Sichem is therefore repeated by him, and stands the last word in the sentence, to leave as it were a κέντρον έν τοις άκροω-

And why? Because, from jealousy of Sichem, in Samaria, some of the Jews had falsely affirmed that the Patriarchs were not buried there, but at Hebron (cp. Joseph. B. J. iv. 9. 7), and Stephen would refute this falsehood, even though he would thus be vindicating the honour of the Samaritans against the Jews. And even because Sichem was not in Judæa, the favoured land, nor was it in the hands of Jews, but of Samaritans their enemies, with whom they would have "no dealings," and whom they reviled as heretics, and unbelievers, and Cuthite dogs; and was a place whose inhabitants they despised and hated (Ecclus. 1. 26), and which they called by an opprobrious name, Συχάρ. (See on John iv. 5.)

This was worth saying; in order to show (according to his great argument) that holiness and blessedness are not limited, in death and burial, any more than in life, to any particular spot. Nay, more: Almighty God manifested Himself first to our father Abraham in Mesopotamia (v. 2), a heathen land; and his first appearance to Abraham in Canaan was not at Hebron, but at Sichem, now in the hands of Samaritans. And there, at Sichem, the bones of Joseph and the Patriarchs lie. They were even brought from a long distance, and laid there as in a chosen spot. Sichem was preferred to Hebron, Samaria to Judsea! How instructive was this! And be it observed, that in the very next chapter to this, where the Jews stone St. Stephen at Jerusalem, the word of God takes root in Samaria (Acts viii. 8, 6). Jews rush "with one accord" (δμοθυμαδον) and stone Stephen the Deacon (vii. 57). The Samaritans with one accord (δμοθυμαδόν) receive Philip the Deacon (viii. 6), and are baptized into Christ.

Objection 2. The place at Sychem where the Patriarchs were buried was not purchased by Abraham, but by Jacob, who bought it of the Sons of Hamor (Emmor), the Father of Shechem, for a hundred pieces of silver (Gen. xxxiii. 19. Joshua xxiv. 32).

It is alleged that St. Stephen (" from forgetfulness or inattention") has confounded this purchase of the plot of ground at Sychem by Jacob with that which Abraham made of the burialplace of Machpelah from Ephron the Hittite (Gen. xxiii, 16; | xlix. 29).

Reply.-It has never been shown, nor ever can be, that Abraham did not purchase a plot of ground at Sichem, where Joseph and the Patriarchs were buried.

Indeed (independently of St. Stephen's assertion) it is highly probable that he did;

For (1) Sichem was the first place in Canaan where Almighty God vouchsafed His presence to Abraham. (Gen. xii. 6, 7.)
It was thence called by the name Moreh (סִילְהִדּי), or Vision, and there Abraham built an altar to the Lord. Cp. Lightfoot,

ii. p. 669.

inged lbra.

He built an altar there. He must therefore have had some land there. Abraham was not the man to occupy land which belonged to others. And this is intimated by the words, "the Canaanite was then in the land" (Gen. xii. 6; xiii. 7); and he would not take from others, even "from a thread to a shoe-latchet" (Gen. xiv. 23). And he had no land of his own there, not so much as to set his foot on (Acts vii. 5). Therefore it is probable that Abraham purchased the site, on which he erected an altar, and where God first appeared to him. Cp. Lightfoot's judicious remarks here, ii. p. 670.

(2) The importance of this place (i. e. Sichem or Shechem) is further testified by the fact, that it was the first in Canaan to which Jacob repaired on his return from Padan-Aram. It is not indeed said that God appeared to him there. But he called it El-Elohe-Israel; and Jacob purchased a site there for the altar which he built (Gen. xxxiii. 18-20).

If, now, Jacob bought the place at Sichem where he built his altar, it is yet more probable that Abraham secured by purchase the place at Sichem where he built his altar, and where God first appeared to him in the land of Canaan.

(3) The sanctity of this place is still further attested by what is recorded in Gen. xxxv. 4, and particularly in Joshua xxiv. 1. 25-27. Hence Abimelech the usurper was so eager to gain possession of Sichem. See Judges viii. and ix. Sichem was in fact the national Sanctuary of Israel. And why? Probably from its connexion with Jacob and with Abraham; as the place which he, on his first entrance into the land of Canaan, had dedicated to God, Who had first manifested Himself to him there.

(4) The paternal portion or allotment of Joseph was at Sichem (John iv. 5, 6). Jacob, it is true, acquired land at Sichem by purchase; but something more than the site so purchased was conveyed by him in his blessing to Joseph (Gen. xlviii. 22). He gave him the plot he purchased at Sichem for 100 pieces of silver (the cave and field at Machpelah cost Abraham 400, Gen. xxiii. 15), and he also gave him the plot there which he had taken out of the hands of the Amorite with his sword and with his bow, i. e. by force. See Josh. xxiv. 12, and Gen. xlviii. 22, compared with Gen. xxxiii. 19. Josh. xxiv. 32. John iv. 5.

Jacob was a man of peace. What he tells us he took out of the hand of others by his sword and by his bow, we may be sure was not violently usurped by him, but justly recovered. And it may be, that the spot to which he refers was that which had been purchased originally by Abraham, and on which he had built an altar; and if that had been occupied by others (i. e. the Amorite), what more likely than that Jacob, from a feeling of piety and zeal, should feel it his duty to restore it, and secure it for ever to his posterity, as Isaac re-opened the wells which Abraham had digged, and the Philistines had stopped? (Gen. xxvi. 15. 18, 19.)

(5) This supposition that Sichem was originally acquired and dedicated by the Father of the Faithful, Abraham, and afterwards recovered by Jacob, suggests the reason why not only Joseph (whose inheritance it was), but why the other Patriarchs also were buried at Sichem rather than at Machpelah.

It was not perhaps without reference to these and other interesting circumstances in the early history of Sichem, that JESUS CHRIST, God manifest in the flesh, chose Sychar or Sichem for a special Revelation of Himself as the Messiah (see note on John iv. 5; cp. iv. 26), and discoursed there to the woman of Samaria concerning the future extension of God's Worship to every place in the world (John iv. 21): cp. Dr. Lee on Inspiration, Appendix H.

Objection 3. Lastly, it is objected

That St. Stephen says, Abraham purchased the land at Sichem of the children of Emmor the son of Sichem :

And this, it is said, is a proof that he confounded a purchase supposed to be made by Abraham, with that made by Jacob of the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem (Gen. xxxiii. 19. Josh. xxiv. 32).

Reply.-St. Stephen is speaking of an Emmor, or Hamor, who was a different person from the Emmor or Hamor with whom Jacob dealt. Jacob dealt with the sons of a Hamor who was father of Shechem (Gen. xxxiii. 19. Josh. xxiv. 32). But St. Stephen says that Abraham bought the field from the sons of Hamor, the son of Shechem. So the words του Συχέμ ought to be translated.

Hamor was the name of the Prince of the Shechemites (Gen. xxxiv. 2). And it is no more surprising that there should be two princes of Shechem called Hamor, than that there should be many Candaces in succession in Meroe, and many Pharaohs in Egypt, and many Cæsars at Rome.

Hamor seems to have been the hereditary title of the king of the country. See Judges ix. 28, where the name occurs 500 years after Jacob's time.

43. ἐπέκεινα Βαβυλώνος] beyond Babylon.

Objection .- This is inconsistent with Amos v. 27, who has Δαμασκοῦ, Damascus.

Reply.—In order to enforce his argument, St. Stephen adds to the prophecy of Amos some other declarations of the same Spirit Who inspired Amos, and Who had pronounced by them that the Israelites would be carried for their sins still further than Damascus (Jer. xx. 4. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 20), even to Babylon and beyond it. There was something significant in the fact here mentioned, that God would carry them away for their sins from Canaan to beyond Babylon; i. e. that for their unbelief He would invert in their case the course He had followed with Abraham their father for his faith. God brought him from Chaldea to Canaan, He would carry them from Canaan to beyond Chaldaea. And observe, St. Stephen uses the same word here (μετοικίζω) as he had done in v. 4, when speaking of Abraham.

There must have been a sharp sting in this word Βαβυλώνος reserved for the end of the sentence, where they perhaps only expected to hear Δαμασκοῦ.

On this practice, so reasonable in itself, of blending several prophecies into one, and also condensing their substance (which is imputed in St. Stephen's case to inaccuracy and forgetfulness!), see the excellent observations of Surenhusius, pp. 43. 45. 343, and the numerous examples cited by him of this practice. Cp. Acts iii. 22. 25, and see note above on Matt. ii. 23, Luke iv. 17. and above on vii. 3, below on Acts xiii. 22.

On the whole, on reviewing the Objections above recited, we may affirm, that there is nothing in them which can invalidate the claims of St. Stephen to Inspiration; or those of St. Luke, who has preserved his speech, and asserts that St. Stephen "was full of the Holy Ghost," and that they "could not resist the wisdom with which he spake."

There is nothing in St. Stephen's statements to countenance the assertion of some recent Criticism, that he confounded Abraham with Jacob, and Sichem with Hebron, and one purchase with another. There is nothing there to give any encouragement to its vain-glorious notion, that it can penetrate with a keener glance into the records of early Jewish History, than he "who was full of the Holy Ghost," and whose eye, being enlightened by Him, pierced through the clouds, and saw "the heavens opened, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God." On the other hand, we are constrained to ask,—Can there be any reasonable expectation of "progress, or further illumination" in Biblical Criticism, or of any other results but of degeneracy, degradation, disbelief, and demoralization, from such allegations as these of a shallow and superficial sciolism, putting them forth with arrogant presumption, as if they were proved; and as even furnishing data to be accepted and arranged by a calm Inductive Philosophy as valuable acquisitions of Theological Science?

But they who read Holy Scripture with right dispositions will derive spiritual comfort and intellectual delight from those portions of Holy Writ which, like St. Stephen's speech, may appear at first sight to be beset with difficulties, and have been most frequently made occasions of sceptical cavils. They will feel persuaded that there are some good reasons for statements in Scripture, which at first may seem perplexing. They will be sure that valuable truths—like precious pearls in rough and hard shells-lurk concealed there. They will endeavour by God's grace, with devout prayer, and with earnest labour, to extract them. And their labour will often be rewarded. As in the instances above noticed in St. Stephen's speech, they will see gleams of divine light where they once saw obscurity. Objections against Scripture will resolve themselves into Arguments for it. Difficulties will be changed into Evidences. And from this process of critical transformation they will derive a persuasion, that when the mists of human infirmity, which hang over us in this world, are dispersed, and our eyes are illumined by the same Spirit Who shed His bright beams of light on St. Stephen, all the other difficulties of Scripture will disappear; we shall acquire new faculties of spiritual vision, and where before we saw mists and clouds, we shall see the heavens opened, and the glory of Jesus Christ standing at the right hand of God.

38. ἐκκλησία ἐν τῷ ἐρήμφ] Church in the wilderness. A remarkable confirmation of his argument. God's Church is not limited to Judea. It was in the Wilderness, and there Moses. your great Lawgiver, was with it; and, remember, he died there in the Wilderness; and was never permitted to enter the promised Land, to which you would restrain the favours of God.

The Church in the Wilderness. This sentence is not without its prophetic significance for Christian times. The Church of God is represented in the Apocalypse as persecuted by the Great City; She is the Woman in the Wilderness (Rev. xii. (v. 6), the number of the 'Mansiones,' or stations, of the Ancient Church of God in the Wilderness of Sinai. See below, notes on Rev. xii. 1-6.

- dy rais huépais excivais] in those days. Even when the Law was being delivered to him by God, they were guilty of rebellion against Him.

42. ἐν βίβλφ τῶν προφητῶν] in the book of the Prophets; i. e. of the Twelve lesser Prophets, who were reckoned as forming one Blacos, or volume, by the Jews. See Bp. Cosin on the Canon, p. 12, and below, xiii. 40.

- µol] to Me, emphatic. Did ye offer to Me? No-but to Moloch !

43. ἀνελάβετε] ye lifted up. The word used by Amos (v. 26), κΨ, sustulit. Ye who were My holy People, appointed to lift up and carry My Tabernacle, the Tabernacle of My Presence, with you, in your journeyings through the Wilderness, -ye were not ashamed of your idol, but ye raised him aloft in the air, and carried him and his tabernacle on high, as a sacred banner, standard, or trophy, when you ought to have fixed your hearts on Me and Mine!

Moloch is opposed to Jehovah, and Moloch's idolatrous σκηνή to the σκηνή or Tabernacle of God.

The Alexandrine MS. has 'Paipav here. C, E have 'Pepav, D has 'Ρεμφάν. The LXX have 'Paνφάν for Hebr. του. It seems probable that Kiun, Kivun, and Rephan or Remphan, signify the Kronos or Saturnus of the Egyptians. And ἄστρον would be the Planet of Saturn. See the authorities in Lightfoot, ii. p 673.

Glass. Phil. p. 645, 646. Surenhus. p. 413. Rosenm. here, and Winer, p. 386, in v. Saturn.
S. Cyril's note (in Catenâ, p. 123, cp. Theophyl. p. 68, and Ecum. p. 71) deserves attention, particularly from his connexion with Alexandria in Egypt. He affirms after Aquila and Theodotion that 'Pεφάν signifies blindness: the idol was that of a star, but it was είς τύφλωσιν ἐσκορπίσθησαν γὰρ (read ἐσκοτίσθησαν γὰρ) al καρδίαι αὐτῶν. They worshipped the idol as their έωσφόρος or day-star (ἄστρον), but it became to them a 'Peφάν or σκότισμα, or darkness.

Perhaps therefore this name Rephan was given by the more devout Jews to this idol in contempt and abhorrence; for the same reason as they called the god of the Ekronites, Beelzeboul. And St. Stephen adopts this name Rephan from the LXX instead of Chiun, as much as to say: Ye set up the star of a blind god in opposition to the God of heaven, and Father of lights.

— Μολόχ] Moloch, from מוֹלָה regnans: perhaps the Milcom (i.e. their King) of the Ammonites (1 Kings xi. 5. 33). The worship of Moloch accompanied with human sacrifices (see on Matt. v. 22) is specially forbidden in Leviticus xviii. 21 and xx. 2, and it may thence be inferred to have been practised by the Israelites.

- Βαβυλῶνος] See above, under "Objections," p. 69. 45. Ἰησοῦ] Jesus: Joshua the son of Nun. Cp. Heb. iv. 8.

On the meaning of the name, see on Matt. i. 1.

It is observable that the name of Jesus, though ever in the thoughts of St. Stephen, and, as it were, hovering on his lips in almost every sentence, is never expressed in his Speech but here, where it does not mean Jesus of Nazareth, but Jesus (or Joshua) the son of Nun.

How much wisdom was there in this! If he had openly spoken as he felt concerning Jesus of Nazareth, he would have been stopped at once by the rage of his hearers (see v. 53, 54), and the Christian Church would never have had the speech of St. Stephen. There was divine eloquence in his silence. And all his words were, and ever will be-φωνάντα συνετοΐσι-vocal to the wise. And this word Jesus-not used for Christ, but for Joshua, the type of Christ, is full of meaning. It is significant of the fact already insisted on-that the whole speech is allusive to Christ.

- ἐν τῷ κατασχέσει] in the portion or possession of the Gentiles - κατάσχεσις = τητης Num. xxvii. 4. 7, and passim in LXX. See also above, v. 5.

κατάσχεσις έθνων can hardly mean occupation of the land of the Nations.

And as to the fact, viz. the Ministry of Angels at Mount Sinai, see Deut. xxxiii. 2, where God is said to appear on Sinai, σὸν μυριάσιν . . . ἐκ δεξιῶν αὐτοῦ ἄγγελοι μετ' αὐτοῦ. The reason of the expression seems to be, that Christ Himself was the Angel of the Covenant (see vv. 30. 35. 38); He, when He promulgated the Law, was attended by Angels (Deut. xxxiii. 2), and therefore, in a rapid mode of expression, the Law given by the Angel, accompanied with Angels, might be said to have been given by the disposition of Angels; and so Josephus says (Ant. xv. 5. 3) that the Jews had received their Law from God by Angels, $\delta i'$ $\dot{\alpha}\gamma\gamma\epsilon\dot{\lambda}\omega\nu$ $\pi\alpha\rho\dot{\alpha}$ $\Theta\epsilon\sigma\dot{\nu}$. That $\delta\iota\alpha\tau\alpha\gamma\dot{\eta}$ is to be understood in this sense, may be inferred from St. Stephen's use of διατάσσομαι just before, v. 44.

57. συνέσχον τὰ ὧτα] they stopped their ears, with their hands; an action of abhorrence. See Irenœus ap. Euseb. v. 20, and Wetstein's note here.

- ὥρμησαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐπ' αὐτόν] They, filled with the Evil Spirit, rushed with one accord against him, who was full of the Holy Spirit. But what evil could Satan and the Jews do to St. Stephen? As S. Aug. says (Serm. 215), they procured punishment to themselves and a crown of glory to him. What benefits do we to themselves and a crown of glory to him. What benefits do we reap even from the agency of the Devil, through the overruling power of Christ! "Diabolus quanta præstitit! Omnes Martyres ipse nobis fecit!" (Aug.)

age. See xxvi. 10 and on Philem. 9. David was thirty years of age when he fought with Goliath, and is called νεανίσκος by Josephus. How different was Saul the young man, from "Paul the aged !" Philem. 9. — Σαύλου] Saul. Magis sæviens omnes adjuvando, quàm suis manibus lapidando. Aug. Serm. 279.

This is the first mention of St. Paul in Holy Scripture. His agency in the martyrdom of St. Stephen is mentioned with peculiar emphasis here, and again viii. I, with the design probably of showing the power of Divine Grace in the change wrought thereby from Saul, the Persecutor of the Church, to Paul, the Preacher of the Gospel.

"Iste Saulus, et postea Paulus, persecutor Saulus, et prædicator Paulus. Magna et divina spectacula. Qui erat in cæde Stephani Persecutor, factus est regni cœlorum Prædicator." Aug.

Here also, it seems, we may be permitted to recognize one main reason why the History of the Acts is principally occupied in narrating the actions and sufferings of the two Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul,—the one having shown his weakness in denying Christ, the other his fury in persecuting Him.

Those two names are noble trophies of the victories of the Holy Ghost.

The name of Saul mentioned here may also suggest the conjecture, that we are indebted, under the divine influence of the Holy Ghost, to the recital of St. Paul, for this report of St. Stephen's speech before the Jewish Sanhedrim.

St. Paul would doubtless have been anxious to make public reparation, as far as he was able, for the wrong done by himself to the blessed Martyr. This desire manifested itself afterwards in his public declaration at Jerusalem, recorded Acts xxii. 20. "When the blood of Thy Martyr, Stephen, was being shed, I myself also was standing there, and consenting to the deed, and holding the raiment of those who were killing him." He could not make better amends, than by confessing his own share in the martyrdom, as is done here (vii. 58; viii. 1), and in giving universal and perpetual publicity to the words of St. Stephen in the pages of Canonical Scripture, so that it might ever be said of St. Stephen, the Proto-martyr of the Church, as of the first Martyr of the world, Abel, "though dead, he speaketh." Heb. xi. 4.

This supposition is in some degree confirmed by the resemblance which (as is well shown by Mr. Humphry) may be traced between passages in St. Stephen's speech and St. Paul's speeches and Epistles; e. g.

St. Stephen says, v. 20, Μωϋσης αστείος. St. Paul, Heb. xi. 23.

St. Stephen says, v. 48, ούχ δ θψιστος έν χειροποιήτοις κατ-οικεί. St. Paul, Acts xvii. 24, δ Θεός ούκ έν χειροποιήτοις ναοίς κατοικεῖ.

St. Stephen, vii. 53, ελάβετε νόμον είς διαταγάς άγγέλων. St. Paul, Gal. iii. 19, δ νόμος διαταγείς δι' άγγέλων. Heb. ii. 2, λαληθείς δι' άγγέλων.

St. Stephen, vii. 51, ἀπερίτμητοι τῆ καρδια. St. Paul, Rom. ii. 29, περιτομή καρδίας ἐν πνεύματι.

It is observable also, that St. Paul's first recorded speech in the Acts (xiii. 16) bears a striking resemblance to St. Stephen's.

'Ιησοῦ, δέξαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου. 60 Θεὶς δὲ τὰ γόνατα ἔκραξε φωνῆ μεγάλη, w Luke 6. 28. & 23. 34. * Κύριε, μη στήσης αὐτοῖς ταύτην την άμαρτίαν. Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπων ἐκοιμήθη.

It is very probable, that St. Paul reported St. Stephen's speech to St. Luke, and that St. Luke wrote it under St. Paul's eye, and he published it with the sanction of St. Paul, an inspired Apostle, deeply versed in the History and Antiquities of his own nation. This consideration may serve to confirm us in our conclusion that there are no "errors or inaccuracies" in it.

59. ἐλιθοβόλουν] they were stoning. The punishment for blasphemy. (Levit. xxiv. 16. Deut. xvii. 35.)

It has been inferred by some from the infliction of this punishment on St. Stephen, that the Sanhedrim had the power of life and death in matters of religion, without reference to the Roman Governor. But this is not clear. He generally resided at Cæsarea, not at Jerusalem; and in his absence they often proceeded in a summary and irregular way in questions of religion. See on xxvi. 10.

In the case of St. Stephen, there is no mention of any judicial sentence being pronounced. The assault upon him is represented as a tumultuary act of fury. (See vv. 57, 58.)

Popular outbreaks, followed by stoning, were not uncommon at this time at Jerusalem; as may be inferred from what is said above, even of the captain of the temple and the officers of the Chief Priests themselves in ch. v. 26, ἐφοβοῦντο τὸν λαὸν μή λιθασθῶσιν, and from what is recorded in the history of our Lord, John viii. 59; x. 31-33. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 37.

The question whether the Jewish Sanhedrim had the power of life and death in such cases as this is best illustrated by a passage of Origen (ad African. § 14), who says, "Though the Jews are under tribute to the Romans, the Ethnarch, by the permission of Cæsar, is allowed to have considerable power among them; insomuch that their trials are conducted according to their own laws, though clandestinely; and even capital punishment is inflicted, not as an absolute right, but with the imperial con-nivance." See Professor Blunt, Lectures, p. 141.

"Thus it would seem that St. Stephen suffered capital punishment," adds Professor Blunt, "at the hands of the Jews, even in spite of its not being exactly lawful for them to put any one to death; the majesty of the Roman law being contented to lie in abeyance, though ready at any time to assert itself and resume its functions."

 - ἐπικαλούμενον] invoking. Bentley (on Freethinking, xxxvi.
 p. 138) conjectures that ΘΝ (Θεόν) "was absorpt by the preceding syllable ON." Perhaps, however, there is a design in the omission. St. Stephen called upon Him Whom he beheld in heaven, and said to Him, "Lord Jesus, receive My Spirit." St. Stephen teaches with his dying breath that the Name of Jesus is to be called upon and worshipped; i. e. that He is God. Hence in ix. 14. 21. 1 Cor. i. 2, and 2 Tim. ii. 22, "all that call on the Name of the Lord," is a periphrasis for Christians. See also xxii. 16.

Κύριε 'Ιησοῦ] Lord Jesus. This is the only place where the Name Jesus is uttered by St. Stephen, see on v. 45. St. Stephen at his death prays to Jesus, and addresses the same prayers to Jesus, as Jesus, dying on the cross, had addressed to His Father, Luke xxiii. 34. 46, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," and "Father, into Thy hands I commend My Spirit." Jesus, as man, taught us to pray; St. Stephen, inspired by the Holy Chest teachers to write Levels and the property of the stephen of the stephe by the Holy Ghost, teaches us to pray to Jesus; and to pray to Him as He as Man prayed to His Father,—that is, as God.

- δέξαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου] receive my spirit. A proof that the spirit of man survives, and does not sleep, when separated from the body by death. See on Luke xvi. 22, 23, and above on i. 25.

60. μη στήσης — ἀμαρτίαν] lay not to their charge this sin. So A, B, C, D. Elz. την ἀμαρτίαν ταύτην,—but ἀμαρτίαν, the emphatic word, has its proper place at the close. He warns them of their danger in committing the sin, and shows his love to them by prayer for the sinning.

The word στήσης involves the idea of weighing. xxvi. 15, When Thou, the Judge of all, weighest their actions in Thy balance, do not place this sin in the scale against them. By this prayer St. Stephen proved that all he had said in his speech, however bitter to them, was the language of charity. It came from the Spirit of Truth and Love, and it had its first-fruits in the conversion of Saul, and in that of thousands by him. "Sævire videbatur Stephanus; lingua ferox, cor lene: clamabat, et amabat; sæviebat, et salvos fieri volebat." S. Aug. (Serm.

The influence of this prayer of St. Stephen on other succeeding Martyrs may be seen in Euseb. v. 2.

— ἐκοιμήθη] he fell asteep: that is, in body,—though it had been stoned,—for his spirit had been commended to Jesus, v. 59, and that neither slumbers nor sleeps. See on Luke xvi. 22; xxiii.

43, and I Cor. xv. 6: even a heathen said, leρδν δπνον κοιμαται θνήσκειν μη λέγε τους άγαθούς. (Callimachus, Epig. 10.) On the rhythmical cadence of this sentence in the word exorμήθη ('--'), see note at the end of the Book, xxviii. 31.

The following comments on this Divine History are from

S. Augustine's Sermons in Natali, the birthday, i. e. the Martyrdom (see on Acts ii. 24) Stephani Martyris (Serm. 314—320, vol. v. pp. 1856—1878).

"Cum aliorum martyrum vix gesta inveniamus quod in solemnitatibus earum recitare possimus (a remarkable declaration) hujus passio in canonico libro est; Actus Apostolorum de Canone Scripturæ est : ipse liber incipit legi à Dominico Paschæ, sicut se consuetudo habet Ecclesiæ (from Easter to Whitsuntide, Aug., Tract vi. in Joan.; cp. Chrys. in Acta, Hom. 63 and 48). In hoc ergo libro audistis quomodo sint electi et ab Apostolis ordinati septem Diaconi, in quibus Sanctus Stephanus erat; prior Martyr de Diaconis quam de Apostolis: prior victima de Agnis, quam de Arietibus." S. Aug. (p. 1859.)

He draws a parallel between

(1) The charges against our Lord, and those against Stephen. Compare John ii. 19-21. Matt. xxvii. 40, with Acts vi. 14. (2) Our Lord's prayer for His enemies, and commendation of His soul to the Father; and St. Stephen's prayer and commendation of His soul to the Lord Jesus.

He traces St. Stephen's graces at his death to the influence of Christ's example. "Sedebat in cathedra crucis Christus, et docebat Stephanum regulam pietatis. Ecce discipulus Tuus orat pro inimicis suis, orat pro lapidatoribus suis." He refers his hearers to the Divine Source from which all St. Stephen's graces flowed. "Ecce hoc Stephanus fecit. De se? De suo fecit? Non ita; de dono Dei fecit. Si autem de dono Dei fecit, numquid intravit, et contra te clausit? Numquid pontem transivit et præcidit? Pete et tu; Fons manat, non siccavit.

"Non mortem timebat Stephanus, quia Christum, quem pro se occisum sciebat, viventem videbat; ac per hoc festinabat etiam ipse mori pro Illo, ut viveret cum Illo. Eja, fratres, so-quamur eum; si enim sequamur Stephanum, coronabimur (alluding to his name Στέφανος, the Fathers love to dwell on the circumstance, that he who bore the name of Στέφανος was the first to win the crown of Martyrdom for Christ); maxime autem imitandus est nobis in dilectione inimicorum: persistens beatissimus Martyr in testimonio Veritatis, et Charitatis ardens Spiritu, pervenit ad gloriosissimum finem."

S. Aug. (p. 1878) applies to St. Stephen the deacon the promise of Christ (John xii. 26), "where I am, there shall My servant be," observing that in the Greek original the word is διάκονος, and in some Latin Versions Diaconus, and that St. Stephen was indeed a deacon to Christ, that he did follow Christ, and that in him Christ's promise was made good, "ubi sum Ego, illic erit diaconus Meus." To this remark it might be added, that the verb also is used twice there, car emol διακονή τις έμοι ἀκολουθείτω, καὶ ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ, ἐκεῖ καὶ ὁ διάκο νος ὁ ἐμὸς ἔσται, καὶ ἐἀν τις ἐμοὶ διακονῆ, τιμήσει αὐτὸν ὁ Πατήρ. S. Jerome (in Ezek. xliii.) seems to assert that St. Stephen was martyred at the Passover, on the second day of unleavened bread. If this was the case, and it is rendered probable by the presence of many Hellenists (vi. 9), here was another point of resemblance to Christ. Cp. below, on xii. 3.

Lastly, on St. Stephen's death, Augustine says (p. 1873), "Cum tanta esset in docendo constantia, videte qualis fuerit in morte patientia. Hi ictibus corpus ipsius quatiebant; ille pro inimicis orabat; contundebatur homo exterior, et supplicabat interior. Sed Dominus qui cinxerat, qui probaverat, spectabat desuper militem Suum, juvaturus certantem, coronaturus vin-Denique Se ostendit illi. Ecce enim, inquit, video cœlos apertos, et Filium hominis stantem ad dexteram Dei. Et quid ait pro se? Domine Jesu, accipe spiritum meum; et pro illis genuflectit, et ait, Domine, ne statuas illis hoc peccatum. Et hoc dicto, obdormivit." O sweet slumber! He who fell asleep among the stones of his enemies, how triumphantly will his ashes awake from the stones of the tomb! He fell asleep in confidence and peace, for he commended his spirit to the Lord.

The position of St. Stephen's Day, the morrow after Christmas Day, in the Calendar of the Christian Church, has a beautiful significance. See the excellent remarks of Gregory Nyssen, in S. Stephan. (ii. p. 786.) It intimates that all the graces of all the Martyrs are due to the Incarnation of Christ, Who is the Great Proto-Martyr, "the true and faithful Martyr or Witness" (Rev. i. 5; iii. 14), of Whose "fulness all have received, and grace for grace." (John i. 16.) And this idea is strengthened by the sequence, in that Calendar, of the Martyrdom of Long Life in St. John the Evangelist, and of Infancy in the Holy The Incarnation of Christ may be compared to the Mountain of continental Greece, from which all its principal rivers flow, and fertilize the land. He is the One Well-spring of Living Water—"the True Light that lighteth every one that cometh into the world." (John i. 9.)

Besides, the death-day of Martyrs is called rightly their ημέρα γενέθλιος, dies Natalis, their birth-day (Euseb. iv. 15). It is their nativity into everlasting Life. Well therefore may it be associated with the Nativity of Christ.

CH. VIII. 1-3. Σαῦλος ἢν συνευδοκῶν] Saul was consenting to his murder: cp. St. Paul's own words, xxii. 20. Saul (says Aug., Serm. 316, p. 1868) heard St. Stephen's speech; and then perhaps he scoffed at it; but he was concerned in St. Stephen's prayer. St. Stephen prayed for him. And mark the effects of that "Saulus, cui non suffecit occisus Stephanus, accepit Epistolas à Sacerdotibus, ut ubicunque inveniret Christianos alligatos adduceret ad supplicia sumenda, qualia sumpserat Ste-phanus. Iratus ibat Saulus, ibat lupus ad gregem Domini. Et Dominus de sursum, Saule, Saule, quid Me persequeris? Lupe, quid Agnum persequeris? Ego, quando sum occisus, Leonem occidi. Stephanus tunc agnus, Paulus tunc lupus erat; modò autem ambo agni."-May we all with them follow the LAMB in heaven!

1-4. πάντες διεσπάρησαν-εὐαγγελι(όμενοι τον λόγον] being scattered abroad by persecution they scattered abroad the seed of the Word. First, in Samaria, where Christ's prophetic eye had seen "the fields white unto harvest" (John iv. 35), and then in the whole world.

It is one of the purposes of this divine History, to show that "the fierceness of man turns to the praise of God." Ps.

As it was in the Apostolic age, so it ever has been and ever will be with the Church, governed and guided by the Spirit of God;

As Tertullian says to the Roman Persecutors of the Church (Apolog. ad fin.), "Crudelitas vestra illecebra est magis sectre. Plures efficimur, quoties metimur à vobis; semen est sanguis Christianorum," and ad Scapulam, "Hanc sectam magis ædificari videas, cum cædi videtur." Compare the language of S. Nilus (hom. 2 de Ascens.), "Succidebantur Ecclesiae palmites, et Fidei fructus augescebat. E radice enim Illâ nati sunt Qui dixerat "Ego vici Mundum; Ego sum Vitis, Vos Palmites." And Chrysostom says, the blood of Martyrs waters the garden of the Church, and makes it fruitful; and S. Leo (Serm. i. in Natal. Petri), "Non minuitur persecutionibus Ecclesia, sed augetur (cp. Exod. i. 12) et Dominicus ager segete altiore vestitur, dum grana quæ singula cadunt multiplicata nascuntur."

Besides, by their dispersions they destroyed the power of the Enemy. "Occiso Stephano, persecutionem gravissimam Ecclesia Hierosolymis passa est. Fugati sunt fratres qui ibi erant; soli Apostoli remanserunt. Cæteri fugabantur, sed, tanquam ardentes faces, accendebant. Stulti Judæi, quando illos de Hierosolymis fugabant, carbones ignis in silvam mittebant." Aug. (Serm.

Thus, by the controlling power of Christ, the devices of the Arch-enemy of the Church were overruled into instruments against himself.

- πλην των ἀποστόλων] except the Apostles It would seem that a special charge had heen laid on the Apostles to remain at Jerusalem; see above, on i. 4, and below, viii. 14; ix. 27; xi. 1;

2. συνεκόμισαν] devout men took up Stephen and made great lamentation over him. There was a peculiar reason for the mention of this circumstance in the case of St. Stephen, because (as Lightfoot shows, ii. p. 677) it was not lawful among the Jews to make outward demonstrations of grief for persons condemned by the Sanhedrim.

It is said by some interpreters, that these "devout" men must have been Jews (see Kuin., Meyer), because the word εὐλαβεῖς is connected with Ἰουδαῖοι in ii. 5; and because Christians would not have ventured to bury Stephen. But εὐλάβεια is characterized as a Christian grace (Heb. v. 7; xii. 28); and though their κοπετὸς was a remnant of Judaism (see Chrys. here, and below, on ix. 37), yet probably it is specially mentioned that these men buried Stephen, because it was an act of Christian courage, and exposed them to danger. However, it is not determined by the historian whether they were Jews, Proselytes, or Christians. Perhaps there were some among them from all these three classes: they are contrasted as ἄνδρες εὐλαβεῖς with the savage character of his murderers.

The Burial of the dead is here commended as an act of Christian piety, and thus is inculcated the duty of reverence for the bodies of Christians,

(1) as being temples of the Holy Ghost;

(2) and, as committed to the keeping of the grave, in order to rise again in glory, and to be "made like unto Christ's glorious Body." (Phil. iii. 21.)

See the treatise of S. Aug. (vi. p. 866), De curâ pro mortuis gerendâ, and cp. what Bp. Pearson says, on the Creed, Art. iv. p. 339, "When Ananias died, though after his sin, yet they wound him up and carried him out and buried him (Acts v. 6); when Stephen was stoned, devout men carried him to his burial; and when Dorcas died, they washed her and laid her in an upper chamber (Acts ix. 37). So careful were the primitive Christians of the rites of burial." And that pious and learned Expositor observes on the effect which Christianity had on national usages of Sepulture. In the Roman Empire, before the reception of the Gospel, the bodies of the dead were burnt, and their ashes only reserved in funeral urns. But after a few Emperors had received Baptism, there was not a body burnt in the Roman Empire.

So great a social change was wrought by Christianity. The religious sanctity of the Churchyards and Cemeteries of Europe is due to its influence. "And the decent custom of the primitive Christians (says Bp. Pearson) was so acceptable unto God, that under His Providence it proved most effectual in the conversion of the Heathen, and in the propagation of the Gospel."

But when Funeral Rites are neglected and violated, Christianity will decline. This is a warning not unnecessary in our own age and country, where, on account of the inadequate provision and insufficient care of Churchyards, there is danger of heartlessness and irreverence in the interment of the dead,especially of the poor.

- κοπετον μέγαν] great lamentation,—" planetum magnum;" with wringing of hands and beating of breasts. See Luke xxiii.

48. Cp. below, ix. 39.

3. ¿λυμαίνετο] Saul was making havoc of the Church, while some were burying Stephen; and others were preaching the word.

A striking contrast.

5. Φίλιππος] Philip. Not Philip the Apostle; for the Apostles remained at Jerusalem (v. 1). And if Philip had been an Apostle, it would not have been necessary for Peter and John to leave Jerusalem for Samaria, to lay their hands on those whom Philip had baptized there (vv. 12, 13). But this Philip was the Deacon, also called Philip the Evangelist (Acts xxi. 8). So Chrys. and Epiphan, who says (Caten. p. 135), that Philip being a Deacon had not authority to give the Holy Spirit by laying on of hands. And Aug. (Serm. 266, 4) says, that he was called Philip the Evangelist, "propter promptum prædicationis eloquium."

- Zauapelas | Samaria. Not a city of Samaria, but the city of Samaria,—"in urbem ipsam Samariæ" (Bp. Pearson), the ancient residence of the Kings of Israel, the Metropolis, Zesacrh, now Sebustieh. See Robinson, iii. 144, and "Later Researches,"

p. 126. On this use of the genitive, see Glass. p. 250, and Meyer here. The article is often omitted after prepositions. See Middleton here, p. 381. And A, B have the Article, which is received by Lachmann and Tischendorf.

If St. Luke had meant Sychar, or any other city than the capital, he would probably have specified its name (see John iv. 5): $\pi\delta\lambda\iota s$, used by itself, frequently stands for $\mu\eta\tau\rho\delta\pi\sigma\lambda\iota s$. And from v. 14 it may also be inferred that $\pi\delta\lambda\iota s$ $\tau\eta s$ $\Xi\mu\mu\rho\epsilon\iota as$ here signifies the Capital. It is true that the Capital was now commonly called $\Sigma\epsilon\beta a\sigma\tau\eta$. But this name is never used in the New Testament; and St. Luke, writing for Hellenistic readers, would be disposed to preserve the name by which the City was known from the LXX, and which is also used by Josephus, Ant. xx. 6. 2.

No reason can be assigned, why St. Luke should not have specified the name Sychar, or Sychem, if that had been the City of which he is here speaking; whereas there are many causes why he should not have mentioned Sebasté, the name of the Capital of Samaria. They may have visited Sichem also. For the city of Samaria stood at a short distance to the north of Sichem, Neáπολιs, now Nablous, on which see above, vii. 16.

7. ἐξήρχοντο] So A, B, C, D, E, and other MSS. Elz. ἐξήρχετο. But the plural number seems to be studiously used in these cases in order to show the personal plurality of the Evil Spirits. Co on Mark is 20.26.

Spirits. Cp. on Mark ix. 20. 26.

— παραλελυμένοι] This word is never used for paralytic by St. Matthew or St. Mark, who use the word παραλυτικός ten.

times (Matt. iv. 24; viii. 6; ix. 2. 6. Mark ii. 3, 4, 5. 9, 10).

But it is used in St. Luke's Gospel (v. 18. 24), where the word παραλυτικόν does not occur; and it is used twice in the Acts (here, and ix. 33), where the word παραλυτικόν does not occur. And thus we have a double coincidence between the Acts of the Apostles and the Gospel of St. Luke.

9. Σίμων] Simon Magus, characterized by ancient Christian writers, as the first heresiarch. See Justin M. Apol. i. 26. Iren. i. 23, and his scholar S. Hippolytus in Pref. hær. lib. vi., who refers to this history in the Acts, p. 161 and p. 176. Tertullian, Præsor. c. 46. S. Cyril. Hierosol. p. 95, 96, πάσης alpέσεως εύρετής. Cp. — λέγων εἶναι, κ.τ.λ.] Iren. ii. 2, "Simone mago primo dicente semetipsum esse super omnia Deum." While Philip preached Christ, Simon vaunted himself as God.

This is not the place for discussing the question concerning Justin Martyr's (Apol. i. 26 and i. 56) account of the Statue, "Simoni Deo Sancto," at Rome. Cp. Iren. i. 23. 1. Tertullian, Apol. 13. Clem. Recog. ii. c. 9. Cyril, Catech. vi. It has generally been supposed in modern times that Justin was deceived by the inscription of a stone in honour of the Sabine deity Semo Sancus. See Otto's note, p. 192. Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 238. On the other side, Thirlby, Braun, Maran, and Fogini, and more lately, Windischmann (Vind. Petr. p. 78), have endeavoured to vindicate Justin's statement. See also Dr. Burton's Lectures, p. 232, Professor Norton's Essay on the subject, and Dr. Kitto's Illustrations of the Acts, pp. 84-7.

It has been thought by some, that Simon Magus is the person mentioned by Josephus (Ant. xx. 7. 2) as Σίμωνα, Ἰουδαΐον, Κύπριον δὲ γένος, μάγον εἶναι σκηπτόμενον, who was employed by Felix to decoy Drusilla from her husband Azizus that she might marry him. Neander (Gesch. u. Pflanz. i. 87) deems it probable.

10. ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη] So A, B, C, D, E, and other MSS. Elz. omits καλουμένη, which however has a special force. This man is that mighty power of God which is so called in the Word of God. Cp. Aug. in Hæres. 1, who says that Simon called himself the Messiah; and Theodoret, de fabulis hæretic. c. i. Indeed he seems to have claimed to himself the names of the three persons of the Trinity. See Iren. i. 23, who says, "Hic à multis quasi Deus glorificatus est, et docuit semetipsum esse qui inter Judæos quasi Filius apparuerit, in Samariâ autem quasi Pater descenderit, in reliquis verò Gentibus quasi Spiritus Sanctus adventaverit. Esse autem se sublimissimam virtutem (τὴν μεγάλην δύναμν), hoc est eum qui sit super omnia Pater; et sustinere vocari se quodcunque eum vocant homines" (δύναμν—καλουμένην). The original Greek of Irenæus may be partly restored in this passage from the newly discovered work of his scholar S. Hippolylus, Refutat. Hær. p. 175, ed. Miller.

Thus we see that even the father of Heresy bears witness to the doctrine of the Trinity.

The impious assertions of Simon Magus, the Father of the Gnostic heretics, appear to have been in St. Peter's mind when he wrote his Second Epistle. See 2 Pet. i. 16—18.

11. διὰ τὸ—ἐξεστακέναι] because they had been bewitched.

"Intransitivè" (Brüder). The Vulgate has an active sense,
"quia dementâsset eos," which is followed in the English Version.

13. ἐπίστευσε] he made a public profession of faith, and became one of the members of the visible Church, who were called πιστοί. On this sense of πιστεύω, see Acts ii. 44; iv. 32; and on Rom. xiv. 2. ὅτε ἐπιστεύσαμεν: οἱ ἅγιοι designate the members of the Church generally, Acts ix. 32. 41, and cp. οἱ σωζόμενοι, ii. 47.

- έξίστατο] he who had himself been έξιστῶν τὸ έθνος, v. 9.

14. πρὸς αὐτούς] to them at Samaria, the city.

— Πέτρον καl 'Ιωάννην'] Peter and John. On the continuance of the Apostles at Jerusalem after the Ascension, see above on i. 4; viii. 1. As to St. John particularly, see Blunt, Lectures, p. 86, who observes, that though Asia Minor was his ultimate destination, there is no evidence of his having been there during the life (qu. visits) of St. Paul; and wherever he is mentioned in the Acts it is in connexion with Palestine.

15—18. o'Trues] who went down and prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost. For as yet He had fallen upon none of them; but only they had been baptized into the Name of the Lord Jesus. Then they were laying their hands upon them, and they were receiving the Holy Ghost. The imperfect tense here used ("were laying on," "were receiving") shows the repetition of the act in the several cases of the believers who had been baptized. The Apostles sent Peter and John from Jerusalem to Samaria, in order to do what Philip the Deacon, who was there, could not do, and what Paul the Apostle afterwards did (see xix. 6), i. e. to give to those who had been baptized, the fall outpouring of the Holy Ghost by laying on of Apostolic hands.

The going down of Peter and John to the city of Samaria, in order to receive its inhabitants who had been baptized, into full communion with the spiritual Israel of God's Church in Christ, is an event full of interest when considered with reference to the history of the Old Testament concerning that region.

As was observed above (vii. 16), Sychem or Shechem, in Samaria, was the first place in Canaan where God appeared to Abraham when he came from Haran, and there he built his first altar to the Lord. It was also the first place to which Jacob went, on his coming from Padan Aram, with his children the Patriarchs; and there also he built the altar El-Elohe-Israel. (Gen. xxxiii. 20.) There it was, that two of the twelve Patriarchs, Simeon and Levi, in cruelty and subtlety, constrained the in-habitants to communion with the literal Israel by Circumcision. (Gen. xxxiv. 15-30.)

But now, after that the Holy Ghost has been poured out from heaven upon the Church,-two of the Twelve Apostolic Patriarchs of the spiritual Israel, -Peter and John, -go down to the same region,—perhaps also to the same city,—and receive its inhabitants into full communion with the true children of Abraham, or Israel of God, the Christian Church, by the spiritual Circumcision of the heart, i.e. by the Gift of the Holy

The names of the two Apostles so employed deserve notice. Simeon and Levi had been the Ministers of Wrath; Peter and John are the Ministers of Grace. Peter's name was Simeon (Acts xv. 14); and John, as joined (Gen. xxix. 34) constantly to him (see on John xviii. 15, 16. Acts iii. 1), was well typified by Levi, the brother, by both parents, of Simeon (Gen. xxix. 33, 34;

We may observe also, that the gracious work of the Spirit on the hearts of the Apostles themselves, and through them on the Church, is made more significant by the contrast of the former conduct of two of the Apostles in this region. Before they had been baptized with "the Holy Ghost and with fire," the two brethren, James and John, even when in the company of Christ upon earth, had been eager to call down fire from heaven and destroy the village of the Samaritans, which would not receive them. (Luke ix. 54.) They had been ready to do the vindictive work of Simeon and Levi. But now that they have been baptized with fire, the two Apostolic brethren, Peter and John, call down from heaven on the Samaritans the pure and holy flame of zeal and love. Such was the change wrought by the Holy Ghost, poured down from heaven by Christ, now ascended into heaven, and there sitting in glory.

To the authorities cited above concerning this administration of the Rite of Confirmation (on v. 5), may be added what is said by S. Jerome, a Presbyter, and one not over eager to exalt the rights of the Episcopate: "Are you ignorant that this is the custom of our Churches, that hands are laid on those who are baptized, and the Holy Spirit invoked over them? Do you inquire where this is written? It is in the Acts of the Apostles" (ad Lucifer. c. 4, p. 294). "This is the usage of our Churches. The Bishop goes forth (excurrit) and makes a tour in order to lay his hands and to invoke the Holy Spirit on those who in smaller towns have been baptized by our Priests and Deacons" (ibid.). And S. Cyprian (Epist. 73), "They who are baptized are brought to the Chief Pastors of the Church, that by our prayer (Cyprian being a bishop) and the laying on of hands they may receive the Holy Ghost, and be completed by the seal of Christ;" and before him, Tertullian, a presbyter, de Bapt. c. 8, and Augustine (de Trin. xv. 26), "Ecclesia in Præpositis suis nunc servat morem, quem habebant Apostoli, oratione et manuum impositione tribuendi Spiritum Sanctum;" and Theophyl. says, "After Baptism the Holy Spirit is given by laying on of hands; and this order is observed to our day:" this was written in the eleventh century.

Here is the answer to the question sometimes put now, as indeed it was of old, "What profit is there to me from the Ministry of Confirmation, after the Sacrament of Baptism?" The Holy Spirit (says Eusebius Emisenus, or perhaps Salvian, see Hammond, iv. 895) which descends on the waters of Baptism with healing on His Wings (salutifero illapsu) gives, at the baptismal font, complete remission of sins. And in Confirmation He supplies grace, for growth in holiness. In Baptism we are regenerated unto life; in Confirmation we are invigorated for life's warfare. Baptism suffices for those who are called away by God in tender years: Confirmation arms and equips the young soldier (who has been enlisted in Baptism under Christ's banner) to fight a good fight in the conflicts of this world.

It appears from v. 16 that the Holy Ghost had not visibly fallen upon any of the converts before the Apostles had laid their hands upon them. That is, the full effusion of the Holy Ghost, with its then visible manifestations of tongues and other signs, had not been vouchsafed to them. As S. Aug. says (in Joann. Tract. vi.), "Nondum acceperant Spiritum Sanctum, sicul tunc descendebat ad ostendendam significationem gentium crediturarum, ut linguis loquerentur."

The reasons of this seem to be, to show the need of union with the Apostles, and to secure due respect to their persons and office; and to assure the Church, in all ages, of the reality of the inward grace ministered to all worthy recipients of Confirmation.

Hence Confirmation was called the Consummating Unction, χρίσις τελειωτική, as completing Baptism. See Bp. Taylor's Dissertation with that title, Works, xi. 215. As S. Ambrose teaches (de Sacram. iii. 2): "Post fontem (baptismi) superest ut perfectio fiat, quando ad invocationem sacerdotis Spiritus Sanctus infunditur." And as Hooker says (V. lxvi.), "It confirms and perfects that which the grace of the Spirit has already begun in Baptism;" and cp. Hammond's Treatise "de Confirmatione," Works, iv. 851. Bp. Pearson, Lectures in Acta, v. 6; and Dr. Comber, Companion to the Temple, iii. p. 451. Bingham, Antiq., bk. xii. here. Blunt, Lectures, p. 40; and see also Calvin here, "in whose opinion," says R. Nelson, "this passage in the Acts shows that Confirmation was instituted by the Apostles;" and see the valuable Manual entitled "CATECHESIS," by the Bishop of St. Andrew's, Lond. 1857, and the remarks made and authorities quoted in an excellent Essay by the late Rev. John Frere, M.A., Rector of Cottenham. Lond. 1845.

In another important respect Confirmation is the consummation of Baptism, -not from any defect in Baptism itself, but from the circumstances of persons who have been baptized;

In primitive times, from the nature of the case, the majority of those who were baptized were Adults. But now that Christianity has been long preached in the world, they who are bap-tized are, for the most part, Infants. "The astipulation of a good conscience is an essential part of Baptism" (1 Pet. iii. 21). And "for all such as have been baptized in their Infancy the personal resumption or ratification of that vow which they made by their sponsors at the sacred laver is to be exacted in the public congregation." And this is done at Confirmation. (Dr. Jackson on the Creed, bk. x. ch. l. vol. ix. p. 548.) And they who boldly confess Christ with their lips and lives on earth, will be confessed by Him at the Great Day. Matt. x. 32. Luke xii. 8.

The Church of England has declared her mind in this matter in her Office for Baptism. "Ye are to take care, that this child be brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him," &c.

And in her Office for CONFIRMATION -" Then the Bishop shall say:

. . . Almighty and everlasting God . . . we make our humble supplication unto Thee for these thy servants, upon whom after the example of thy Holy Apostles we have now laid our hands"

Also, in her sixtieth Canon of 1603, the Church of England says, that "it hath been a solemn, ancient, and laudable custom in the Church of God, continued from the Apostles' times, that all Bishops should lay their hands upon children baptized and them and blessing them,—which we commonly call Confirmainstructed in the Catechism of Christian Religion, praying over

It has indeed been alleged by some, that the Church of England says only that Confirmation is administered after the example of the Apostles, and not by reason of any direct precept of the Apostles, or any institution of any perpetual ordinance by

But on this it is to be observed, that in such cases as these example is equivalent to precept.

What was done by the Apostles in this matter, and what the Holy Ghost himself here records in Holy Scripture as having been done by them, was not done by them of their own mind, but by the will of God. It was done by Him, through them. And He showed that it was His act, by visible outpourings of the Holy Ghost on those persons for whom the Apostles prayed, and on whom they laid their hands. Simon Magus saw, that through the laying on of the Apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given. (Acts viii. 18.) The persons on whom the Apostle St. Paul laid his hands, spake with tongues and prophesied. (Acts xix. 6.)

By these outward manifestations in the first age of the Church, Almighty God set His own seal on this practice of the Apostles; who, being taught of God, exercised this ministry as the proper means for the conveyance of an inward gift, called in Holy Scripture the Gift of the Holy Ghost, to the souls of hapτὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. 17 Τότε ἐπετίθουν τὰς χεῖρας ἐπ' αὐτοὺς, καὶ έλάμβανον Πνεθμα άγιον.

tized persons. Thus Almighty God commended this practice to the permanent use of all future generations, and made it obligatory on Christians to receive and maintain it.

God's gifts are without repentance. (Rom. xi. 29.) That is, whatever means He has once bestowed for the attainment of necessary ends, are never withdrawn by Him. He never revokes what He has once given for our growth in spiritual grace here, and for our attainment of heavenly glory hereafter. And whatsoever is offered by Him for such ends is to be thankfully used See note on John xiii. 14.

The gift of the Holy Ghost is a gift of this kind. It is as much required now, as it was in the age of the Holy Apostles. Man's ghostly enemies are still the same as they were then. His needs of ghostly helps against them, are, therefore, as great now as they were then. Man is the same. Heaven is the same. Hell is the same. The Holy Ghost is the same. His love is the same, and His gifts remain the same; and they have the same purpose and power, to enable men to escape Hell, and to reach Heaven.

Accordingly, we find that our Lord Himself describes the promised gift of the Holy Ghost as a gift in perpetuity. I will pray the Father, He says, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever. (John xiv. 16.) The Apostles, being taught by God, and being guided by Him into all Truth, used certain means for the conveyance of spiritual grace to those who had been baptized; and that God sanctioned that Apostolic practice by visible marks of His own approval and favour.

These means were Prayer and Laying-on of Hands. These means are reckoned by the Holy Spirit, speaking in the Epistle to the Hebrews, as among the first principles of the Doctrine of Christ (Heb. vi. 2), where the doctrine of Laying on of Hands is joined with the doctrine of Baptism.

We know, from the testimony of ancient Christian writers, that the chief Pastors, or Bishops of the Church, who had been appointed by the Apostles as their successors, and who best knew the mind of the Apostles, used these same means, and prayed and laid their hands on those who had been baptized, as the Holy Apostles had done before them; and that the primitive Christian Bishops did this for the same purpose as the Apostles had done, namely, for the conveyance of the gift of the Holy Ghost to those who had been baptized, and on whom they laid their hands with We find that the earliest Christian Churches, planted by the Apostles, used these means; and that this Apostolic practice was called by them Confirmation, because in it they who have been baptized are confirmed and strengthened by the Holy Ghost the Comforter. These means have been ever used by the Church of Christ Universal, to which He has promised His perpetual presence (Matt. xxviii. 20), and the continual guidance of His Spirit, and which is the Church of the Living God, the Pillar and Ground of the Truth (1 Tim. iii. 15). We find also that these means have been mercifully preserved to us, by God's goodness, in our own Church, which, at every Baptism administered by her to Infants, commands that the child then baptized shall "be brought to the Bishop, to be confirmed by him," so soon as it has been duly catechised; and she declares, in her office for Confirmation, that the Laying-on of Hands of the Bishop on those who have been baptized, is an act done by him "after the example of the Holy Apostles."

We may therefore conclude; that Almighty God, Who is the Author and Giver of all Grace, and without Whom we can do nothing that is pleasing in His sight, vouchsafes to bestow on those who have been baptized the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the appointed means of Prayer, and of the Laying-on of Hands of the successors of the Holy Apostles, who were inspired by the Holy Ghost, and who employed these means, and delivered them to be used by those who came after them, even to the end. What was thus done by the Holy Apostles under the guidance and in-spiration of the Holy Ghost, was done by the Holy Ghost, Who guided and inspired them. And whensoever the Holy Ghost vouchsafes to appoint and employ certain means for bestowing His own gifts, we have no right to expect to receive those gifts from Him, unless we conform ourselves to His will, and use those means, which He has been pleased to institute for their bestowal. To neglect those means, is to grieve the Holy Spirit who works by them. It is to despise and disobey Christ, who sent the Holy Ghost to teach His Apostles all things, and to guide them into all truth, and to abide with them for ever; and who said to His Apostles, He that receiveth you receiveth Me, and he that receiveth Me receiveth Him that sent Me (Matt. x. 40), and whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when you depart out of that house or city shake off the dust of Verily, I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrha in the Day of Judgment than for that city (Matt. x. 14, 15). On the other hand, if we receive those means thankfully and reverently, we receive Christ, who promised to be ever with His Apostles even unto the end of the world. We receive the Holy Ghost the Comforter, who guided the Apostles to use those means for the bestowal of His own blessed gift to the Christian soul, for its growth in grace here, and for its everlasting glory hereafter.

Richard Hooker's lamentations for the insufficient administration of Confirmation in his own day (see Eccl. Pol. V. lxvi. 8) might be reiterated with a hundred-fold force in the present times, when, from the inadequate number of Bishops, an immense majority of the population grow up without ever receiving the completion of their baptismal privileges, by the reception of Confirmation, and the subsequent graces of the Holy Spirit given in the Lord's Supper, and, consequently, are never brought into full communion with the Church; and though they may have been baptized by her, yet, being never made fully partakers of her privileges, they fall away into indifference or unbelief, or are ar-

It seems as if Confirmation, being restricted in its administration to those who are successors of the Apostles, were designed by Divine Providence to serve the important purpose of maintaining a vital principle of Church Unity, by bringing all the children of God in a Diocese, as members of one spiritual household, to receive the benediction of their Spiritual Father in God: thus reminding them of their filial adoption in Christ the Son of God into the family of One heavenly Father; and of the gracious over-shadowing of the One Spirit of Unity—the Divine Dove—whose invisible wings are spread over them, and shed grace from heaven upon them.

It also seems as if this restriction of Confirmation to the Episcopal office were divinely ordered, in order to show more clearly the necessity of elasticity and expansion of Episcopacy, in proportion to the growth of the population of a country, and so to ensure (short of absolute compulsion) those other blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit on the Church through the ministrations of a pious, learned, zealous, and faithful Episcopate.

θεασάμενος. But when Simon saw that the Holy Ghost is being given; it is observable, that, whereas miraculous powers were exercised by the Deacons, and other disciples, yet it does not appear that they had the power "to derive or communicate them to other men," as Hooker remarks, V. lxvi.

" Simon Magus," says Hooker (V. lxvi. 2), " perceiving that power to be in none but the Apostles, and presuming that they which had it could sell it, sought to purchase it of them with money." Thus even Simon himself, the arch-heretic, supplies a strong argument for the reality of the Divine Grace dispensed by prayer and laying on of Apostolic hands. He would never have offered to give money for what did not exist.

On the sin of Simony hence deriving its name, see the authorities in Bingham, Antiq. xvi., and Dupin on the Study of Theology, p. 469.

It has been supposed by some that Simon himself had been confirmed by the Apostles, but this is not probable.

On the covelousness of the Gnostic Teachers, the followers of Simon, see St. Peter's own testimony, 2 Pet. ii.

20. Πέτρος δὲ εἶπε-κτῶσθαι] But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee because thou thoughtest to purchase the gift of God by money. A remarkable proof of St. Peter's honesty, courage, and disinterestedness.

Simon Peter would not receive any thing from Simon Magus

It was the gift of God. He boldly rebuked Simon, who was adored by the people of Samaria. And Simon Magus, who had bewitched the people, feels Simon Peter's power, and submits to it, acknowledges his prophetic gifts, and craves his prayers (v. 24).

They (Peter and John) were evangelizing many villages of the Samaritans; perhaps, among these, was that village on which John had once desired to call down fire from heaven. (Luke ix. 52.) But the Holy Ghost, sent down from heaven with a baptism of fire, had changed his heart, and warmed it with love.

26. Γάζαν] Gaza, Hebr. την, a fortress, the Hebrew v being changed into the Greek γ . Gen. x. 19. Josh. xiii. 3. 1 Sam. vi. 17. An old Canaanitish fortified town of Philistia, celebrated in the history of Samson; situated on a hill twenty stadia from the sea, stormed and plundered by Alexander the Great (Plutarch, Alex. 25. Q. Curt. iv. 6), and dismantled by the Jewish Prince Alexander Janneus, B.C. 96 (see Joseph. Ant. xiii. 13.3), but not long afterwards restored by Gabinius (Joseph. xiv. 5.3). For a description, see Robinson, ii. 375-384.

In the sending forth of the Gospel toward Gaza, celebrated in Philistian History, and in the conversion of the chamberlain of Ethiopia, we may recognize an intimation and earnest of the fulfilment of the Prophecy concerning Christ (Ps. lxxxvii. 4), "Behold Philistia, with Tyre and Ethiopia, there shall He be born," and Ps. lx. 8, "Philistia, be thou glad of Me," and eviii. 9, "Over Philistia will I triumph," and lxviii. 31, "Ethiopia shall stretch out her hands unto God."

The incidents in the Acts of the Apostles are, for the most part, prophetical as well as historical; they show what has been, and is; and in the past and present they give a pledge of the future progress and triumphs of Christianity.

- αδτη ἐστὶν ἔρημος] this is desert. These words are regarded by many as a parenthesis of St. Luke, distinguishing it as the old City, ruined by Alexander, from the other Gaza. pide, Wetstein, Rosenm., and others;

But this does not seem to be a correct view.

The site of the new City was near that of the old one. The same roads led to them both; and what did Philip do there? Nothing. He did not meet the Eunuch at Gaza, - new or old, but in the wilderness. See also on v. 36 and v. 40, whence it appears that Philip did not ever arrive at Gaza.

The meaning seems to be this;

Philip had been very successful in preaching in a populous metropolitan City to vast multitudes (see v. 6). God would now try his faith, and show His own Divine power, and present an example in him to other Preachers of the Gospel. He would also reward the devout Ethiopian, who could little expect to meet a preacher in the wilderness;

The address of the Angel to St. Philip may be therefore paraphrased thus; -Quit the City of Samaria, but do not go to the north, to populous Galilee, where thou mightest make many converts; nor yet to Jerusalem, but beyond it, to the very extremity of Palestine. Go along the road which leads to Gaza,which is desert; Almighty God has something for thee to do there. He can enable thee to do the work of an Evangelist, not only in the city of Samaria, but in the wilderness of Phi-

This was a speech something like our Lord's question to the Apostle Philip in the wilderness ($\ell \nu \tau \hat{\eta} \epsilon \rho \eta \mu (q)$, "Whence shall we buy bread for these that they may eat?" (Matt. xiv. 15.

John vi. 5.)

It may also be compared to His command to the Apostles, to cast in their net for a draught, in a place in the sea where they had toiled all night, and caught nothing. (Luke v. 5. John

But still the command of the Lord to Philip was,-"Go along the road to Gaza, to the southern extremity of Palestine, the wilderness." And he arose and went. And there, in the wilderness, he saw a chariot, and was commanded by the Spirit to join himself to it; he ran and overtook it, he fed the soul of the Ethiopian Courtier with the bread of life; he caught, if we may venture so to speak (see John xxi. 11), this 'great Fish' in the Net of the Gospel, even in the wilderness. He baptized him; and perhaps by means of the example and influence of this great Courtier, the Morians' land soon stretched forth her hands unto God (Ps. Ixviii. 31. Cf. Zeph. iii. 10). And thus even in Philip the Evangelist was the prophecy fulfilled, "The voice of him that crieth in the Wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God."

As to the word έρημος, it is generally considered as an adjective here; and if so, it is to be connected with δδός. And so the Arabic and Syriac Versions, and Lightfoot here, and Winer (Gr. Gr. pp. 108. 142), and Robinson (ii. p. 380), who says that it indicates the southern road, leading from Eleutheropolis to Gaza, through the desert, or region without villages; as is the case at the present day.

The sense then would be: Go along that road which is deserted, and where therefore you may not expect to meet any one. But still, Go.

Or, $\alpha \delta \tau \eta$ $\delta \sigma \tau l \nu$ $\delta \rho \eta \mu o s$ may mean, 'that region is uninhabited,' an $\delta \rho \eta \mu o s$: where you may expect to find no one; but here is the force of the command, here is the trial of your faith. Go and see. And it may be observed that the word $\delta \rho \eta \mu o s$ occurs eight other times in the Acts of the Apostles, and in seven of these (vii. 30. 36. 38. 42. 44; xiii. 18; xxi. 38) it is a substantive. In one only (i. 20, a quotation from the LXX) it is an adjective.

It does not seem therefore that the words αὕτη ἐστὶν ἔρημος are a parenthesis inserted by St. Luke; but they are words of the Angel to St. Philip; and their meaning is either, "this road is desert," or, "this is a wilderness."

On this sending of St. Philip, see below, ix. 6.

27. εὐνοῦχος] rendered by some here a Chamberlain or Courtier. See on Matt. xix. 12.

It must however be observed, that a strong reason in favour of the literal translation of the word (as adopted in the English Version) may be derived from the promise in Isaiah lvi. 3—8. And it may have been a part of St. Luke's design, in this narrative, to show that that promise was fulfilled in the Christian Church, as described by St. Paul, Gal. iii. 28.

Besides; the case of this εὐνοῦχος may be compared with that of the faithful and merciful Ebed-melech, also an Ethiopian and an Eunuch, who is contrasted with the rebel King and Courtiers of Judah—as the faithful Ethiopian here is contrasted with the obdurate Rulers of Jerusalem—and who received a special promise and blessing from God (Jeremiah xxxviii. 7—13; xxxix. 16—18. Cp. Baumagarten, i. p. 205)

16-18. Cp. Baumgarten, i. p. 205).

Indeed this history of the Ethiopian, and that which soon follows, of Cornelius the first-fruits of the Gentile world, derive additional interest from the consideration that in them may be recognized a fulfilment of ancient Prophecies, particularly in that chapter of Isaiah (lvi. 3) which speaks of the extension of the blessings of God's Covenant in Christ—

(1) to the "Eunuchs that keep His Sabbaths and choose the things that please Him," and in them to all who are alone and childless in this world, and yet are made members of the household of God in Christ, and so receive "a place and a name better than of sons and daughters;" and

(2) to the "Sons of the Stranger" (such as Cornelius), who were once afar off and aliens from God, but are now made near in Christ, and are brought to His Holy Mountain, and "made joyful in His House of Prayer, which shall be for 'all people." See Isaiah lvi. 4—7.

It may be here suggested for the reader's consideration whether these Chapters (viii—x.) of the Acts of the Apostles do not also display the fulfilment of another Prophecy concerning the Evangelical Conquests of Christ (viz. Psalm cviii. 7). Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens (v. 5), i. e. by the Ascension. God hath spoken in His Holiness, I will rejoice and divide Shechem, or Sychem—fulfilled in the Evangelization of Samaria—perhaps Sychem itself. The triumphs of the Gospel in that region and in Galilee, mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles (ix. 31), seem to be predicted by the words of that Psalm (v. 8), "Manasseh is mine, Ephraim also is the strength of my head;" and Christ triumphed over Philistia by the preaching of Philip in the road to Gaza and at Azotus, and of Peter at Joppa.

Perhaps also the promise of the conquest over Edom (which was a name for the enemies of God's Church, and is especially applied by the Rabbis to Rome) may have been begun to be fulfilled by the reception of the Roman soldier Cornelius, the representative of the heathen and Roman world, into the Christian Church. Doubtless also it had a literal fulfilment in the Victories of the Gospel in Idumæa.

The gracious consequences of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, in the propagation of the Gospel, are prophetically declared in Psalm lxviii. 7—31. In v. 7 the description of the giving of the Law on Sinai is immediately followed by that of the promulgation of the Gospel at Sion, and its fruits are foreshown. See particularly v. 27 of that Psalm, perhaps in reference to the Conversion of St. Paul, and v. 31, to the baptism of the Ethiopian.

Indeed the History of the Acts of the Apostles is an Inspired Comment on the language of the Psalms and of the Prophets.

28. ἀνεγίνωσκεν] he was reading, and reading aloud; Statesman and Courtier as he was. A celebrated passage, often cited by the Fathers, as showing the blessed fruits of reading the Scriptures. See S. Chrys. here, and hom. 35 in Gen. S. Jerome, Epist. 103, ad Paulin. A lesson to travellers. "Legendum, audiendum, percontandum, etiam in itinere, etiamsi parum intelligis (vide v. 34) Habenti datur." It seems probable from this verbal parallelism, that Philip spoke in Greek; and that the Eunuch was reading Isaiah in the Septuagint version made in Egypt.

Valck. compares the celebrated paronomasia of Julian the Apostate,—ἀνέγνων, ἔγνων, κατέγνων, and the courageous reply of the Christian Bishop to him, ἀνέγνως, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔγνως εἰ γὰρ ἔγνως, οὐκ ἄν κατέγνως, and Wetstein cites Cato's saying, "Legere et non intelligere nec legere (negligere) est."

Here ἐν τῷ τακεινώσει ἡ κρίσις αὐτοῦ ἡρθη represents the Hebrew ττὸ τρύτρη, i. e. He was taken from oppression and judgment; and it seems the LXX means to say that by his humiliation his condemnation was taken away, i. e. He was justified; and thus the words are a paraphrase of the original, and mean that "He was made perfect through (as well as from) sufferings," and was exalted not only from his humiliation, but because "He humbled Himself and became obedient to death" (Phil. ii. 8. Heb. ii. 10).

35. τὸν Ἰησοῦν] Jesus. The Holy Spirit here records that the holy Evangelist St. Philip applied the Fifty-third Chapter of Isaiah to Jesus Christ.

Hence it is clear (whatever may be alleged by some modern Critics to the contrary) that the Fifty-third Chapter of Isaiah has rightly been deemed by the Church to be a prophecy concerning Christ; and that the Criticism which propounds allegations inconsistent with such an exposition is entitled to little regard from those who believe in the Inspiration of the New Testament, and desire to be faithful members of Christ and of His Church.

Compare the remarks of the Apostolic Father and Bishop Clemens Romanus, cap. 16, who applies this prophecy to Christ dying on the cross.

36. δδωρ] water. At Bethsor (say the Scholia on S. Jerome, loc. Hebr. p. 277) or Bethsoron, twenty miles S. of Jerusalem, and only two miles from Hebron. "Ibi," says Bede, p. 41, "mutavit Æthiops pellem suam, id est sorde peccatorum ablutâ de lavacro Jesu dealbatus ascendit." If so, Philip overtook the Ethiopian long before he came to Gaza; and this seems to be asserted with Marketing the comments of the second of another reason why έρημος cannot be connected with Γάζα in

- βαπτισθηναι] to be baptized. A proof that Philip, in preaching Jesus, had preached the necessity of Baptism. How else would the Eunuch have asked to be baptized? Cp. Augustine, de Fide et Operibus, c. 9, who considers this case of the Ethiopian, and says, that by the compendious expression (v. 35), "Philip preached to him Jesus," St. Luke implies that Philip preached "not only what is to be believed concerning Christ, but what is to be done by those who are joined to the unity of the body of Christ; and preached to him the main points of Christian Faith and Duty."

37. εἶπε—Χριστόν] This verse is not found in A, B, C, G, H, and in some ancient Versions, and has been omitted by most recent editors. Perhaps rightly: and it may be observed also that the words τὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν (as they stand in Elz.) are no where thus used by St. Luke in the Acts of the Apostles or the Gospel.

But, on the other hand, the verse is found in substance in E, and in the Syriac, Vulg., Armenian, and Arabic versions, and in numerous cursive Manuscripts. And it appears to be at least as ancient as the age of Irenœus, who says, iii. 12, " Hunc esse Jesum, et impletam in Eo esse Scripturam, quemadmodum ipse Eunuchus credens et statim postulans baptizari dicebat Credo Filium Dei esse Jesum,"—omitting Χριστόν, and it is cited by Cyprian. I have not therefore ventured to expunge the verse;

which is retained, in brackets, by Bornemann.

38. ἐβάπτισεν αὐτόν] he baptized him. Philip was a married man, and only a Deacon, and was sent by the Angel to baptize man, and only a Deacon, and was sent by the Angel to baptize the Ethiopian. "Let me be a Phillip; be thou a minister of Candace. Say, 'Here is water, what hindereth me to be baptized?' Seize the opportunity. Though an Ethiop in body, be thou pure in heart. And do not say, 'Let a Bishop baptize me;' or, if a Presbyter, let him be unmarried. Man looketh on the face, but God on the heart. Any Minister can cleanse you by Vol. I.—Part II. Baptism, if he is not alien from the Church. One Minister may be of gold, another of iron, but they are both like rings which have the seal of Christ; let them stamp on thee, who art the wax, the image of the Great King. There may be a difference in the metal, but there is none in the seal." S. Greg. Naz. ii. p. 711, an Oration to those who delay their Baptism.

39. ηρπασε] caught up Philip. Cp. the case of Elijah, 1 Kings xviii. 12. 2 Kings ii. 16. Ezekiel iii. 12, and of St. Paul, 2 Cor. xii. 2. 4. See Didymus and Chrys. here, who observe, that by this sudden disappearance of Philip, the Ethiopian was assured that the message he had received was from heaven: and that, if the Ethiopian had asked Philip to remain with him, and he had refused to do so, he would not then have gone on his way rejoicing Cp. Robinson's Palestine, i. 320; iii. 14.

40. εδρέθη εls 'Aζωτον] he was found at Azotus. This showed that the object of his mission was attained; and he is spared the weariness of a journey in the desert, as a reward for his ready obedience in going to preach in a desert, see v. 26. Ashdod, now Esdud (Robinson, ii. p. 368),—being on the coast, half-way between Gaza on the south, and Joppa on the north, and in the same latitude with Jerusalem. It was 260 stadia from the ancient Gaza. See Wetst. On els see v. 23; vii. 4. Winer,

On Cæsarea itself see x. l.

The house of Philip the Evangelist was still standing at Cæsarea in S. Jerome's age, and was even shown in Bede's time. Jerome, Epist. Paul. p. 150. Bede, in Acta, p. 43.

- ταs πόλεις πάσας] the cities, all of them, probably Ekron, Jamnia, Joppa, Apollonia, and perhaps Lydda.

CH. IX. 1. Σαῦλος] Saul, God's σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς for the conversion of the Gentiles, was of the tribe of Benjamin (Acts xiii. 21); and the Fathers (Tertullian adv. Marcion. v. 1. Chrys. Ambrose, de Ben. Patr. ad fin. Aug., Serm. 279) apply to him, in a spiritual sense, Jacob's prophecy, Gen. xlix. 27, "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf. In the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil." That is to say, in a spiritual sense, at the beginning of his career he shall be a Persecutor of Christ's flock, as a Wolf; but in the end, he shall feed them as a Shepherd. "Escas dividet" (Aug. Serm. 279, and Append. Serm. 189); and "escas divisit," says Ambrose (de Bened. Patriarch. 12), "evangelizans gentibus verbum."

Benjamin's birth was the occasion of his mother's death; so "Sauli nativitas in Evangelium matri ejus Synagogæ mortem attulit." At first he might be called Benoni (a child of sorrow), At first he might be called Benoni (a child of sorrow), but by God's grace he became Benjamin (Gen. xxxv. 18), the son of a right hand. Benjamin was the last among the twelve Patriarchs; so Paul among the Apostles (1 Cor. xv. 8, 9). jamin was preferred above the rest by Joseph (Gen. xliii. 34); so

Paul by Christ (1 Cor. xv. 10).
Benjamin is called 'little' (עייי, Ps. lxviii. 27), and yet "a Ruler;" and so Saul is 'Paul,' or little (see on xiii. 9), and calls himself "the least of the Apostles" (1 Cor. xv. 9), and yet "not

2. εls Δαμασκόν] "Damascus, civitas olim celeberrima, in planitie amœnissimâ et fertilissimâ inter Libanum et Antilibanum sita, in eâ Syriæ parte, quæ in literis sacris Syria Damascena 2 Sam. viii. 5. Ies. vii. 8, à Strabone (xvi. p. 755), Cæle-Syria vocatur. Quanta Judæorum frequentia ibi fuerit, ex eo colligi potest, quod Josephus (B. J. ii. 25) narret, sub Nerone Damascenos in sua urbe decem Judæorum millia, quos in publicis thermis collectos fortè habebant, inermes oppressisse et trucidasse." (Kuin.) Cp. Howson, i. 106. Lewin, pp. 54-63.

It may at first seem surprising, that the power of the High Priest and the Sanhedrim of Jerusalem should have extended beyond the limits of Palestine so far as Damascus, and that they should have been allowed to send Saul on a commission to bind in that city, and to bring bound to Jerusalem men and women, without any reference to the power of Rome.

The solution of this question appears to be supplied, -not by the Acts of the Apostles, but by the circumstance which appears incidentally from the statement of St. Paul in one of his Epistles, viz. "that in Damascus the Governor, or Ethnarch, under Aretas, the king (i. e. of Arabia Petræa), was guarding (ἐφρούρει) the city of the Damascenes, desirous to seize him, and that he was let down in a basket by a window in the wall, and so escaped his hands." (2 Cor. xi. 32, 33.)

Hence it appears that Damascus was now garrisoned by a military force of king Aretas-a remarkable circumstance-and not, as heretofore, by the Romans, and by the forces of the President of Syria. (Cp. Joseph. xiv. 4, 5.)

By what means Damascus had come into the hands of Aretas is not clear. Probably Aretas, after his victory over Herod Anti-pas (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1. Cp. Euseb. H. E. i. 11), had been induced by his successes to make inroads into Syria; and a favourable opportunity seems to have been presented by the departure of Vitellius, the President of Syria, to Rome, on hearing the news of the death of the Emperor Tiberius (in the spring of A.D. 37), for the occupation of Damascus by Aretas.

The Roman power lay as it were in abeyance; and Aretas, whose victory was welcome to the Jews detesting Herod Antipas, was desirous to conciliate them, and seconded the endeavours of the officials of the Sanhedrim to arrest Saul, whom they had sent as a commissioner to bind the Christians at Damascus, and who was now, in their eyes, a renegade and apostate, and who "confounded the Jews at Damascus" by preaching the doctrine which he had been sent by them to destroy.

If these suppositions are correct, then we see in them an additional proof of St. Paul's sincerity and courage, in his conversion to Christianity.

— τῆς ὁδοῦ] קָּרָהְ, often used for saving doctrine and practice; the way that leads to heaven (Chrys.); "Via, in quâ ambulandum, non otiandum" (Bengel). "Iter hoc facientibus patria cœlum est" (Valck.). As τὸ ὅνομα—the Name—was, to the primitive Church, the holy and saving Name of Jesus (see v. 40), so ή δδόs-the Way-was the holy and saving Way of the Gospel. See below, xix. 9. 23; xxii. 4; xxiv. 14. 22; xxvi. 13. 3. ἐν τῷ —ἐγγίζειν τῷ Δαμασκῷ] as he was drawing near to Damascus. The distance from Jerusalem to Damascus was about 140 miles. Saul was permitted by God to go on his journey, and was not checked, till he approached its end, and was about to enter the city, and to seize upon his prey. (See Acts xxii. 6; xxvi. 12. 1 Cor. xv. 8.)

Thus the reason of this divine interposition was more clearly evinced. It showed God's watchful Providence, and fatherly mercy to His Church, in the critical hour of her need. Then Saul was arrested; and then, in the crisis of her peril, the Church was delivered. This is in exact accordance with the general operations of Almighty God, as seen in Holy Scripture. See Dr. Barrow's excellent remarks in Sermon xi. vol. i. p. 232, where he says,-

"God beholdeth violent men setting out in their unjust attempts. He letteth them proceed on in a full career, until they reach the edge of their design; then instantly He checketh, He stoppeth, He tumbleth them down, or turneth them backward. Thus was Haman's plot dashed (Esther iii.), when he had procured a royal decree, when he had fixed a time, when he had issued forth letters to destroy God's people. Thus was Pharaoh overwhelmed (Exod. xiv.), when he had just overtaken the children of Israel. Thus were the designs of Abimelech, of Absalom, of Adonijah, of Sanballat nipped. Thus when Sennacherib with an unmatchable host had encamped against Jerusalem, and had to appearance swallowed it, God did put a hook into his nose, and turned him back into his own land (2 Kings xix. 28). Thus when Antiochus Epiphanes was marching on furiously to accomplish his threat of turning Jerusalem into a charnel, a noisome disease did intercept his progress (2 Macc. ix. 5). when the profane Caligula did mean to discharge his bloody rage on the Jews for refusing to worship him (Joseph. xviii. 12), a domestic sword did presently give vent to his revengeful breath. Thus also, when Julian had by his policy and authority projected to overthrow our religion, his plot soon was quashed, and his life snapped away by an unknown hand (Chrysost. in Babyl. Orat. 2. Naz. Orat. 4). Thus whenever the enemy doth come in like a flood (threatening immediately to overflow and overturn all things), the Spirit of the Lord doth lift up a standard against him (Isa. lix. 19); that is, God's secret efficacy doth suddenly restrain and repress his outrage. This usually is the method of Divine providence. God could prevent the beginnings of wicked designs; He could supplant them in their first onsets; He could any where sufflaminate and subvert them; but he rather winketh for a time, and suffereth the designers to go on till they are mounted to the top of confidence, and good people are cast on the brink of ruin; then ἀπὸ μηχανη̂s, surprisingly, unexpectedly He striketh in with effectual succour; so declaring how vain the presumption is of impious undertakers; how needful and sure His protection is over innocent people; how much reason the one hath to dread Him, and the other to confide in Him. God seen, then his care and power will be acknowledged, when He snatcheth us from the jaws of danger, when our soul doth escape as a bird out of the snare of the fowler." (Ps. cxxiv. 7.) Cp. Barrow, vol. iv. p. 218, Serm. ix. See also below, xii. 6. 23, and note on 1 Peter iv. 17.

This, and something more than this was done by God in the case of Saul. He was not checked before he was near Damascus; if he had been stopped near Jerusalem, or midway, he would perhaps never have entered Damascus. But it was so ordered, that Saul might preach the Gospel in the same city whither he had come to persecute; and thus under the controlling power of God, the very instrument which had been chosen by Satan to destroy the Church at Damascus, was used by God to build it up.

So will it be at the end-when the power of Satan and of Antichrist seems nearly to have achieved a Victory over the Church, then will Christ appear from heaven to destroy them with "the brightness of His coming," and to deliver His faithful people from their hands.

4. πεσών ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν] having fallen on the earth. In pictures of his conversion Saul is generally represented on horseback, which is not very probable. S. Augustine says, "eum ambu-lâsse:" and Pharisees rarely used horses. See Salmeron and A Lapide here, and ad Deuteron. xvii. 17

- φωνήν] a voice in the Hebrew Tongue. See Acts xxii. 9; xxvi. 14.

- Σαούλ, Σαούλ] Saul, Saul: the Hebrew form of the Apostle's name, which is never used in the New Testament, except by Christ (ix. 4. 11; xxii. 7; xxvi. 14) and by Ananias (ix. 17; xxii. 13). In all other cases he is called Σαῦλος and Παῦλος.

This repetition of the name, and the fact that he alone was permitted to see Jesus (see v. 7), and to hear His words, while ό δὲ, Ἐγώ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὃν σὺ διώκεις. ΄ Αλλὰ ἀνάστηθι καὶ εἴσελθε εἰς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ λαληθήσεταί σοι τί σε δεῖ ποιεῖν. 7 ι Οἱ δὲ ἄνδρες τος $\frac{22.9}{8.26.13}$. οί συνοδεύοντες αὐτῷ εἰστήκεισαν ἐνεοὶ, ἀκούοντες μὲν τῆς φωνῆς, ε μηδένα δὲ β Dan. 10. 7.

others only saw the light, and heard the sound, showed that the vision was addressed to him.

- τί μὲ διώκεις] μὲ is emphatic, and is so placed (see Matt. xvi. 18, and on John xxi. 22). Cur Me persequeris? "Persecutorem suum vocavit persecutorem membrorum suorum (says Aug. in Joann. tract. x., and Serm. 279). Membris adhuc in terrà positis, Caput in cœlo clamabat, et non dicebat, Quid persequeris servos meos, sed, Quid ME persequeris?" And S. Bernard (Serm. de Convers. Paul. ap. A Lapide), " Persequebatur Eum qui adversus Corpus Ejus, quod est Ecclesia, odio furebat iniquo.'' Hence we may see Christ's love to His Members (Isa. lxiii. 9. Matt. xxv. 40), and the sinfulness of injuries done to the Church.

See also above, on viii. 1, and on Col. i. 24.
5. ἐγὼ Ἰησοῦς] I am Jesus. He does not say, I am the Son of God, but I am Jesus of Nazareth (δ Naζωραῖος is in A, C, E, not Elz.), He who was crucified; He to whom St. Stephen prayed, in thy hearing, when thou wast consenting to his death.

It is distinctly said that Saul saw Jesus in heaven; see vv. 17. 27. Acts xxii. 14, and St. Paul says (1 Cor. xi. 1), "have I not seen Jesus Christ?" And (1 Cor. xv. 8) last of all He was seen by me. Hence it has been argued by some Romanist Divines (e. g. A Lapide here), that Christ's human body, which is in heaven, was also near to St. Paul. "Fuit ergo Christi corpus tunc in duobus locis, puta in cœlo et in aëre; quod nota, contra eos qui negant Christi corpus posse esse in cœlo et in Eucharistiâ simul." But see on Acts iii. 21, and vii. 56, where St. Stephen sees the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God. That vision of St. Stephen explains the vision of St. Paul. And that vision of St. Stephen, and his prayer to Jesus in heaven, may have been instrumental in procuring this vision of St. Paul and his conversion.

- δυ σὺ διώκεις] whom thou art persecuting. After this word Elz adds σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν τρέμων τε καλ θαμβών εἶπε, Κύριε, τί με θέλεις ποιῆσαι; καλ δ Κύριος πρός αὐτόν. But these words are not in any MS., and seem to be borrowed from xxvi. 14, and xxii. 10.

6. είσελθε εἰς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ λαληθήσεταί σ. τ. σ. δ. π.] go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do. Observe that Saul, the future Apostle of the Gentiles, though arrested in his course by Jesus Christ Himself, was sent by Him into the City to be taught and baptized by one of the inferior ministers of the Church. (Chrys., Aug. quæst. Evang. ii. 47.)

Even therefore, in Saul's case, whose conversion was extraordinary, the ordinary means of reception into the Church were not dispensed with. He was sent by Christ Himself to Ananias.

Thus in a remarkable manner did the Great Head of the Church show the necessity of conformity to His own appointments and ordinances; and enjoins a thankful acceptance and devout use of the means of Grace which He dispenses by the agency of His Ministers, in His Holy Word and Sacraments.

S. Augustine's words on this subject are deserving of the especial attention of those who are tempted by the Evil One to despise that agency ;-

"Let the devout soul learn without pride what is to be learnt through the ministry of man; and let us not tempt Him in Whom we believe; lest, being deluded by the wiles of the Enemy, we refuse to go to Church to hear the Gospel read and preached by man, or even to read the Bible itself; and expect to be caught up into the third heaven, and to behold Christ, and to hear the Gospel from His mouth rather than from that of men.

"Let us be on our guard against these proud and perilous imaginations; and let us reflect that even the Apostle Paul himself, though dashed prostrate on the earth by a divine voice from heaven, was nevertheless sent by it to a man, in order to receive the Sacraments, and to be incorporated into the Church.

"Let us remember also, that although the Centurion Cornelius was assured by an Angel that his prayers were heard, and his alms had in remembrance before God, yet he was referred to Peter for baptism, in order to receive the Sacrament from him, and also to learn what he should believe, hope, and love." Aug. Prolog. ad de Doctr. Christ. i., and iv. c. 33. Cp. also Hooker, V. lxxvi. 9.

So Philip was sent by the Angel to instruct and baptize the Ethiopian. Acts viii. 26—29. Cp. Rom. x. 15.

7. elστήκεισαν] were standing. It is said (by Meyer, p. 184, and others) that this assertion is at variance with what St. Paul himself says, xxvi. 14, πάντων καταπεσόντων ήμων είς την γην. Here, it is alleged, his companions are represented as standing;

there, as having fallen to the earth. But this is not the case. The word είστηκεισαν here is joined with συνοδεύοντες (travelling together), and is contrasted with it; and it means, that they, who had till then been in motion, were suddenly arrested in their course. The opposition here is not between standing and falling, but between halting and going on. Cp. viii. 38, ἐκέλευσε στηναι το άρμα. Luke v. 2, πλοΐα έστῶτα, ships not sailing, but at anchor; vii. 14, οί βαστάζοντες έστησαν: viii. 44, έστη ή ρύσις τοῦ αίμα-Therefore the two accounts are quite consistent. St. Luke describes here the suddenness with which the cavalcade was checked in its course; St. Paul, their prostration to the ground.

- eveci] Elz. evveci: but the other form is preferable as connected with ἄνεωs, silent, dumb, speechless,—κωφὸς, Valck. Cp. Winer, § 5, p. 43. It is used by LXX, Prov. xvii. 28. Isa. lvi. 10, and elsewhere, and often means stunned by fear, εμβρον-τηθεls (Hesych.), as here.

- ἀκούοντες μεν της φωνης] hearing the voice. It is said in v. 4 that St. Paul ήκουσε φωνήν λέγουσαν, and so xxvi. 14, ήκουσα φωνήν λαλοῦσαν. Observe the accusative in both places, i. e. he heard and understood its articulate utterance. But they who were with him, ήκουον της φωνης (genitive), were hearing only the sound, not the words of the speaker.

There is therefore no discrepancy, as is alleged by some foreign and English Expositors, between the assertion here and that in Acts xxii. 9, where it is said that they την φωνην οὐκ ήκουσαν τοῦ λαλοῦντος. Here we have the genitive of the thing, there the accusative. The reason is, that Saul's companions ἀκούοντες της φωνής οὐκ ήκουσαν την φωνην τοῦ λαλοῦντος,—i. e. they heard, but did not understand what they heard. Our Lord made a distinction between Saul and his fellow-travellers in regard to both senses, -i. e. of eye and of ear. Saul saw Jesus; they only saw the light of His appearance; he heard and understood the words of His voice; they only heard its sound. As is well said in Catenâ, p. 361, by Ammonius, who understood and wrote Greek well, his native tongue, σημειωτέον, δτι και είδε τον 'Ιησοῦν, και ήκουσεν αὐτοῦ ὁ Παῦλος' οἱ δὲ συνόντες τὴν λαμπη-δόνα μόνον τοῦ φωτὸς αὐτοῦ εἶδον, οὐ μὴν αὐτόν' και τὸν ἦχον ήκουον της φωνης, ου μην συνήκαν τὰ λεγόμενα: one who ἀκούει φωνην (xxii. 14) also ἀκούει φωνης, but one who ἀκούει φωνης does not necessarily ἀκούει φωνήν. Examples of the genitive of the person, ἀκούειν λέγοντος (which is an elliptical expression), are irrelevant. As Grotius well says: "φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν est vocem non intellexerunt." And another scholar, inferior to none of the present age, Valckenaer, says, p. 450, "Dici possunt ακούειν τῆς φωνῆς, τὴν φωνὴν οὐκ ἀκούειν, ut prius significet so-num audire, alterum loquentis verba non intelligere." See also Schoettgen, p. 445. Hammond, p. 374. Bengel, p. 551. Hengstenberg, History of Balaam, p. 378, and Baumgarten here, pp. 217—219; see note above on Gen. xi. 8.

This is not a question (as sometimes represented) of "verbal variety," but of substantive truth. To imagine (as some have done) that St. Luke, having given an account of St. Paul's conversion in the Ninth chapter, puts into St. Paul's mouth in the Twenty-second chapter a speech which, in an important point, contradicts that account, is to suppose-not only that St. Luke was not inspired—but that he was destitute of common sense! To imagine that St. Luke really contradicts St. Paul, or makes St. Paul contradict himself, is indeed to imitate the spirit of a notorious unbeliever, and to degrade the Writer of the Acts from "Luke the beloved Physician, whose praise is in the Gospel," to "an idiot Evangelist!" (Cp. Bentley on Free-thinking, p.

If such suppositions as these are once accepted, then a door is opened to an inundation from the whole flood and torrent of unbelief, which commences its course with assumptions of what are called "verbal discrepancies" between St. Paul's account and St. Luke's, and then proceeds to deny the veracity of the one or the other, or both, and then goes on to doubt the reality of St. Paul's miraculous Conversion, and even of the Death of Christ, and the Atonement itself.

It would be endless and fruitless to recount the speculations of some Expositors (such as Eichhorn, Ammon, Wittig, Schulze, Greiling, Boehme, Hezel, Heinrichs, &c.), who have endeavoured to account for St. Paul's Conversion from ordinary physical phenomena, and to explain away all that is supernatural in St. Luke's and St. Paul's own narratives of it; or such as Lange, who regard it as a visionary reverie; or who, with Bretschneider and Emmerling, confound it with his rapture into the third heaven (2 Cor. xii. 1-7), or with Bahrdt, Venturini, and Brennecke, venture to θεωροῦντες. 8 Ἡγέρθη δὲ Σαῦλος ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς ἀνεφγμένων δὲ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτοῦ οὐδὲν ἔβλεπε· χειραγωγοῦντες δὲ αὐτὸν εἰσήγαγον εἰς Δαμασκόν.

affirm that Jesus merely died in appearance, and so presented Himself to Saul on his way; or of the Tubingen school of Critics, who deny the fact altogether.

These notions are the natural results of the Criticism, which in a vainglorious spirit of spurious liberality, invents inaccuracies and discrepancies in the Word of God: but they are not without their use, as showing, in undisguised features, the necessary consequences of that Criticism.

8. οὐδὲν ἔβλεπε] he was seeing nothing. He was committed by God like a prisoner to the chains of a three days' blindness, as it were to a soldier to guard, lest from previous prejudice he or others should say that it was a mere phantom of the brain that he had seen in the way. Euseb. in Caten. p. 154.

Compare the case of Zacharias in the Temple, whose dumbness after the Vision of the angel was a proof of its reality (Luke i. 20-22), and also an appropriate punishment for unbelief, like St. Paul's blindness, inflicted on him to show how blind he had been in his zeal and rage against the Church. And as the loosing of the tongue of Zacharias, when he wrote "his name is John" (Luke i. 63), showed why his tongue had been bound, so the visible sign of the scales falling from the eyes of St. Paul (v. 18), when Ananias laid his hands on him, served further to show not only the reality of the blindness, but also the reason of it. And as the voice of Zacharias was taken away, that he might afterwards prophesy, so St. Paul's bodily sight was eclipsed for a time, that he might afterwards shine as a glorious light in the world.

Cæcus factus est Saulus; ut interiore luce fulgeret cor ejus, exterior ad tempus erepta est; subtracta est persecutori, ut redderetur prædicatori. Et eo tempore, quo cætera non videbat, Jesum videbat : ita et in ipsa cœcitate mysterium informatur credentium ; quoniam qui credit in Jesum, Ipsum inturi debet, catera nec nata computare; ut creatura vilescat, Creator in corde dulcescat. Augustine (Serm. 279).

χειραγωγούντες] leading by the hand. Like a spoil rescued from the strong man (Chrys.), whose house had been spoiled by the Stronger than he. Matt. xii. 29.

9. μη βλέπων] On the force of μη here, see Winer, G. G. § 55, p. 431. It is more expressive than οὐ, being applied to one who had once seen, and seemed as if he might see again.

— οὐκ ἔφαγεν οὐδὲ ἔπιεν] he neither ate nor drank. An example of repentance. See his sorrow for persecuting the

Church. (Theoph.)

10. 'Avarias] Ananias. See above on v. 6, and compare S. Aug. Serm 279, who says, "Adductus est ad Ananiam; et Ananias interpretatur Ovis; ecce lupus adducitur ad ovem; Ipse Pastor de cœlo nuntiavit lupum venturum ovi, sed non sæviturum." As to this etymology of Ananias, A Lapide says, "Nescio quâ linguâ interpretatur Ovis." Perhaps they who so interpreted it connected it with durbs, durlor, and Agnus.

If (with Mintert and Kuin.) we derive it from progratiosus fuit, and m. Dominus, it happily illustrates St. Paul's assertion —" by the Grace of God I am what I am" (1 Cor. xv. 10).

11. βύμην] a lane. Not πλατεῖα, platea, a broad way, but βύμη, a narrow one (see Luke xiv. 21); and it was εὐθεῖα, recta, or straight;

Seemingly a trivial incident; if any thing in Scripture and in the lives of the Apostles, and especially in the history of the

"Vas electionis," and of so marvellous an event as St. Paul's Conversion, can rightly be so called. With reverence be it said, even this slight circumstance, which the Holy Spirit has thought fit to record, may perhaps seem to have its moral. Saul the persecutor had now passed from the broad way of worldly power and honour, on which he was lately hurrying to Damascus, and which was leading him to destruction (Matt. vii. 13), and he had now been brought to the right or straight way (cp. Acts xiii. 10), and narrow way (Matt. vii. 14), called κατ' ἐξοχὴν the Way (Acts ix. 2), in which he would now be led to everlasting life.

— Ταρσέα] of Tarsus: a principal city of Cilicia, see xi. 25; xxii. 3. "Cilicia matrem urbium habet Tarson," Solimus xli. Hirtius, de Bell. Al. lxvi.; on the river Cydnus, Strabo xiv. p. 990. Val. Max. iii. 4; an "urbs libera," Plin. v. 22. It was celebrated also for its Schools of Literature, Arts, and Sciences.

Wetst. Winer, ii. 567.

- προσεύχεται] he is praying—the attitude most proper for the reception of the moral, intellectual, and spiritual light, which was now illuminating him; and though his eyes were dark, yet he had a vision from above, and saw more clearly than before.

12. είδεν εν δράματι] he saw in a vision. This pair of visions one vouchsafed to Saul and the other to Ananias, and the one tallying with the other, takes away all suspicion of self-deception. The same providential arrangement is to be observed in the next chapter, with regard to the two corresponding visions of Cornelius and St. Peter; and the narrative of the one pair confirms that of the other pair.

 σκεῦος, Hebr. ΄΄, any instrument, ὅργανον, utensil, vessel. As applied to men, see Rom. ix. 21. 23, σκεύη ἐλέουs. 2 Tim. ii. 20.

(2) ἐκλογῆs, of choice, the genitive characteristic of the quality. See above on Matt. xxii. 11. Acts vii. 2. James i. 25, quanty. See above on Matt. xxii. 11. Acts vii. 2. James 1. 20, ἀκροατής ἐπιλησμονής. 1 Cor. x. 16, τὸ ποτήριον τῆς εὐλογίας. Heb. i. 8, ῥάβδος εὐθύτητος. 2 Pet. ii. 1, αἰρέσεις ἀπωλείας. Cp. Vorst. de Hebr. pp. 33. 246. On the meaning of the term, see further, xxii. 14, and St. Paul's own comment, Gal. i. 15. 1 Cor. xv. 10. "Saulus singulare exemplum gratiæ gratuitæ amplissimæ." (Bengel.)

Paul in himself was a σκεῦος δστράκινον, an earthen vessel (2 Cor. iv. 7); but as the Apostle of the Lord he was σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς, a chosen vessel. And the earthen vessel was a chosen vessel, in order that by the frailty of the human material, and by the divine treasure contained in it, and bestowed by it, men might see that the excellency of the power of the Gospel thus bestowed was not of man, but of God.

— βαστάσαι] to bear. "Vas electionis Paulus, quia vas legis, et Scripturarum armarium." (Jerome, in Oseam viii.) He was also a vessel, as bearing, like a living vehicle, what he contained; or also a vessel, as bearing, like a living vehicle, what he contained; or like the chariot seen by Ezekiel, in the wheels of which the Spirit was (Ezek. i. 21). So the Spirit was in this Apostolic "Vas electionis," St. Paul, and gave him life and motion, though in his own esteem he held the spiritual treasure in an earthen vessel (2 Cor. iv. 7); and so, by humility as well as zeal, he was a vessel fitted for the Master's use (2 Tim. ii. 21).

16. παθεῖν] to suffer. The word παθεῖν is happily reserved for the close of the sentence, so that the mind may dwell on that,

He who came to inflict suffering on others must now be taught to suffer, and be perfected by suffering; a proof of the reality of his Conversion. He was not drawn to Christ by promises of earthly good; he left all, lost all, for Christ. But note how he rejoices in his sufferings; see what he says, Gal. vi. 17. 2 Cor. i. 5. Rom. v. 3; viii. 18. Cp. Aug. Serm. 279. 4. A Lapide adds, "Fortia agere Romanum est: fortia pati Christianum.

17. hpxov] thou wert coming, i.e. when thou wast suddenly stopped by the Divine Voice. There is something more observable in this tense, because (as Valck. observes) the form hpxom from fpxom is very rare. It is found in Mark i. 45; ii. 13.

18. λεπίδες] scales, that his blindness might not be supposed to be imaginary. (Chrys.) See above, on v. 8.

- εβαπτίσθη] he was baptized. See below, xxii. 16. Even Saul himself, though called from heaven by Jesus Christ, was admitted into the Church by Baptism, by which his sins were Who can suppose, therefore, that any one may safely neglect that Sacrament? See above, v. 6.

20. Ἰησοῦν] So A, B, C, E, and others. Elz. Χριστόν.

21. οὐχ οὖτός ἐστιν] is not this he? Is Saul also among the Prophets? 1 Sam. x. 11, 12; xix. 24. The case of St. Paul's conversion being extraordinary, and not to be drawn into an example of God's dealings with men, and not to be made by them a ground of hope for such interpositions (cp. 1 Tim. i. 15), it is not surprising that the Christian Fathers should have seen types and prophecies concerning him in the history of the Ancient People of God. See above concerning Benjamin (ix. 1).

There appears also to be a connexion, both by way of resemblance and also of contrast, between Saul the first King of Israel, and Saul the last of the Apostles;

Both were of the tribe of Benjamin; both were once Persecutors; the one the persecutor of David, the other of the Son of David (cp. Aug. Serm. 279). Saul the persecuting King is among the Prophets (1 Sam. x. 12; xix. 24); and Saul the persecuting Pharisee is among the Apostles. Who would have expected either of these events? But Saul the King resisted the grace of God, and gave himself up to the Evil Spirit. Saul the Pharisee "was not disobedient to the heavenly vision." (Acts xxvi. 19.) Both the one and the other afford remarkable examples of the freedom and power of Divine Grace. But extraordinary as these examples are, they show also that Divine Grace, free and powerful as it is, is not irresistible. Saul the King might have been like Paul the Apostle, if he had cherished the Spirit within him; and Paul the Apostle would have been like Saul the King, if he had grieved and resisted the Grace of God.

22. συμβιβάζων] proving by a collation of passages cited and compared. See Valck.

23. ἡμέραι ἱκαναί] many days. He had now been for some time in Arabia, i. e. "that part of Arabia which bordered on Syria; and there received a full revelation of the Gospel from God," (Bp. Pearson in Acta, p. 368, and Annal. Paulin. ad A.D. XXXVI.) Bp. Pearson dates St. Paul's three years (Gal. i. 18)

from his conversion, to his return to Jerusalem.

The term "Arabia," as used by St. Paul, does not necessarily mean the wilderness of Arabia, commonly so called. Early Christian writers (Justin and Tertullian) assign Damascus itself to Arabia; and the region of Auranitis, on the south of Damascus, is reckoned by Roman writers as belonging to Arabia. (Kitto, p. 143.)

Arabia was St. Paul's school for the Apostleship. Afterwards he returned to Damascus, where the events here recorded occurred. St. Luke passes over an interval of three years (see Gal. i. 17, and Rosenm.). And it is observable that many days are equivalent to three years in 1 Kings ii. 38. Cp. Howson,

This is more carefully to be noted, because from this expression some have taken occasion to say (Baur, p. 106, and Meyer, p. 188), that St. Luke did not know that St. Paul was three years in Arabia.

But the fact is, this mode of speaking is a proof that St. Luke does not profess to give a full history of St. Paul or any one Apostle. He does not mention how and when St. Paul was fully instructed in the doctrines of Christianity. And he does not mention when and where St. Paul wrote his Epistles. Indeed he does not even mention that St. Paul ever wrote a single Epistle. But he could have told all these things. Cp. note on 2 Cor. xi. 5.

No argument, therefore, can be drawn from what perhaps some may call omissions in this history. Least of all may we venture to say, that they are proofs of ignorance, inadvertence, or forgetfulness, on the part of the Sacred Historian, as some Expositors have done; e.g. one writing on this passage, "Hoc iter in Arabiam Lucas silentio præteriit, quoniam, ut videtur, ignorabat à Saulo iter in Arabiam susceptum fuisse, aut hujus rei oblitus erat." St. Paul himself omits it Acts xxii. 16, 17, and yet mentions it Gal. i. 17.

How much sounder is the criticism of S. Chrysostom here!

"The historian (St. Luke) passes by, designedly and modestly, St. Paul's visions in Arabia." And the criticism of S. Jerome (in Galat. i.), "Lucas idcirco de Arabia præteriit, quia forsitan nibil dignum Apostolatu in Arabiá Saulus perpetravit,—et quod aliqua dispensatio et Dei præceptum fuerit, ut taceret."

As Bede observes here, St. Paul himself appears to intimate that he did not preach in Arabia; for the Apostle says (Acts xxvi. 20) that he preached to them at Damascus first, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coast of Judæa, and then to

Perhaps this retirement of St. Paul after his Conversion was designed to be exemplary and instructive, as intimating that new converts ought not to be admitted to exercise the functions of the ministerial office, without some probationary term of silence, after their conversion.

24. παρετηρούντο] they were guarding. So A, B, C, E, F, G.

Elz. παρετήρουν.

The Jews were assisted in their stratagem against Saul by the Ethnarch, or Governor of Damascus, then in the hands of Aretas, "the King" of Arabia Petræa (2 Cor. xi. 32, 33), the father-in-law of Herod Antipas, whose territory Aretas invaded on account of his abandonment of his daughter for Herodias (Matt. xiv. 3. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1). Antipas appealed for protection to Rome, and Vitellius, then at the head of the Roman forces in Syria, of which he was President, was commanded by Tiberius to assist him. - ἐν σπυρίδι] in a basket; a corn-basket (Hesych.). See Matt. xvi. 9.

26. εἰs Ἱερουσαλήμ] to Jerusalem. See Gal. i. 17.
— πάντες ἐφοβοῦντο] all were afraid. How was this, it may be said, after the miraculous intervention of God at his Conversion? This question may be answered by reference to a fact not stated in the Acts, but by St. Paul himself. Immediately after his Conversion he did not confer with "flesh and blood, nor go up to the Apostles; doubtless lest it should be imagined that he had received his Gospel from man. But he went forthwith into Arabia (see Gal. i. 17), -a circumstance not mentioned by St. Luke,—and there he received his revelations from Jesus Christ Himself, and he then returned to Damascus (Gal. i. 12). It might therefore be supposed by the Disciples at Jerusalem, that he had shunned the Apostles from fear or antipathy; and thence suspicions might arise concerning his sincerity.

27. Baρνάβας— ήγαγε] Barnabas took him and brought him to the Apostles. Barnabas of Cyprus might well have had previous acquaintance with Saul of Tarsus in Cilicia. It has been said by some that he was St. Paul's fellow disciple under Gazalia. maliel: it is not improbable; but there is no sufficient evidence of this. It was however a fitting act for the vids παρακλήσεως to commend him to the Apostles. Cp. his similar act, xi. 25.

— πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστόλους] to the Apostles, namely, Peter and James (Gal. i. 18), Rosenm., who well adds, concerning the honourable testimony of St. Barnabas to the circumstances of St. Paul's conversion, and to St. Paul's own courage, "Conveniebat id potius narrari ab aliis qui id scirent, quam ab ipso Saulo prædicari."

πω̂ς — ἐπαρρησιάσατο] how he spake boldly.
 fiducia doctrinam Jesu sit professus." (Rosenm.)

28. els Ίερουσαλήμ] to Jerusalem, where he had a trance in the Temple, xxii. 17.

29. συνε(ήτει πρός τους Έλληνιστάς] he was disputing with the Hellenists. He now confuted some of the same persons with whom he had formerly co-operated, and who had been most eager and furious in their zeal against Stephen, and had been the originators of the accusation which led to his death (vi. 9-14).

Thus St. Paul endeavoured to make amends at Jerusalem, and at the peril of his life, for former sins committed there against Christ and the Church.

In both cases St. Luke uses the same word, συζητεῖν.

30. Ταρσόν] Tarsus, to his own country and friends—to which he specially owed the duty of communicating the blessings of Christianity. Cp. John i. 42.

31. ή μεν οδυ εκκλησία—επληθύνετο] So A, B, C, and many Cursive MSS. and Versions. Elz. has the plural, al μέν ἐκκλησίαι. Cp. Gal. i. 22. The singular number rests on the best authority. and seems most fitted to describe the unity and harmony of the Church in that period of peace.

- είχεν εἰρήνην] had peace. Because the Jews were so much occupied in endeavouring to frustrate the order which the Emperor Caligula, who claimed divine worship (Lightfoot, i. p. 834. 857. Burton, Lectures, p. 132. Howson, i. 136), had given to Petronius to set up his statue in the Temple (Joseph. xviii. 8), that they had not leisure to persecute the Church-a remarkable instance of the manner in which the evil passions of men are made subservient by God to the edification of the Church.

This order was afterwards rescinded, at the intervention of Herod Agrippa, then at Rome; and with the death of Caligula the persecution recommenced under Herod Agrippa (Acts xii.

It is observable, that, in the primitive ages, the Church had less to fear from some of the worst Emperors, such as Tiberius and Caligula, than from those Princes of Judæa, such as Agrippa, who were most honoured by the Jews.

— πορευομένη] πορεύεσθαι, the Heb. τίτ.

32. διὰ πάντων] through all. Kuin supplies τόπων, places. Cp. Luke xi. 24. Meyer, ἀγίων. Both, places and persons, may be meant. Cp. v. 38.

The foundation of the See of Antioch in Syria has been assigned to St. Peter at this period by some, e. g. Baronius and A Lapide. But, however this may be, it does not appear that he resided there at this time as Bishop, for he is said here διέρχεσθαι; his visit to Antioch, if he did visit it now, was only of short duration.

- Λύδδαν] Lydda: 18 miles S.W. of Jerusalem on the road from that city to Cæsarea; called Lod in 1 Chron. viii. 12; Ezra ii. 33, afterwards called Diospolis. A, B have Λύδδα, C and E have Λύδδαν here and v. 35. Josephus uses both Λύδδα (B. J. iv. 8. 1) and Λύδδαν (Ant. xx. 6. 2) in the accusative. Almost all the MSS. and Editions have Λύδδης in v. 38. Λύδδα may be a neuter plural. See Winer, G. G. 58. R. W. B. ii. 30.

34. laτai σε 'Iησοῦς] Jesus in heaven healeth thee by me on earth. (Didym.) Contrast this language of Peter with our Lord's expressions of sovereign will and divine power: θέλω, καθαρίσθητε (Matt. viii. 3), άρον τον κράβαττόν σου (Mark ii. 11), κουμι (Mark v. 41), Λάζαρε, δεύρο έξω (John xi. 43). 37. λούσαντες—ὑπερφφ] they washed and laid her in an upper chamber. The third instance in this book of reference to the decencies of Christian Burial. See above, viii. 2. S. Chrys. p. 753, contrasts the quietness of this laying out of Doreas with the κοπετός over St. Stephen (p. 712), which he attributes to a residue of Jewish habits in the earlier Christians. Perhaps they had now learnt to regard death with greater calmness and joy. Cp. St. Paul's reproof on immoderate grief for the dead, in one of his earliest Epistles (1 Thess. iv. 13—18).

40. Ταβιθὰ, ἀνάστηθι] Tabitha, arise. Words not very different from our Lord's, Ταλιθὰ κοῦμι (Mark v. 41), but very different in the circumstances and manner with which they were uttered. See on v. 34.

43. βυρσεί] a tanner. A proof of his humility, and a trial of the faith of the Roman Centurion Cornelius, see x. 6. The shepherds were sent by the Angel to the King, who was lying in a stable (Luke ii. 7. 12); the Roman Centurion was commanded by the Angel to send for instruction in divine things, from the royal city CESARCE, to one Simon surnamed Peter, who lodges road the Edward Three Types. Therefore "mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate" (Rom. xii. 16). "Some have entertained Angels unawares" (Heb. xiii. 2).

CH. X. 1. Kaisapela] Cæsarea: not to be confounded with Cæsarea Philippi (Matt. xvi. 13. Mark viii. 27).

This city is Καισάρεια Σεβαστή, ή παράλιος,—celebrated for its Harbour,— η πρότερον Στράτωνος πύργος ἐκαλεῖτο, but called Casarea by Herod the Great, who beautified it, in honour of Augustus Casar: $\mu \in \gamma (\sigma \tau \eta \tau \hat{\eta} s)$ Iovdalas $\pi \delta \lambda is$, Joseph. Ant. xix. 8. 2, then garrisoned by the Romans; it was the capital city of the Roman Province of Judæa (Tacit. Hist. ii. 79) and the residence of the Roman Procurator. In a word, it was a miniature of Rome, in Palestine. Cp. Acts xxiii. 23. 33. Howson, ii. 344. It was afterwards celebrated as the Episcopal See of Eusebius, the Historian of the Church.

We may observe, therefore, that the Gospel made its first Conquest over Heathenism in a large City, Casarea, named from the Roman Casar, the military stronghold and naval arsenal of the Roman Power. And it made that conquest over a soldier, called Cornelius, one of the noblest Roman names borne by the Scipios and Sylla-and the mother of the Gracchi was Corneliaand associated with the greatest victories of the Roman arms; and an officer of the Italic band, not of a Cohort raised in Syria, but of native Roman blood. This Roman soldier was "the antesignanus, or standard-bearer to us, who were heathens." Bp. Andrewes, Sermon on Acts x. 34.

Here, as S. Chrys. says, "the Door was first opened to the Gentile world;" and concerning Cornelius, he adds (p. 738), "he was uncircumcised, and had nothing in common with the Jews." This is to be noted, because it has been said by some that Cornelius was a proselyte and not a gentile (see on v. 2).

— ἐκατοντάρχης] a centurion. The Roman supremacy of the world being one of arms.

"Tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento, Hæ tibi erunt artes, pacisque imponere morem, Parcere subjectis, et debellare superbos,"

(Virg. Æn. vi. 852,)

-therefore the first-fruits of the Gentile world, now under the sway of Rome, are gathered from the Roman Camp, in the seat of government of the Roman Procurator; and so the victorious power of the Gospel is made more visible, and the triumph of Christ more glorious.

This was a prelude of the future triumphs of Christianity at Rome, and in the Roman world. In the conversion of Cornelius at Cæsarea, we may see a prophetic intimation of the submission of the Great Fourth Monarchy, the Mistress of the Gentile world, and of the subjection of the military Empire of Rome to the mild yoke of the Gospel. — σπείρης — Ἰταλικής] of the Italian band. Cohors Italica, levied in Italy, and distinguished from the Syrian cohorts of Cæsarea. This Cohort is probably referred to in the ancient Inscription in Gruter, 434, "cohors MIL. ITALIC. VOLUNT. QUE

3. ἐν δράματι] in a vision: with his eyes open. What is seen in an δραμα may, or may not, have an objective reality. Thus the Angel, who had such an existence, is here seen by Cornelius, ἐν δράματι: cp. xviii. 9; but the sheet seen by St. Peter in his ecstasy (v. 10; cp. xi. 5) is also called an δραμα here, vv. 17. 19.

— ἄραν ἐνάτην] the ninth hour. St. Luke in the Acts notes several important events as taking place at the ninth hour (see the ninth hour) and the second contractive that the contractive contractive that the contractive cont

— ἄραν ἐνάτην] the ninth hour. St. Luke in the Acts notes several important events as taking place at the ninth hour (see iii. 1; x. 30: cf. Luke xxiii. 44), the hour of our Lord's death; prefigured by the daily sacrifice,—"the evening sacrifice," offered at that hour. Cp. Dan. ix. 21, "Whiles I was speaking in prayer, the man Gabriel touched me about the time of the evening oblation."

In the case of Cornelius, it may have been intimated providentially by this and other incidents, that though it was not now necessary for him to conform to the ceremonial of the Levitical Law—which was figurative and prophetical of Christ—yet he must not therefore suppose that the Levitical Law was not of Divisor Institution as wall as the Gosnel.

Divine Institution, as well as the Gospel.

5. $\kappa al \ v \hat{v} v \ \pi \epsilon \mu \psi v v]$ and now send men to Joppa; and send for Simon who is surnamed Peter. See above on ix. 6 and 43, for the argument thence to be derived for the necessary uses of an appointed Ministry of the Word and Sacraments.

Hence also the Fathers infer the insufficiency of what are called moral virtues, alms, and prayers, and even a theoretical knowledge of religious evidence, such as Cornelius had (see vv. 37—43), without profession of faith in Christ, and reception into His Church; wherever these things may be had. See Severian here, and the Expositors of the XXXIX Articles, Art. xii. xviii.

But to those who, like Cornelius, use aright what they have by natural light, more is offered by God. See Ammonius here. Cornelius is represented as a person who profited, as far as he could, by the light of Reason and natural Theology. His case, therefore, is an evidence that God did not "leave Himself without a witness" in the Gentile world (Acts xiv. 17), corrupt as it was, especially at that time—the age of Tiberius and Caligula—and sunk almost to the lowest degree of demoralization, particularly in the city, the camp, and the court.

in the city, the camp, and the court.

Still. Reason, Conscience, and Natural Light, were not extinct. The Moral Law was still in force; the Gentile world was responsible to God for the use it made of those gifts (see Rom. ii. 14, and Barrow, Serm. lxxi. vol. iii. p. 367); and to those who used them aright, greater degrees of light and grace were vouch-safed by God.

Thus it would appear that a difference will be made hereafter between those heathens who have, and those who have not, lived up to the law under which they were placed by God.

The following paragraphs from one of Dr. Barrow's excellent Sermons on Universal Redemption (Serm. lxxiii.) are pertinent to this and other like operations of God, as related in the Acts of the Apostles.

"Christ enjoined His Disciples, in their travels for the promulgation and propagation of the Gospel, to inquire concerning the worthiness or fitness of persons, and accordingly to make more close applications to them: Into what city or village ye enter, inquire who therein is worthy (Matt. x. 11), and entering in abide there.

"Of this proceeding we have a notable instance in Cornelius, who for his honest piety (correspondent to the proportion of knowledge vouchsafed him) was so acceptable to God, that in regard thereto he obtained from Him the revelation of truth in a peculiar and extraordinary manner. And St. Paul was another most remarkable example thereof; who for the like reason was so wonderfully called, as himself intimates, describing himself to have been ζηλωτής Θεοῦ, zealously affected toward God, according to the righteousness in the law blameless (Acts xxii. 3; xxiii. 1); one that had continually behaved himself with all good conscience toward God (Phil. iii. 6. Acts xxvi. 9. Gal. i. 14); who even in the persecution of God's truth did proceed with an honest meaning, and according to his conscience; for which cause he saith that God had mercy on him, foreseeing how willingly he would embrace the truth, and how earnestly promote it. We may also observe how, in the Acts of the Apostles, the Holy Spirit commonly directed the Apostles to such places where a competent number of people were well disposed to receive the truth (Acts xxvi. 1. 1 Tim. i. 3), who were εθθετοι εls την βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ (Luke ix. 62), well disposed to the kingdom of heaven; such people as the Bereans, men ingenuous and tractable, who consequently entertained the word with all promptitude and alacrity. (Acts xvii. 11; xxviii. 22.)

and alacrity. (Acts xvii. 11; xxviii. 22.)

"To such persons God sometimes, by extraordinary revelation, directed the Apostles to preach; as to the Corinthians, in respect of whom the Lord spake to St. Paul in a vision, saying, Fear not, but speak, and be not silent; for I am with thee, because πολύς ἐστί μοι λαὸς, there is for Me much people in this city (Acts xviii. 9, 10); much people whom I see disposed to comply with My truth. So in behalf of the Macedonians, a certain man of Macedonia was in a vision seen by St. Paul, exhorting him and saying, Passing into Macedonia, help us. (Acts wi. 9.)

"Thus, on one hand, doth God take special care that His truth be manifested to such as are fitly qualified to embrace it and use it well; thus is God ready to make good that answer of Pothinus (Bishop of Lyons, and immediate successor to St. Irenœus) to the Prefect, who asking him, who was the Christians' God, was answered, ην ης εξιος, γνώση. If thou be worthy, thou shalt know (Euseb. v. 1); thus, as the Wise Man divinely saith, the Divine Wisdom goeth about seeking such as are worthy of her: showeth herself favourable unto them in their ways, and meeteth them in every thought. (Wisd. vi. 16.)

"On the other hand, that God withholds the special discoveries of His truth, upon account of men's indispositions and demerits, may likewise very plainly appear. We may suppose our Lord to have observed Himself, what He ordered to His Disciples. Not to give that which is holy to dogs, nor to cast pearls before swine. (Matt. vii. 6.)" See below, xvi. 6, 7.

— 'Ioman' Joppa. The ancient Philistine city, where Jonah had embarked in his endeavour to escape from the presence of God, and from the task of executing the divine commission against Nineveh (Jonah i. 3), is now to be made the scene of a divine vision, revealing God's gracious dispensations to the Gentile world. Contrast Jonas and Bar-Jonas here.

- παρασκευαζόντων αὐτῶν] Peter was hungering for bodily food, and the servants were making it ready for him. But at this time God was preparing for him spiritual food. Peter was to be the instrument for receiving the Gentiles into the body of the Church (see on v. 13); and therefore at this instant God invites him to partake of the animals in the sheet let down from heaven, and the messengers of Cornelius arrive. As Aug. says (Serm. 266), "Non Petro carnalis cibus affertur, sed mundatus Cornelius nuntiatur."

- ἐγένετο] So A, B, C, E, and others. Elz. ἐπέπεσεν.

- ξκστασις] ecstasy. The highest kind of spiritual revelation. There are seven extraordinary modes and degrees in which God revealed Himself in ancient times;

1. Dreams

2. Apparitions to the person when awake.

3. Visions to him when asleep.

4. Voices from heaven.

5. Urim.

6. Inspiration, or revealing to the ear.

7. Rapture, or ecstasy, when the person was in the Spirit (Rev. i. 10. Acts xxii. 17), and this was the highest degree of all. See Lightfoot here, i. p. 844.

11, 12. θεωρεί τον οὐρανον ἀνεφγμένον, και καταβαίνον σκεῦός τι -τοῦ οὐρανοῦ] he beholds the heaven opened, and a certain vessel coming down, as a great sheet. See below, xi. 5—10, where St. Peter says, είδον καταβαΐνον σκεῦός τι, ὡς ὀθόνην μεγάλην τέσσαρσιν άρχαις καθιεμένην έκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ήλθεν ἄχρις ἐμοῦ.

The words δεδεμένον, και are not found in A, B, E, and some Versions.

- σκεῦος] A word of wide signification for any vessel, Heb.

לים. See above, ix. 15.

- ὀθόνην] linen sheet. σινδόνα (Hesych.), a linteum; ὀθόναι (cp. δθονία, John xix. 40) are explained in Hesych. by περι-βόλαια. Cp. Luke xxiv. 12. John xx. 5-7. Linen iş generally seen in Scripture as connected with what is sacred, holy, and pure; and it is not liable to be moth-eaten; "hence," says Aug., "this linen sheet is a fit emblem of the Church."

 – ἀρχαῖs] beginnings: applied to the letting down of ropes or cords, as Wetst. and Valck. have shown; and after them Kuin., who says " ἀρχή dicitur omne quod extremum est in aliqua re, sic de funis extremitate legitur ap. The vessel or linen sheet here represent the Church Universal throughout the world. Its demission from heaven bespeaks its being from God the Father of all. Its four beginnings (ἀρχαί)a word happily chosen-let down from heaven, show origin is from heaven; and that it hangs suspended on the divine Power and Love; and they represent its comprehensiveness and extension to the four winds of heaven. See Matt. xxiv. 31, and cp. the τέσσαρες γωνίαι της γης, Rev. vii. 1; xx. 8.

Quatuor lineæ, discum continentes, et quibus dependebat, sunt quatuor orbis cardines, vel quatuor partes orbis terrarum, per quas tenditur Ecclesia Catholica, que ubique diffusa est.

Augustine (Serm 149 and 266).

Some ancient Expositors (e. g. Œcumen.) speak of the four àpxal (properly beginnings; "initia," Vulg.) that support the Vessel—which symbolizes the Church Universal—as a prophetical Vol. I.—Part II. emblem of the Four Gospels, proclaiming the knowledge of Christ to the Four Corners of the world, and bringing many from the East and from the West, from the North and from the South, to sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom of God (Luke xiii. 29. Matt. viii. 11).

This suggestion deserves consideration. And it is not unworthy of remark, that each of the Four Gospels commences with a reference to their initiatory character as describing the begin-ning of the new Creation in Christ, which is eternal; as the Old Testament, which is the record of the Old Creation, opens in Genesis with—" In the beginning God created Heaven and Earth," i. e. the visible heavens and the earth, which have an end;

This initial character of the Gospels is declared by the word άρχη or άρχομαι at the beginning of each of the Four, thus,-

Matt. iv. 17, ήρξατο δ Ίησοῦς κηρύσσειν. Mark i. 1, ἀρχὴ εὐαγγελίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. Luke i. 2, οἱ ἀπ' ἀρχῆς αὐτόπται.

iii. 23, ην ώσει έτων τριακοντα άρχόμενος, i. e. at the beginning of his Ministry.

John i. 1, ἐν ἀρχη ἢν ὁ Λόγος.

Hence in the opening of the Acts of the Apostles, as if to mark that the Gospel is the Beginning of the new life which never ends, St. Luke says (i. 1), ων ηρξατο δ Ἰησοῦς ποιεῦν τε και διδάσκειν, in reference to its History. See the note there.

Lastly, the sacred Canon of both Testaments closes with the words, Έγω εἰμι τὸ Α καὶ τὸ Ω, Άρχη καὶ τέλος (Rev. xxii. 13).

The Gospel, as thus viewed, both supports and elevates the Church; it is that by which the invisible Hand of God maintains and keeps it together, and by which He raises it to heaven.

It may indeed be objected, that the Four Gospels had not then all been written. No; nor had the Vessel of the Church been extended to all the world: nor, as yet, had it enclosed any unclean animals. The vision was not a History of the Past; but it was a Prophecy of the Future extending forward to all time.

This symbol is not unlike to that of the Four Evangelical Cherubim in Ezekiel and the Apocalypse, on which the Spirit of God rides, as on a chariot-like throne, into all lands. See above, Introduction to the Gospels, p. xli.

The "four-footed beasts," &c., are representatives of all Nations. Observe the definite Article 7d. And in this respect S. Augustine (c. Faust. xii. 15) compares it to the Ark, another figure of the Church, because commensurate with the world: "Cuncta genera animalium in Arca clauduntur, sicut omnes Gentes; quas etiam Petro demonstratus ille discus significat; omnes Gentes, quæ pertinent ad quatuor partes orbis terræ quâ disseminatur Ecclesia, quam significant quatuor lineæ, quibus Vas illud connectebatur."

The sheet, which was let down from heaven to earth, was drawn up again (ἀνελήφθη, v. 16; ἀνεσπάσθη, xi. 10) into heaven, showing that all are designed by God to be inheritors of heaven, all are δεκτοί Θεφ in Christ (x. 34, 35).

This act of drawing up also shows, that after the pilgrimage of the Church Militant on earth, it will be received up and glorified in heaven. "Post hujus sæculi conversationem, quâ per Fidem et Baptismum mundata peregrinatur Ecclesia, cœlestis habitatio felix et æterna sequitur." (Bede.)

Compare Rev. xxi. 2, where the Holy City, the new Jerusalem, the Church glorified, is seen coming down from heaven.

13. θῦσον καὶ φάγε] slay and eat. The act of eating is here represented as figurative of receiving into communion or incorporation :

The prophet Ezekiel (iii. 1) and St. John (Rev. x. 9) are commanded to eat a roll or book, in order to receive its spirit and its words into themselves. So Peter is commanded to eat these animals, in order that he may know that the Gentiles are to be incorporated through his ministry into the Church, or body of "Occide et manduca, ut interficiatur in iis vita præterita et transeant in corpus tuum, tanquam in novam vitam societatis Ecclesiæ; ut tanquam mundus cibus incorporentur Ecclesiæ," S. Aug. Serm. 149. "Occide in gentibus quod erant, et fac quod es," Bede.

Here then "Petrus figuram gestat Ecclesiæ," and according to Christ's promise (Matt. xvi. 19) he is to be Christ's agent in

The Jewish Rabbis allowed that in the time of the Messiah no animals would be unclean. See R. Moyses and R. Salomon 15, 16. φωνή πάλιν εκ δευτέρου-έπλ τρίς] It was done three times, for greater assurance, and for more solemn admonition. Repetition is usual in divine Visions and Prophecies, Gen. xli. 28-32; xxxvii. 6-10. So in Daniel's Visions (Dan. ii. and vii.) the same thing is represented twice.

See above, Introduction to the Gospels, p. xlv, on Repetition as a characteristic of Inspiration; and below, the Introduction to the Book of Revelation.

S. Chrys. and S. Aug. (Serm. 149) suggest another reason why it is mentioned that this linen sheet, held by its four corners, was let down three times. The whole world as a Church is purified and cleansed by God; and this cleansing is effected by immersion in the waters of Baptism in the Name of the Holy Trinity. "In Nomine Patris, et Filli, et Spiritûs Sancti, credentes innovantur, ut pertineant ad communionem sanctorum." So also Œcumen.

The four corners intimate the extension of the Church to the Four Winds of heaven; and the multiplication of the number Four into the other number here specified, Three, produces the number Twelve, which is specially characteristic of the Church of Christ, extended to the Four Quarters of the Globe, and baptized in the Name of the Trinity by the ministry of the Twelve Apostles and their successors, and militant here on earth, and glorified hereaster in heaven. See above on Matt. x. 2, and Augustine, quoted there, and cp. Rev. vii. 5-8; xii. 1; xxi. 12. 14. 16. 21;

15. & δ Θεδς εκαθάρισε] what God did cleanse. Observe the aorist εκαθάρισε. God cleansed all Nations by one single act. He cleansed the Gentiles who were unclean according to the Law, by the Blood of His dear Son, shed once for all on the cross. S. Irenœus in Caten. Cp. Eph. ii. 13. 16. Acts xv. 9.

μη κοίνου] do not call common, do not deem unclean, —μη ακάθαρτον νόμιζε. (Hesych.)

On kowos, common, profane, unclean, see Mark vii. 21. This usage of language, when a person is said to make what he treats as made, is very common, especially in prophecy—"ubi res dici-tur fieri, quando facienda prænuntiatur." Isa. vi. 10. Jer :. 10.

Ezek. xliii. 3. Zech. xi. 13. See Glass. Phil. p. 364—6, and Valck. here, who refers to Thom. Mag., γεννά ὁ Πλάτων τον οὐρανον, i. e. γεννητον λέγει. So in Levit. xiii. 3. 13. 17, the Priest, who declares the Leper unclean or the contrary, is said

Priest, who devares the Lept distribution and καθαρίζειν.

19. ένπ τὸ Πνεῦμα] the Spirit said, a proof of the personality of the Holy Ghost. Cp. xiii. 2. 4, for another proof of the Divinity and Personality of the Holy Ghost, and see Ecumen.

20. ἐγὰ ἀπέσταλκα αὐτούς] I have sent them. What God does, that the Spirit is said to do. (Chrys.) The Spirit is God. 21. τους ἄνδρας] Είz. adds τους ἀπεσταλμένους ἀπό τοῦ Κορνηλίου πρὸς αὐτόν. But this is not in A, B, C, D, and other MSS., nor in Vulg. and other Versions.

22. ἐχρηματίσθη] was commanded as by an oracle (χρηστήριον).

See Matt. ii. 12. Cornelius had therefore related the Vision to others, before he knew of any result from it. An answer to the objections of those who suppose that the Vision was a delusion. or contrived after the event; a remark which will not be deemed unnecessary by those, who are, in any degree, familiar with the cavils of scepticism against the historic veracity of the supernatural agency revealed in this divine book.

23. τῆ ἐπαθριον] on the morrow. He waits from soon after noon (v. 9) till the next day. There are no marks of a heated imagination here. St. Peter had seen a Vision; and he hears of another Vision of an Angel desiring that he should be sent for to Cæsarea. But he waits till the morrow. Though by natural temperament he was eager and forward, the Holy Spirit in him was a Spirit of caution and circumspection, prudence and wisdom; not of rashness and haste.

25. ως έγένετο τοῦ εἰσελθεῖν] Elz. omits τοῦ, but it is found in A, B, C, E, and other MSS., and has been received by recent

It has been alleged by some (e. g. Meyer, p. 203) that such an use of $\tau o \hat{v}$ before an infinitive is unauthorized, and is a grammatical error, incapable of analysis, and is to be ascribed to an oversight of the writer, either in composition or transcription. But it is not without example. See Luke xvii. 1, ἀνένδεκτόν ἐστι τοῦ μη ἐλθεῖν σκάνδαλα.

And these two remarkable instances of this construction connect the Author of the third Gospel with the Writer of the And thus the rarity of the combination has its use in supplying evidence to the student of Scripture.

One or two other instances of the use may be seen in Winer, § 44, p. 293. The analysis of the expression does not seem difficult. The phrase means, "When the hour arrived, so long expected, of Peter's arrival." In like manner, the other kindred expression in St. Luke's Gospel may be explained (xvii. 1), ανένδεκτον έστι του μή έλθευ τὰ σκάνδαλα, i.e. the time of the non-existence of offences is not admissible in this world, it is to be looked for only in the world to come.

- προσεκύνησεν] he worshipped. Such homage, not uncommon among Orientals, was unknown to the countrymen of Cornelius, Romans, except in divine worship, and was therefore forbidden by St. Peter in the words "Stand up; I also am a man," not a superior spirit.

St. Peter, great as he was, would not permit any one, even a heathen, to do this. What then shall we say of other men who allow it? asks Ammonius here. And what shall we say of him who calls himself St. Peter's successor, and yet seats himself on the high Altar of St. Peter's Church, in order that his feet may be kissed by Bishops and others, bowing and kneeling before him? See the Cæremoniale Romanum, iii. 1. 1, and other Roman authorities quoted in the Editor's Lectures on the Apocalypse, pp. 339. 340, 2nd ed. Appendix, pp. 163, 164, and

27. καὶ συνομιλῶν] Peter not only declined the προσκύνησις, or adoration, but entered in with Cornelius, and conversed with him side by side, thus showing his humility, and also his compliance with the divine revelation, that he should consider no man common or unclean. On δμιλεῖν, to speak, used only by St. Luke in this sense, see Luke xxiv. 14, 15. Acts xx. 11; xxiv. 26.

30. ἀπὸ τετάρτης ἡμέρας] four days ago. So 2 Cor. viii. 10; ix. 2, ἀπὸ πέρυσι, a year ago. Cp. John xi. 18; xxi. 8.

— μέχρι ταύτης τῆς ἄρας] i. e. to three o'clock. See chap. x. 3.

— Εραν] Omitted by A, B, C, D. And it is probable that (as Bornemann observes) ἐννάτην is a gloss upon ταύτηs; and that the true reading is νηστεύων και προσευχόμενος.

— ἀνήρ] a man. So modest is Cornelius, he does not call him an angel who had praised him so highly, and yet by the purport of his words he represents him as coming from ἐνώπιον τοῦ

Θεοῦ. (Chrys.) Cp. i. 10.
 31. ἡ προσευχή] See the power of Prayer. (Chrys.)

33. καλῶς ἐποίησας] An observable phrase. It is not the language of approval, on the Centurion's part, of St. Peter's conduct. This would ill have accorded with his humility. But it is an idiomatic and elegant expression of courtesy and gratitude—a "welcome." "Benè est quòd venisti-multum amo te." Casaubon on Cicero, ad Att. i. 1, observes, it has been often rendered erroneously. Cp. St. Paul's words, Phil. iv. 14. 2 Pet. i. 19. 3 John 6. See Valck. here.

35. δεκτός] = יִרְצָה from נְרָצָה, voluntas (cp. ἀρέσκω, ἀρεστός), to be translated acceptable, capable of being accepted, rather to be translated acceptance, capacite of being accepted, rather than actually accepted. (Severian, Caten. p. 173.) No one is accepted, except èν τῷ ἡγαπημένω, Eph. i. 6. (See Chrys. and others here.) Cp. Luke iv. 24. Phil. iv. 18. 2 Cor. vi. 2.

In Him, and Him alone, all Nations are blessed. As Bengel says well, "Non indifferentismus Religionum, sed indifferentia Nationum, hic asseritur." Cp. Art. XVIII. of the Church of England.

36. του λόγου κ.τ.λ.] As Meyer and Winer observe, the three clauses, τον λόγον υ. 36, το γενόμενον βημα υ. 37, Ίησοῦν τον Na (ωραίον, seem to be put in apposition, and to depend on δμείς οἴδατε, and οὖτός ἐστι πάντων Κύριος is introduced parenthetically. So the Authorized Version. Phus means more than $\lambda \delta \rho os$. A $\delta \gamma os$ is the Word; but $\delta \hat{\eta} \mu a$ is the Matter or thing declared by the Word (see Luke i. 37; ii. 15); and $\tau \delta \delta \hat{\eta} \mu a \gamma \epsilon \nu \delta \mu \epsilon \nu \sigma \nu \kappa$. $\delta \cdot \tau \cdot$ I. is the matter published which came or was proclaimed through all Jewry.

Valck. compares the similar structure in another speech of the same Apostle, Acts ii. 22-36.

We may also compare a similar remarkable transition from $\lambda\delta\gamma$ os to $\delta\tilde{\eta}\mu\alpha$ in an Epistle of this same Apostle, St. Peter, speaking of Christ preached. See 1 Peter i. 23—25.

It has indeed been said by some, that Cornelius could not have known the facts here mentioned. But let it be remembered, that he was quartered at Cæsarea, - a centurion of the Italian band, and probably had often attended the Roman Procurator, who resided at Czesarea, in the periodical visits which he made to Jerusalem, to be present at the annual Jewish festivals for the purpose of maintaining order there.

He might have conversed with other soldiers who had been there on those occasions. He might have conversed with the there on those occasions. It might ave contrasts what faithful Centurion of Capernaum (Luke vii. 2—9), perhaps with the Centurion who stood at the Cross (Matt. xxvii. 54. Luke xxiii. 47), perhaps with the soldiers who had watched the sepulchre, and had been affrighted by the earthquake, and thus have heard of the Resurrection.

Besides (as Chrys. suggests), this speech was not only intended for Cornelius and his friends, but also for the Jews who were with Peter, and to whom he appeals as witnesses of what he says, and it was designed to justify his own communion with the Gentiles.

Accordingly, it is observable that St. Peter is careful to represent the Jews as receiving, by virtue of their prerogative, the first offer of the Gospel from Christ. The word, he says, was sent to the children of Israel; τηρεῖ τὴν εὐγένειαν τοῖς 'Ιου-

"In this speech (says Bede) St. Peter briefly sums up all the articles of the Creed, viz. that Jesus is the Christ, the Lord of all; sent to reconcile the world to God; preached by the Baptist; anointed by the Spirit; manifested in miracles by God dwelling in Him; crucified; raised from the dead; seen alive after His Resurrection; and the Future Judge of all at the end of the world; and that He will extend His Church by Faith throughout the World." See also p. 114 of the Rev. F. C. Cook's edition of the Acts; containing many excellent practical and devotional suggestions.

44. [τι λαλοῦντος] while he was yet speaking. See the dispensation of God. He did not allow Peter to finish his speech, and to command them to be baptized. But God anticipated him, and showed that He knew their hearts; and the Holy Spirit came, and so provided an answer and defence for St. Peter against those who would charge him with surrendering the privileges of the Jews, and with a breach of the Law of God by communion with the Gentiles. (Chrys.)

44-46. ἐπέπεσε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἄγιον-λαλούντων γλώσσαις] the Holy Spirit fell on them, as the Holy Spirit fell at the day of Pentecost on the Apostles. See xi. 15, 16. He fell on them while Peter was preaching the Word; and thus the Word was confirmed; and He fell on them while hearing the Word. And they who were present heard them speak with tongues-

> " Spiritus almus Indulgens varias opulento munere linguas Implevit sine more domum," (Arator,)

-showing by the same sign that the same gift was bestowed on them who were Gentiles at Cæsarea, as had been vouchsafed to the first believers at Jerusalem; and that therefore the Holy Spirit is not limited to place, time, or person, but is offered to all persons, in all places, at all times.

It is, indeed, affirmed by some (e. g. Meyer, p. 210), that this manifestation at Casarea was altogether different from that at Jerusalem, on the day of Pentecost: and, that the expression γλώσσαις λαλεῦν, as used here and in xix. 6, and 1 Cor. xiv. 18, does not mean "to speak in foreign languages," as it does in Acts ii. 4, but it means only to speak with tongues not guided or controlled by the vovs, or reason of the speakers, but moved by the Holy Ghost.

But this theory destroys the force of St. Peter's subsequent argument and comment on this manifestation. See Acts xi. 15.
17, where he states that as he began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them (i. e. on the Gentile Cornelius and on his companions) as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the Word of the Lord, how that He said, "John indeed baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost." Here St. Peter comprehends Cornelius in the same promise with the Apostles; and he adds, "Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as He did unto us, what was I that I could withstand God?"

Since, then, the disciples at Jerusalem, at Pentecost, had the power of speaking in foreign tongues, Cornelius and the Gentiles with him at Cæsarea had the same power also.

It is indeed probable, that this power of speaking foreign languages was not long continued to those who had not, like the Apostles, occasion to use them in preaching to foreign nations.

But if Cornelius and his Gentile companions had not received the same spiritual gift as the Apostles received at first, it never would have been inferred by St. Peter, or have been acknowledged by the Jewish Christians, as it was, that the Gentiles were to be admitted to the same spiritual privileges as those of the Circumcision, who believed in Christ. See xi. 18.

Besides, as Aug. observes (Serm. 99), there was another reason for this gift to the Gentiles, as well as to the Jews and Proselytes, in the first age of the Church: "Tunc (i.e. in the first age of the Church) sic dabatur Spiritus Sanctus, ut etiam appareret datus. Qui enim Eum accipiebant linguis omnium gentium loquebantur, ut significarent Ecclesiam, in gentibus, linguis omnium locuturam."

46. "novov] they were hearing them speak with tongues; the imperfect tense marks continuance. Cp. what is said of the miracle at Pentecost itself, ii. 6.

47. μήτι τὸ ὅδωρ κωλῦσαι δ. τ.] Now that they have received the Spirit, can any man forbid the water of Baptism (τὸ ΰδωρ), which is necessary for their reception into the Church; according to Christ's saying, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God?" (John iii. 5.) A reply, by anticipation, to those Jewish Christians who would have forbidden baptism to the Gentiles. (Chrys.)

"Non dicit, habent Spiritum, ergo aquá carere possunt" (Bengel): but he commands them to be baptized; a warning to Quakers and others, who profess that they have the Spirit, and do not therefore need the outward means of grace. St. Peter teaches them to invert the argument. If men have the Spirit, they ought also to have the water; and if men refuse the water, it may be presumed that they have not the Spirit.

Two important questions arise here:—

(1) Why were these converts not baptized first, before the Holy Spirit was given?

(2) If the Holy Spirit was given, as we have seen it was, before Baptism,—is Baptism necessary,—and is Confirmation necessary,—for the reception of the Holy Ghost?

These questions have been considered and answered by the Ancient Fathers as follows :-

(1) Probably St. Peter would not have readily admitted them to Baptism, unless he had heard them prophesying, and had seen the Holy Ghost resting upon them. Therefore he had seen the Holy Ghost resting upon them. Therefore he asked, "Can any one forbid them the water, now that they have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?" thus persuading the Jews, who were with him, and intimating that unless the Holy Spirit had rested upon them, there would have been some who βαπτισθηναι τούτους, οἴτινες τὸ Πνεθμα τὸ ἄγιον ἔλαβον, καθώς καὶ ἡμεῖς; 48 γ προσέταξέ τε αὐτοὺς βαπτισθηναι ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου.

would have forbidden them Baptism. S. Irenœus (Caten. p. 183,

c. Hæres. iii. 12.)

If any one inquires, How it was that Cornelius, and they that were with him, were allowed to receive the Holy Ghost before Baptism, let him know that this was with a view to the debate that afterwards arose, between St. Peter and those of the Circum-S. Cyril (in Caten. p. 190.)

This is evident from what follows in ch. xi. 2, where St. Peter shows that κωλῦσαι τὸ ὕδωρ would have been κωλῦσαι τον Θεόν (see xi. 17).

It appears from xi. 18, that the debate was appeased by reference to the fact here stated; and it is clear, that there would have been a schism in the Church, unless such a divine manifestation as the descent of the Holy Spirit, enabling them to speak with tongues, had been made, to authorize the act of St. Peter in admitting Cornelius, and other Gentiles with him, into the Church

Hence S. Augustine says (Serm. 99), "Cum dubitarent qui erant cum Petro, utrum incircumcisi baptizandi essent, . . . ut hanc Deus tolleret quæstionem, cum loquitur Petrus, venit Spiritus Sanctus; implevit Cornelium, implevit illos qui cum illo erant; et ipså attestatione rei magnæ quasi clamatum est (à Spiritu ad Petrum) Quid de aqud dubitas? jam Ego hìc sum."
So again (Serm. 266), "Ante Baptismum venit Spiritus

Sanctus; de potestate, non de necessitate. Venit ante Baptismum ablutionis, ut auferret controversiam circumcisionis."

Aug. in Ps. xcvi.

(2) Another reason why the Holy Ghost was given before Baptism, was, that it might be understood by all, that though men are tied to the use of the means which God has been pleased to appoint for the reception of divine grace, yet God's power is not tied to means. As Hugo says (de Sacram. i. 5), "In potestate Dei est præter Sacramenta hominem salvare: sed in potestate hominis non est sine istis ad salutem pervenire."

Hence it is evident, that the grace which He has given us by means-such as the Sacraments, and by Confirmation, -does not reside in, or proceed from the means, but from Him who has appointed the means; and that the means are only channels, and He is the sole source of Grace and Salvation to man. The minister is one thing, the Ministry is another; the Author and Giver of all is God.

As Chrys. says (p. 191), "No one can forbid the Holy Spirit from descending, even before Baptism." And Aug. (Serm. 276), "Behold now the fulfilment of what our Lord says, 'the wind bloweth where it listeth'" (John iii. 8). And to use the words of Hooker (V. lvii. 4), "It is not ordinarily God's will to bestow the grace of Sacraments on any but by the Sacraments, which grace they that receive by Sacraments receive from Him, and not from them" (see also VII. vi. 10). And therefore we may add with him (V. lx. 4), "If Christ Himself, who gives us salvation, do require Baptism, it is not for us that look for salvation, to examine Him whether unbaptized men may be saved; but seriously to do what is required, and religiously to fear the danger which may grow from the want thereof."

(3) Indeed, it may be added, "Exceptio probat regulam;" and "Privilegium probat Legem."

We have seen the reason of the extraordinary effusion of the Holy Ghost, in this special case of the first Gentile converts before Baptism. We find that it is a solitary case. We find also, that to the Jewish Converts the full effusion had not been vouchsafed before Baptism, nor till they were confirmed by the laying on of the Apostles' hands (see above on viii. 14-17). And we find that other succeeding converts were baptized; and that they received the imposition of hands before they received the full effusion, visibly and audibly, of the Holy Ghost (Acts xix. 5, 6). And it is evident, that the Apostle St. Peter judged Baptism to be the Sacrament of admission into Christ's Church; for otherwise he would not have commanded these to be baptized, who had received visibly and audibly the gift of the Holy Ghost. this point well argued by S. Cyril. Hierosolym., Cateches. iii. p. 41, $Ko\rho\nu\eta\lambda\iota os \bar{\eta}\nu$ du $\bar{\eta}\rho$ divans $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. We do not indeed read, that Peter laid his hands on Cornelius and the other Gentile Converts; with reverence therefore it may be said, that the full gift of the Spirit-the Baptism of the Holy Ghost Himselfis specially represented by the laying on of hands, or Confirma-This χρίσις τελειωτική had been administered in this case directly and immediately by the Holy Ghost, as at Pentecost; see Euseb. Emisen., quoted on viii. 14. But the Sacrament of Baptism which Christ had instituted, in the name of the Holy Trinity, had not been administered, and therefore they were baptized.

(4) Lastly, it may be added that the reason of visible signs and audible sounds on hearing the Gospel and on reception of the Holy Ghost, in the first ages of Christianity, is to be seen in the need of a proof, that God gives grace, and gives it by the Word and Sacraments in His Church. That proof was given visibly and audibly in the earliest ages; and it is the duty of those who live now, to build on the faith and practice of the past, and to believe stedfastly, and receive thankfully, the grace given by the same Holy Spirit, in the ordinary means of grace, without the evidence of the same visible signs and audible sounds. For "blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." (John xx. 29.)

48. προσέταξε - αὐτοὺς βαπτισθηναι] he commanded them to be baptized. Christ preached; but He administered Baptism by His Apostles. For the reason of which see John iv. 2. And after the Ascension the Apostles preached; but they administered Baptism, for the most part, by the hands of inferior ministers; see I Cor. i. 17; a passage which suggests one reason of their conduct in this respect, -i.e. lest they should be supposed to be desirous of forming sects of those whom they baptized, and lest they who had been baptized by them respectively should say, "I am of Paul, I am of Cephas." (1 Cor. i. 12-15.)

Again; if the Apostles, who had special gifts of working miracles, and of giving the Holy Ghost, had baptized with their own hands, it might have been thought by some that the grace of Baptism came from them, who administered it, and not from Him Whose Baptism it is, and so an error with regard to Baptism be propagated.

Besides; after their death it might have been imagined, that Baptism had lost some of its efficacy, being no longer administered by those who were called by Christ, and had received extraordinary graces of the Holy Ghost; and so the Sacrament of Baptism, which God has instituted for the remission of sins, and for reception into the Church in all ages and countries of the world, might fall into discredit and disuse.

Therefore the Apostles did not usually baptize with their own hands; but it would be a great mistake thence to infer, with some persons, that Baptism is of minor account. On the contrary, these considerations show the importance of that Sacra-

CH. XI. 2. διεκρίνοντο] they were disputing. See on x. 47. 4—12. ἀρξάμενος—διακρινόμενον] See the same narrative, almost in the same words, above, x. 9—16.

A remarkable instance of Repetition; showing the importance of the subject; and that the Holy Spirit does not disdain to use the same or similar words in relating the same events. Compare the Repetitions of the account of St. Paul's conversion in this book, ix. 1; xxii. 6; xxvi. 12.

These Repetitions occur in one and the same Book. There is therefore no reason for surprise that the Holy Spirit should repeat in one Gospel what He had said in another. See Introduction to the Gospels, pp. xlv, xlvi.

But A has "Ελληνας. This authority however is of less weight, because A has Ελληνας also in ix. 29, where Έλληνιστὰς is confessedly the true

D* has "Ελληνας, but its reading was afterwards altered to Έλληνιστάς.

The authority of several Versions (e. g. Vulg., Syriac, Coptic, Arabic) in this question, is not of any value; because (as Whitby observes, p. 463) they use the same word for Ελληνες and Έλληνισταί. Eusebius (ii. 3) is in favour of Έλλήνων, and so is Chrys. in his exposition, δρα "Ελλησιν εὐαγγελίζονται, but he supposes the events here mentioned to be posterior to the reception of Cornelius into the Church. And so Lyranus, Caietanus, Lorinus, and others. Many recent editors, Griesbach, Lachmann, Scholz, Tischendorf, Bornemann, Alford, have introduced Ελληνας into the But they (with the exception of Alford) give no interpretation of the meaning which they would affix to the word. They may have supposed it to comprise Jewish proselytes, as Meyer does (p. 215 and p. 259, on chap. xiv. 1); and he observes that the ἔθνη, Gentiles, are distinguished from the Ελληνες.

Cp. xiii. 42; xviii. 4. 6.

Dean Alford, in his note here, understands it as not signifying Hellenists, but "Gentiles uncircumcised," and them only; and he says that "the advocacy of the reading Ἑλληνιστὰς has mainly arisen from a mistaken view that the baptism of Cornelius must necessarily have preceded the conversion of all other Gentiles."

Two questions arise here-

1. Which is the true reading, Έλληνιστάς or Ελληνας? 2. In what sense is the true reading to be understood?

1. The authority of the MSS. is in favour of Έλληνιστας, and it is mainly on supposed internal evidence that preference has recently been given to Ελληνας.

2. It is said that the word here used, whether Ελληνες or Έλληνισταl, is opposed to the word 'Iovδαίοιs, Jews, in v. 19, and that therefore the only word that the passage admits is Ελληνας, and that this word must be understood to mean Gentiles.

But this is not certain:

It is true that some MSS. (A, B, and some Cursives) insert καl after ἐλάλουν, but they are more than counterbalanced by the great preponderance of MSS.; and καl is not admitted by Griesbach or Tischendorf.

If Έλληνιστάs is the true reading, then the word 'Ιουδαίοιs in v. 19 includes Ελληνιστάs in v. 20; and the men of Cyprus, probably Hellenistic Jews, who had embraced the Gospel, spoke the Word to other Hellenistic Jews, in order that they also might embrace it.

Nor would the reading EALAnvas exclude this meaning.

The word EALAnves does not always mean unbelieving heathers. See particularly John xii. 20, where Ελληνες came up to worship at Jerusalem, and Acts xiv. 1, where Ελληνες are among the attendants at the Jewish Synagogue. Cp. xviii. 4, and Howson, i. 144. 218. 252. 312. See also on xvii. 4, σεβομένων Ἑλλήνων, where A, D introduce καl before Έλλήνων, showing that copyists did not always rightly understand the word, which is there used for proselytes. And yet Vulg. there renders it Gentiles, the word which Cassiodor. has here (p. 175).

Still further:

Even if Ελληνας were the true reading, it does not seem probable, from internal evidence, that it can here mean the

The events here described, as Alford supposes (and see his note on x. 1, p. 99), may have been prior to the baptism of Cornelius. See v. 19. Cp. viii. 1.

If so, the words τοὺς Ελληνας cannot mean the Gentiles. For St. Peter, as Christ had prophesied (Matt. xvi. 18), and as St. Peter himself affirms, was chosen by God to be the first to open the door to the Gentiles (cp. Acts xv. 7). And Cornelius was the first-fruits of the Gentile world (xi. 1. 18). And if these "Ελληνες had been Gentilies, and if they had been the first Gentiles who were admitted into the Church, it is probable that their reception into the Church would have been authorized and signalized by Visions from heaven, and by other miraculous interventions, similar to those of which we read in the history of Cornelius; and those visions and interventions would not have been necessary in the case of Cornelius (x. 11). And the gravamen of the charge of receiving uncircumcised Gentiles into the Church would have been directed against these men of Cyprus, and not, as it was, against St. Peter (xi. 2).

If then we receive the word Ελληνας, and translate it Gentiles, we must place this incident after the baptism of Cor-

And this seems to have been Bp. Pearson's opinion; see his Ann. Paulin. ad A.D. XLI.

But suppose now that this reception into the Church at Antioch was after that of Cornelius;

Still it would not be certain that the word EALAnvas means Gentiles here. For we read afterwards, in xiv. 27, that Paul and Barnabas announced in this same city, Antioch, that God had opened the door of faith to the Gentiles;

But this would not have been news to them, if they, who had been converted in large numbers at Antioch (v. 24), had been

Nor does it seem that Barnabas had as yet received a mission to the Gentiles (see on xiii. 2).

And if the reception of a single Gentile, Cornelius, and of a few with him at Cæsarea, made such a commotion as it did in the Church, it is probable that the reception of such large multitudes as are here mentioned at Antioch, would have made more noise, if they had been Gentiles.

On the whole it seems,

That there is not sufficient evidence to justify the insertion of EANquas in the text.

2. That Έλληνισταs is probably the true reading.

3. That even if Ελληνας was written by St. Luke, it would not be certain that he meant by that term Gentiles only

4. That, if he had meant Gentiles only, he would probably have written τὰ ἔθνη (as x. 45; xi. 18; xiii. 46. 48; xiv. 2. 5. 27; xv. 3. 7. 14), and not τους Ελληνας. Indeed it is doubtful whether EARAPVES, with the definitive article, is ever used in the N. T. for the Heathen—as opposed to the Jews.

When then (it may be asked) was the advance here made in the progress of the Church?

It was the conversion of a large body of Hellenists or Greekspeaking Jews and Proselytes; i. e. of that same class which had been most hostile to St. Stephen, and caused his death (see vi. 9-14, and on ix. 29).

Hence we may see why St. Luke mentions, that they who converted them had been dispersed by the persecution upon Stephen (xi. 19).

St. Stephen had been killed at Jerusalem by Hellenists; and Hellenists had attempted to kill Paul, Stephen's persecutor, when, soon after his conversion, he preached Christ there (ix. 29). But now Hellenists are rescued from the death of sin, and brought to the saving knowledge of the gospel of eternal life, by some of those very persons who had been driven from Jerusalem by the persecution which Hellenists had excited, and who had come from Jerusalem to seek and to save them in their own homes.

Hence also we see why Barnabas now goes to Tarsus to seek Saul (v. 25); how happy must have been the reconciliation effected between the Hellenists and him whom they had attempted to destroy when he preached Christ! (ix. 29.)

So God overruled evil for good. Here then was a great step forward. A victory achieved over a large number of the bitterest enemies of the Church; a conquest gained beyond the region of Palestine, and therefore in this respect also different from the successes at Jerusalem and Cæsarea; achieved in the third great City of the world, Antioch; and introductory to the triumphs of which we are about to read in the sequel, and which were mainly won by the agency of the great Apostle to the Gentiles, who is now presented to us at Antioch, St. Paul, and who is soon to be ordained an Apostle at Antioch, and will thenceforth proceed on his triumphal march till he arrives at the Capital of the world-Rome.

In examining the important question considered in this note, some use has been made of an able paper by the learned Principal of Bishop's College, Calcutta, the Rev. W. Kay, D.D. Calcutta, 1856. There is also an excellent note here of Valckenaer (in his Scholæ, p. 481), and see Whitby here, and on vi. 1.

24. ἀνηρ ἀγαθός] a good man. Something more than δίκαιος.

See St. Paul's distinction, Rom. v. 7. (Ford.)

This praise of Barnabas is remarkable. It is not usual for Evangelists and Apostles to praise one another. There must be some special reason for this exception; as for that in xv. 26, and 2 Pet. iii. 15.

The reason probably was this,—St. Luke, the author of the Acts, was the friend and companion of St. Paul; and he has related the circumstances of the παροξυσμός and consequent separation It might perof Paul and Barnabas: see below, xv. 37-40. haps be supposed that St. Luke,-the friend of St. Paul,-was prepossessed in his favour; and was prejudiced against Barnabas. There is something, therefore, very appropriate and interesting in this graceful tribute to Barnabas from St. Luke, "He was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith."

This name was not given till about twelve years after the Ascension of Christ; in the reign of Claudius. Cp. Suidas, v. Χριστιανοί. Joh. Malel., who says that ἐπὶ Εὐοδίου Χριστιανοί ἀνομάσθησαν, p. 318, ed. Mill.

Another remarkable instance of the priority of facts to names, in the history of the Church. See above, on the word Εκκλησία v. 11, διάκονοι vi. 3, and πρεσβύτεροι xi. 30.

The disciples did not make haste to adopt a name which might repel the Jews. But when time had been given to the Jews to examine the evidence of the case, they proclaimed the doctrine that "Jesus is the Christ" as the very essence of their religious profession, in their name.

The word 'Christian' occurs only three times in the New Testament,-here, Acts xxvi. 28, and 1 Pet. iv. 16. It is used frequently by S. Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch and Martyr, ad Ephes. ii. 14, ad Magnes. 4. Trall. 6. Rom. 3. Polyc. 7. Cp.

Mart. Polycarp 3, Χριστιανός είμι.

Eusebius appears to ascribe its imposition to the Church herself, and not, as some have done, to her enemies. And this opinion seems most probable;

The Jews would never have conceded such a title to the Nazarene,-a title which involved the acknowledgment that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah or Christ.

The termination -anus is no proof of a Roman extraction. We have 'Hρωδιανοl in the Gospels (Matt. xxii. 16. Mark iii. 6; xii. 13). Many Roman names and modes of expression had found their way with the Roman arms into Palestine, as may be readily seen by an inspection of Buxtorf's Lexicon Talmudicum. Besides, many other names with the same termination were given by Greeks and other Orientals; viz. 'Aperavol, Neotopiavol. Ammonius, in Caten. p. 339.

The Romans did not understand the name when imposed. " Perperam Chrestianus appellatur à vobis." (Tertullian.) "Ignari rerum nostrarum Christum Chrestum, et Christianos Chres-tianos vocant." (Lactant.)

The word is not from Hebrew, but of Greek origin; although, happily, by its termination it accommodated itself alike to Greek and Roman use, and was well fitted to circulate throughout the world; and being first given in a Gentile city, it was an earnest of the future extension of the Church.

Derived from the threefold office of Christ, the Anointed One of God, to be the Prophet, Priest, and King of the world, the name intimates the obligation of those who bear it, to faith in Him, to worship through Him, and to obedience to Him, as the Christ; and it also declares their participation in His Unction. (S. Aug. Ps. xxvi.) As Ignatius says, Magn. 10, "Whoever is called by any other name than this of Christian is not of God, and (ad Rom. 3) it is our duty not only to be so called, but to be. Since also Christ is the Son of the living God (Matt. xvi. 16), these duties are elevated proportionably to His Divine Majesty. S. Ignatius, who wrote what has just been cited, was immediate successor to Euodius, Bishop of Antioch (Euseb. iii. 22), in which city, and, perhaps, in whose time, this name was given.

The name Christian was not given at Jerusalem, the capital of the Jewish world, where 3000 had been converted at once, but at Antioch, a Gentile city, the residence of the President of Syria, who had the supreme command of Judea. An intimation of the future diffusion of Christianity throughout the Heathen world.

Antioch thenceforth became a centre of Gentile Christianity.

It is worthy of remark, that the name Christian was given, for all time, to the followers of Christ in that great Syrian capital Antioch, in which the Persecutor of God's people, Antiochus Epiphanes, had reigned, whose own name was connected by origin with that city, and who was a type of Antichrist.

Bp. Pearson has expressed an opinion, that, as the word Χριστιανός was first used at Antioch, so also the word Χριστιανισμός, as opposed to 'Ιουδαϊσμός, was first used by S. Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch. See on Ignat. ad Philad. 6.

"A title so honourable and of such concernment," says Bp. Pearson on the Creed (Art. ii. p. 194), "that St. Luke has thought fit to mention the city in which that name was first heard, and given by Euodius, the Bishop of that place, as Ecclesiastical History informs us (Suidas, v. Xριστιανοί. Johann. Antioch. p. 318: cp. Bingham, ii. 1. 4); in which the primitive Christians so much delighted, that before the face of their enemies they would acknowledge no other than that, though hated, reviled, tormented, martyred for it." See Euseb. v. 1, and cp. Bingham i. chapp. 1 and 2, where the learned author enumerates the various names given to the Christians.

The name Christian is also a protest against all religious titles derived from human leaders: είς γὰρ δμών καθηγητής δ Χριστός (Matt. xxiii. 8, 10). "Christianus est cui Christus semper in corde, ore, et opere." (A Lap.)

Hence Greg. Nazian. says (p. 656), "I honour Peter, but am not called Petrianus; I honour Paul, but am not called Paulianus; I will not consent to be named of men, having been born of God. If I worshipped a Creature I should not be a Christian. For why is the name of Christian precious? Because Christ is God." Similar language is used by S. Augustine. What would they have said of the names Arminian, Wesleyan, &c.?

The writer of the Acts of the Apostles, probably a native of Antioch (Euseb. iii. 4), might well rejoice in the appellation; as S. Chrysostom, the Homilist on the Acts, did, from his own connexion with that city.

It is to be understood from the context that St. Luke is speaking of its coming to pass in Judæa.

— ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου] in the time of Claudius. It was not prophesied that it would prevail in all parts of the Empire at once, and this seems to be the reason why St. Luke says in the time of Claudius, without specifying the year; and hence it is easily intelligible that the Christians of Antioch, a great commercial city, having traffic with all countries, might be comparatively at ease, while their brethren in the heart of Judgea might be in distress.

The introduction of the words em! Khaudiou seems to intimate that the prophecy itself was delivered before he was Emperor.

Hitherto St. Luke had applied the word πρεσβύτεροι to the elders of the Jews (iv. 5. 8. 23; vi. 12); henceforth the πρεσβύτεροι are officers recognized in the Church, xiv. 23; xv. 2. 4. 6. 22; xxi. 18.

The contributors did not send the money to the Deacons, though it is probable that the alms were to be dispensed by their instrumentality (vi. 5).

While the Apostles were at Jerusalem, the sums of money arising from the sale of the lands were laid at their feet (iv. 35.

It would seem therefore from the circumstance here mentioned, that the Apostles were not now at Jerusalem. St. James, the Bishop of that See, was probably there; and in the word presbyters his presidency may be supposed (see xii. 17), as St. Paul's is in 1 Tim. iv. 14 compared with 2 Tim. i. 6.

CH. XII. 1. κατ' ἐκεῖνον τὸν καιρόν] At that season. St. Luke here returns to an earlier date than the famine in xi. 28, which took place soon after the death of Herod Agrippa I., which is described xii. 21-24, and occurred soon after the Passover of — 'Ηρώδης ὁ βασιλεύς] Herod the King. The word βασιλεύς, King here, is a proof of St. Luke's accuracy. This Herod is Agrippa, son of Aristobulus and Bernice, and grandson of Herod called the Great, by whom, after his father's death, he was sent to the court of Tiberius, at Rome, who, after the death of Drusus, put him in custody, in which he remained till the death of Tiberius. Caligula gave him the tetrarchy of Philip (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 6. 10; xix. 8. 2) and the tetrarchy of Herod his brother, who was banished to Lyons, and the title of King. The Emperor Claudius added to his kingdom whatever else had belonged to his grandfather, Herod the King (Joseph. Ant. xix. 5. 1; 8. 2)

Coins of Herod Agrippa have been preserved with the inscriptions BAZIAETE MEFAE AFPIHHAE PHOKAIEAP, and on the reverse, KAIZAPIA (sic) 'H HPOZ TO: ZEBAZTO: AIMENI (Akermann, p. 38), and ΗΡΩΔΗΣ ΦΙΛΟΚΛΑΥΔΙΟΣ (Wetst. p. 525; see below on vv. 21-23),-remarkable mementos of his attachment to Rome, and of his connexion with this Cæsarea, where he was smitten by the Angel when doing homage to Claudius Cæsar.

2. ἀνείλε 'Ιάκωβον τ. ἀδελφον 'Ιωάννου he killed James the brother of John; and so fulfilled the prophecy of Christ (Matt. James tasted the first draught of Christ's cup of suffering, and his brother John had the longest draught of it. See also on v. 3, and on John xxi. 23.

The Lord sometimes surrenders the life of His most faithful servants; and so the measure of guilt of those who persecute them is filled up, and their punishment hastened, and the victory of Christ consummated.

It is related by Clemens Alex. in Euseb. ii. 9, "that the person who accused James, having been present at his testimony to Christ, was so moved by it as to profess himself a Christian; and that he and the Apostle were led together to execution, and on the way thither he craved pardon of James for the wrong he had done him; and that the Apostle, having looked at him for a short time, said, 'Peace be with you,' and kissed him. And so both were beheaded together." As to the time of his martyrdom, see on v. 3.

VOL. I .- PART II.

Surprise has been expressed by some (see Meyer, p. 221) that the writer of the Acts does not dilate on the circumstances of the Martyrdom of the First of the Apostles who shed his blood for Christ.

But it was no part of St. Luke's plan to write a Martyrology. His work is the book of their "Acts" in life, and not of their sufferings by death. He does not describe death-beds. The martyrdom of life is what he teaches. He fixes the reader's attention on that; and thus leads us to conclude that they who live as Martyrs will die as Martyrs, and that the true way to die well is to live well.

He thus guards us against the common error of dwelling too much on the circumstances of death-beds; and draws us off from them, to the practical duties of daily life.

Having described one Martyrdom in such a manner as none but an inspired writer could have done-the Martyrdom of St. Stephen the Deacon (vi. vii.)—he leaves his readers to infer that the same Spirit Who encouraged and animated the Protomartyr in his death, was with the whole of the Noble Army of Martyrs who followed him on the road of suffering to glory; and he therefore will not describe the martyrdom of the first Apostle, St. James, nor even of him whose friend and historian he is, the Apostle St. Paul.

Another reason may perhaps have weighed with him here. He and his brother Evangelists are very full and circumstantial in their history of the first and greatest of Martyrdoms-that blessed Martyrdom which is the source of all the Grace and of all the Glory of all Martyrdoms, both in life and death, even to the end of time, the Martyrdom of "the true and faithful MARTYR or WITNESS," JESUS CHRIST. (Rev. i. 5; iii. 14.)

Perhaps he was unwilling to disturb the unapproachable dignity and holiness of that astonishing act of love, and of that unique source of life; or to draw off the attention of his readers by details of the subordinate and derivative martyrdoms of his followers, even of a St. James, and a St. Paul, from contemplating with unwavering faith and undivided love the Martyrdom

James suffered by one Herod the same kind of death as the Baptist had suffered from another Herod. The Herods were imitators of Rome even in their executions of punishment. Death by decapitation was abominable in the eyes of the Jews. (Lightfoot.)

3. ἀρεστὸν—'Ιουδαίοιs] pleasing to the Jews. It was a ruling principle of the Herodian policy, to please the people. "Herodis posteri, Herodis Magni exemplo, id tantum satagebant, ut Cæsaribus partim, partim Judæis placerent." (Grotius.)

Tillemont, p. 270) that St. James was martyred on the Second day of the Passover, i. e. on the XVth Nisan, the same day as the Crucifixion of Christ; if so, there was in this coincidence also an appropriateness in the prophecy of his participation in Christ's cup of suffering. See v. 2.

4. τέσσαρσι τετραδίοις] four quaternions; a quaternion for each of the four watches of the night, he being chained (v. 6) to two of each of the quaternions in succession; and the other two being posted at the door.

Agrippa, who had been himself kept a prisoner at Rome by Tiberius, had not learnt mercy by adversity. He who had been bound, binds Peter; but Peter is loosed from his chains by an Angel of life, and Agrippa is smitten by an Angel of death.

 Aγγελος Κυρίου] an Angel of the Lord. See also v. 23.
 This Chapter presents a Prophetical Epitome of the History of the Persecutions of the Church.

Herod, the Edomite, favoured by the Roman Empire, admired and applauded by the world, acting with a view to popularity (xii. 3), and administering his kingdom on principles of political expediency, with an eye mainly to material and mer-cantile interests (v. 20), and by the arts of diplomacy, and with the pomp and display of human eloquence and glory (v. 21), is a striking personification of the Power of the World as arrayed against the Church.

He stretches forth his hands to vex certain of the Church. He is at first successful. The Apostle St. James is killed by the Sword; as the Baptist was by Herod's uncle. This act pleases the people. Herod is elated by success. He proceeds to seize another Apostle, St. Peter, the foremost of the Twelve, and thus he is hurried on to his own destruction.

The Church resorts to her proper weapon of defence-Prayer (vv. 5, 12), united and unremitting Prayer. In answer to her supplications, one Angel of the Lord is sent to deliver Peter from prison; and another Angel is sent from God to smite Herod, in the height of his pride and glory. The princely Persecutor is summoned from the $\beta \hat{\eta} \mu a$, on which he sate in royal state (v. 21), to the $\beta \hat{\eta} \mu a$ of Christ, the King of kings. He dies miserably. But the word of the Lord grows, and is mul-

This narrative forms a striking sequel to another divine History of Persecution in the Annals of the Ancient Church of God—in the Old Testament. There, another king, the victorious King of Assyria, Sennacherib, rages against Jerusalem and blas-phemes God. The Church of God, in the person of her king Hezekiah, resorts to her armour against Persecution and Impiety—

Prayer in God's House (see 2 Kings xix. 1. 14. Isa. xxxvii. 1).

The word of God, delivered by the prophet Isaiah, comforts Hezekiah. An Angel of the Lord is sent to smite the army of Sennacherib, in the hour of his impious exultation and triumph. Hezekiah, who had gone up to the Lord's house to pray, is mira-culously rescued by God. And he who had blasphemed God, falls basely by the hands of his own children, while worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god (2 Kings xix. 37. Isa. xxxvii.

These two Chapters (Acts xii. and Isa. xxxvii.) beautifully illustrate each other, by displaying the rage of the World and its furious passions against God and His Church, and the impotent futility and shameful discomfiture of all its pride and power when warring against Him; and the duty of the Church to trust in God and to pray, in the hour of her trial. They are dictated by the Holy Spirit for the encouragement of the Church in every age, and in order to cheer her with the prophetic assurance, that although all help of man should fail, the rage of the Kingdom of Darkness against her will not prevail, but be made conducive in the end to the more glorious Victory of the Word of God.

It is not unworthy of remark, as a happy coincidence, that these two Chapters are appointed to be read on the same day in the Calendar of Daily Lessons in the English Church (viz.) on December 12.

May the same Divine Power which watched over the Church of Sion under both dispensations, watch over our Jerusalem; may she have grace to imitate that Church in faith and trust and prayer; and may she be ever blessed with Princes and Pastors, mindful of the example and animated with the spirit of Hezekiah the King, Isaiah the Prophet, and Peter the Apostle!

 $-\phi \hat{\omega} s \kappa.\tau.\lambda.$] light; that he might not suppose it to be a

— οἰκήματι] an euphemism for prison (δεσμωτηρίφ). Cp. ἀπαγχθῆναι, v. 19, an expression for φονευθῆναι, also said of Herod, the enemy and persecutor of the Church. Cp. εἰς τὸν τόπον τον ίδιον, said of Judas, i. 25.

These examples of λιτότης, or charitable extenuation, are deserving of notice, as showing that the inspired Writers and Speakers, in the Apostolic age, were not actuated by passion, when relating the worst actions of their Enemies, but were enabled to cherish a spirit of gentleness and moderation, even under circumstances of severe provocation .- A genuine fruit of the Spirit of Grace.

8. σανδάλια] sandals. See on Matt. x. 10, and Mark vi. 9, whence it appears that the Apostles did not wear the heavier ὑποδήματα, but the lighter σανδάλια, more suitable for missionary activity. Σανδάλια are the Latin soleæ, and are interpreted βλαυτία by Hesych.

The words Arise quickly, are not designed to show that there was any need of haste, but to prove the celerity with which the deliverance of Peter from his chains was executed

Indeed (as has been observed by Valck.), all these commands of the Angel concerning St. Peter's attire, are recited to show that there was no hurry in the transaction. "Do not stay to bind on your sandals," was a common phrase among the Greeks, when they would excite a person to make haste. See Theocrit. xxiv. 35, Ανστα, μηδέ πόδεσσι τεοις ύπο σάνδαλα θείης.

And so Hesiod, to contrast speed with delay, uses a metaphor from the girding of the tunic, γείτονες άζωστοι έκιον, ζώσαντο δὲ πηοί. Cp. Juvenal, v. 20, "rumpere somnum Debent et ligulas demittere," and Ruperti's note.

- περιβαλοῦ τὸ ἰμάτιον σου] cast thy pallium about thee; he had already girded his tunic.

10. διελθόντες—τὴν πόλιν] See Lightfoot, who shows reason for believing that this prison was without the City's inner wall. and between its two walls.

- ἀπέστη] he departed. The Angel's actions show that God's extraordinary grace is not wanting in what is needful, nor exerted where not necessary; but where human care and labour can act, there divine grace does not supersede, but quicken them. (Chrys.)

12. Μάρκου] See xii. 25; xv. 37. 39. Probably Mark the Evangelist (Ammonius, Origen, Euthym., Œcumen.), whom St. Peter calls his son (1 Pet. v. 13). This opinion, though controverted by some, seems to be correct, for the following reasons:-

(1) We find St. Peter here connected with John, whose surname, or additional name, was Mark.

(2) This John Mark was the companion and ἀνεψιὸς of Barnabas (Acts xii. 25; xv. 37. 39. Col. iv. 10).

(3) Barnabas was under the influence of Peter. "Barnabas, Petro familiarissimus" (Bp. Pearson), was led away by Peter's example at Antioch (Gal. ii. 13).

- (4) This swerving of Barnabas under St. Peter's influence, appears to have prepared the way for the παροξυσμός between Paul and Barnabas (Acts xv. 36-39). See Bp. Pearson, A. P. ad A.D. 50.
- (5) St. Mark was mixed up with this dispute, and after it went away with Barnabas.

(6) St. Peter calls Mark his son (1 Pet. v. 13).

(7) This Mark is identified with the Evangelist by the Early Church, which records that the Gospel of St. Mark was written under the eye of St. Peter (Euseb. ii. 15; iii. 39). See also above, Introduction to the Gospel of St. Mark, p. 111.

- προσευχόμενει] praying by night. Cp. v. 5. Angelus orationis (see Malachi ii. 7, and cp. Bp Andrewes, Serm. v. 355) ascendebat in Ecclesiâ, ad invocandum Deum; Angelus Potestatis descendebat à Deo ad liberandum Petrum.

Herod's soldiers were watching under arms at the door of the prison. Christ's soldiers were watching unto prayer in the house of Mary, Christ's soldiers are more powerful with their arms, than Herod's soldiers with theirs. They unlock the prison door, and bring Peter to the door of Mary's house. See the beautiful Homily of Chrysostom, on this history, pp. 761-764.

13. την θύραν τοῦ πυλώνος] The door or wicket of the gate.

Cp. iii. 2; xiv. 13.

— παιδίσκη] a damsel. We hear of a damsel as a porter in the High Priest's house John xviii. 16, 17.

- ὑπακοῦσαι] to hearken, to answer and announce. Xenophon, Sympos. i. 11.

14. ἀπὸ τῆs χαρᾶs] from joy. A touching incident, full of truth and beauty, - showing the love with which the Apostle was regarded by a servant, perhaps a slave. S. Chrys. here observes, σκόπει πως αι παιδίσκαι αὐτων δμότιμοι αὐταις ήσαν. A lesson for modern times. Remark also that St. Luke's knowledge of facts extends even to the name of the servant-maid at Mary's door.

15. ὁ ἄγγελος αὐτοῦ ἐστιν] it is his Angel. This was said by holy persons who had been engaged in earnest prayer, and at a time when the graces of the Holy Spirit in the knowledge of divine things were bestowed in extraordinary abundance on the Church. And the Holy Spirit has vouchsafed to place this speech here upon record in Scripture. There is doubtless therefore something significant in it. Some of the Fathers did not hesitate to say, that it appears from this and other passages of Holy Writ, say, that it appears from this and other passages of Holy Writ, especially Matt. xviii. 10, that every believer has a guardian Angel, δτι ἔκαστος ἡμῶν ἄγγελον ἔχει (Chrys.), and παντὶ πεπιστευκότι εἰς Κύριον ἄγγελος παρεδρεύει (Basil, in Ps. xxxiii.), ἔκαστος ἔχει ὁδηγὸν (Ammon.), "unless we drive him from us by our sins" (Basil, in Caten. Theophyl. S. Hieron. in Esai. c. 66), and see the passages in Petavii Dogm. Theol. iii. de Angelis, ii. 6, and Bp. Bull's two Sermons, xi. and xii. "On the existence of Angels," and "the Office of the Holy Angels towards the Faithful," yell in 961—395. vol. i. pp. 261-325.

It was also a received opinion among the devout Jews of our Lord's age, that every one of the faithful has a tutelary Angel, and that the Angel sometimes appeared in the likeness of the person whose Angel he was. See Lightfoot here, ii. p. 683.

It may be observed also, that this speech had a singular fitness on the present occasion. For St. Peter had just said (v. 11),

"Now I know that God hath sent His Angel and hath delivered me;" and the very fact that he was now at Mary's door was due to God's interposition by an Angel.

It was God's power exerted by the ministry of an Angel which had brought Peter out of the prison and enabled him to stand there. The speech therefore seems to have been uttered not without some intimation from above.

Thus far at least we may venture to say concerning it,-

(1) That it affords a remarkable illustration of the truth of the assertion, that the Angels of God "are sent forth to minister for them that shall be heirs of salvation" (Heb. i. 14), especially when labouring in the cause of Christ and His Church, and in peril of death, as Peter was. Cp. Ps. xxxiv. 7; xci. 9—12.

(2) That this speech, coming forth so naturally as it did from the mouth of this Christian assembly in the house of Mary, affords a cogent proof of the reality of the angelic appearances described in the New Testament, which some rationalizing Expositors would endeavour to explain away into figures of speech. Here is a person described, knocking at a door, speaking with a human voice. It cannot, they think, be Peter; for he is in prison; who, then, is it? It is his Angel.

(3) The frequency with which Angels appear, or are mentioned in the History of the Acts of the Apostles (in which the word Angel occurs twenty times), is remarkable. See v. 19; viii. 26; x. 3; xii. 7. 23; xxvii. 23. And in this same book the Sadducees appear prominently as persecutors of the Church; and they believed "neither Angel nor Spirit," xxiii. 8;

Thus Almighty God affords the most appropriate and seasonable corrections of error, in perilous times, to His Church. The angelic appearances in the Apostolic age comforted the hearts of persecuted Churches, and refuted the errors of persecuting Sad-

17. κατασείσας—τη χειρί] having beckoned to them to be silent, with a downward motion of his hand. See on xxi. 40.

This description of the motions of the hand and other bodily gestures, which are frequently noticed in the Acts, bespeak the accuracy of an eye-witness. See iii. 7; ix. 41; xiii. 16; xix. 33; xxi. 40; xxiii. 19; xxvi. 1; xxviii. 8.

— Ἰακώβφ] to James, "the brother of our Lord," and first Bishop of Jerusalem (Euseb. ii. 1). See on Matt. x. 3. He was martyred, A.D. 62, by the Jews, who, being disappointed by the escape of St. Paul, wreaked their vengeance on him. Euseb.

This message to St. James appears to intimate that he held a special position in the Church at Jerusalem. And this is confirmed by other passages in the Acts, particularly xxi. 18, where St. Paul makes a special report to James; and by Gal. ii. 12, where persons coming from Jerusalem are said to come "from James."

This office is affirmed by ancient Church History to have been that of Bishop of Jerusalem. See Euseb. ii. 1, where he says that James, "the Lord's brother, commonly called James the Just, was ordained the first Bishop of Jerusalem."

It has been questioned by some whether "James the Lord's brother" was one of the twelve Apostles. (Vales. Euseb. i. 12. Burton, p. 105. Baumgarten, i. p. 326. Gieseler, § 25, 26, and others.) But this question seems to be decided by St. Paul, who says (Gal. i. 19), "Other of the Apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother." Compare this with Acts ix. 27, "Barnabas brought him (Paul) to the Apostles," i. e. Peter and

There are only two Apostles named James; and if James the Lord's brother had been the same as James the son of Zebedee, then St. John the Evangelist would have been the Lord's brother, which is never said by any writer of Scripture.

(xv. 40), were Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the Less; according to St. John (xix. 25), Mary Magdalene and Mary ή τοῦ Κλωπα, probably, wife of Cleopas or Clopas. Therefore James the Less was, it would seem, son of Cleopas. And this is confirmed by Epiphan, Chrys., Lardner, iii. 331, and others, particularly (as it seems) by Papias, the scholar of St. John. See on Matt. xii. 46. And according to St. Matthew (x. 3), one of the two Apostles who was called James, was the son of Alphaus, which is probably the same name as Cleopas. See on Matt. x. 3; xii. 46. Therefore James the Lord's brother was the same as James the Apostle.

Some Roman Divines say Rome (Baronius), but this is uncertain, as Lorinus acknowledges; and see Pearson, Ann. Paul. A.D. xliv. Others (Lightfoot, Heinrichs, Kuinoel) say Antioch. We find Peter again at Jerusalem at the Council, Acts xv. 7, the last time he is mentioned in this book; The fact of his departure is perhaps mentioned to show that he would not expose himself needlessly to danger, or tempt Herod to the sin of persecution: οὐ γὰρ ἐπείραζε τὸν Θεὸν, says

More than twelve years had now elapsed from the Ascension (see on i. 4), and he had discharged his duty of witnessing Christ's Resurrection to the Jews at Jerusalem. He would now go and preach elsewhere, in some other place, where the Gospel which he preached would be received more favourably than it had been by the Rulers of Jerusalem.

Perhaps in the word here used, -not άλλος, but έτερος, other of two, contrasted with each other—there is reference to our Lord's own command (Matt. x. 23), If they persecute you in one city, fly εls την ετέραν—and to His own practice when rejected by the Samaritan Village (Luke ix. 56), ἐπορεύθη εἰς ἐτέ-ραν κώμην.

The time of the probation of Jerusalem and her Rulers was now nearly over, as far as the preaching of the Twelve was concerned. Her cup of iniquity had been almost filled to the brim by the murder of James the Apostle, and by the attempt made by her King to murder St. Peter—because that other murder had pleased the Jews;

Now, therefore, the Witness of Apostolical Preaching withdraws from Jerusalem, and migrates to another place;

Probably it is for this reason that the place to which Peter went is not specified. The non-specification of its name brings out more clearly its contrast as another place than Jerusalem. If its name had been mentioned, it might have been supposed that he went from Jerusalem, merely because he was attracted to that other, different, place by some recommendations of its own. On St. Peter's subsequent history, until his martyrdom at

The events here described took place in the Theatre at Cæsarea, when Herod was celebrating festive and votive games in honour of his Imperial patron Claudius; perhaps on the occasion of his return from Britain (Joseph. xix. 8. 2). The passage of Josephus deserves to be transcribed, as illustrating and confirming the narrative of St. Luke, and in order that it may be seen from the comparison of it with St. Luke's relation, how little the Sacred Writers are disposed to overstate things, or to adopt what is legendary and apocryphal. δευτέρα των θεωριών ημέρα στολην ενδυσάμενος, εξ άργύρου σευτερά των σεωριών ημερά στο λην είναι, παρήλθεν είς τὸ θέατρον, ἀρχομένης ἡμέρας. If such a narrative as this had been found in the pages of the New Testament, how much censure would it have elicited! Many will allow Josephus to have his owl, who deny St. Luke See also above on v. 15.

On the citation of this passage of Josephus by Eusebius (ii. 10), compare Whiston's note on Josephus with Heinichen's Excursus ii. p. 893, ed. Oxon, 1842.

The ayyelos in Eusebius is to be explained from Josephus xviii. 8, compared with xix. 6.

The comparison of St. Luke's narrative in this chapter with that of the historian Josephus, presents for thankful consideration the benefits derived from the study of Sacred History. It removes the veil which hangs between us and the past, and discloses to us the secret springs and invisible agency by which its great events were produced. This is a work which no uninspired writer could perform. It could only be done by the Spirit of God. And a writer who (as St. Luke does in this chapter) professes to reveal the unseen ministry of Angels in the working out of the facts which he describes, lays claim to Inspiration. He asserts his own superiority to all ordinary Historians; and he gives cheering assurance of God's mercy to His people, and encourages them to rely on His superintending Providence and retributive Justice in the Government of the World.

Yet some would reject these claims as presumptuous, and would refuse all the benefits thus proffered to their use by God;

For example, one recent Expositor of note thus comments

It has been sometimes said that persons conversant with material causes, and physical phenomena, and animal organization, are slow to recognize the workings of supernatural agents. But St. Luke, the beloved Physician (Col. iv. 14), whose praise is in the Gospel (2 Cor. viii. 18), furnishes a happy exception to this assertion. By the discipline of his medical training, he was required and qualified to scrutinize natural causes. And perhaps we may see a divine dispensation in the fact, that he among the Evangelists who was least likely to be carried away by a superstitious belief in supernatural agency, has been employed more than any other Sacred Writer to reveal the operations of Invisible Beings in the History of the Church.

Persecutor, bearing the same name, "Is Saul among the Prophets?" (1 Sam. x. 12; xix. 24.) See on ix. 21.

These words, Prophets and Teachers, have here a special signification and propriety as applied to Barnabas and Saul. They had been already endued with special χαρίσματα or gifts and graces, qualifying them to be Prophets and Teachers, but had not yet been ordained to the Apostolic Office. They had not as yet received the power of dispensing those peculiar gifts which were bestowed by God through the agency of the Apostles. See further on v. 3, and on 1 Cor. xii. 28.

(2 Cor. xi. 5). 2. λειτουργούντων] ministering. λειτουργία (from λήϊτον and έργον), a public service (cp. the Athenian λειτουργίαι), applied in N. T. to the public ministry

(1) Of the Temple (Luke i. 23. Heb. viii. 6; ix. 21), as in LXX, passim.

(2) Of the Christian Church.

Thus St. Paul calls himself λειτουργόν Ίησοῦ Χριστοῦ els τὰ ἔθνη (Rom. xv. 16), Ιερουργοῦντα τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, Ίνα γένηται ἡ προσφορὰ τῶν ἐθνῶν εὐπρόσδεκτος, ἡγιασμένη ἐν Πνεύματι άγίφ.

Cp. Clemens Roman. § 43, as to the Jewish ministry; and as to the Christian, see cap. 44, where he uses both the words λειτουργία and λειτουργία, and speaks of the λειτουργία of the Apostles, and of the πρεσβύτεροι, to the ποιμνίον του Χριστου.

Hence it appears that in the records of primitive Christian Antiquity, the Apostles and Presbyters are said λειτουργείν Θεφ, άγιον, 'Αφορίσατε δή μοι τον Βαρνάβαν καὶ Σαῦλον εἰς το ἔργον ο προσκέκλημαι αὐτούς.

to minister to God; and also λειτουργείν τῷ ποιμνίφ, i. e. to minister to the people. Cp. Dean Trench, Syn. xxxv.

In opposition to the assertions of some Romish Divines who would limit the word Aειτουργία to the sacrifice of the Mass, it may be observed that Chrys. here interprets the word by κηρυτ-τόντων, preaching: and it has been shown by Isaac Casaubon (Exercit. Baron. xvi. n. 41) that it extends to Divine Worship generally, i. e. to Prayers, Reading of Scripture, Preaching, and Administration of the Sacraments. Sometimes the word μυστική was added to it, and then it generally signified the Holy Eucharist. See Bingham, xiii. 1.

- ἀφορίσατε δή μοι] separate ye them to Me now. The conjunction 8h is thus used with an imperative and conjunctive to Indicate a command to be executed without delay. See Valck., and comp. Luke ii. 15. Acts xv. 36. 1 Cor. vi. 20. Separate them from yourselves, and from the order of Prophets and Teachers (to which they have hitherto belonged), and ordain ye them now to that work to which I have called them, viz., as the sequel shows, to the Apostleship of the Gentiles. See on 1 Cor.

ix. 6. Gal. ii. 9

Indeed St. Paul in the beginning of his Epistle to the greatest Gentile Church seems specially to refer to these very words of the Holy Ghost, Παῦλος κλητός ἀπόστολος ἀφωρισμένος είς εὐαγγέλιον Θεοῦ. See Rom. i. 1.

On έργον, work, used in this sense, see 1 Tim. iii. 1, ε τις ἐπισκοπης ὀρέγεται, καλοῦ ἔργου ἐπιθυμεῖ. So Chrys. Cp. S.

Leo, Ep. ad Dioscor. 79, and below, v. 9.

Up to this time they are called Prophets, or preachers. See But, after their Ordination at Antioch, they appear in the next Chapter with the Apostolic title (v.4), σὸν τοῖς ἀποστόλοις, with the Apostles; i. e. Barnabas and Paul; and again, v. 14, of ἀπόστολοι Βαρνάβας και Παῦλος, the Apostles, Barnabas and Paul. Although St. Paul had received Visions and Revelations of the Lord, yet Ordination and Mission by the public authority of the Church, to qualify him for the Apostolic Office, was not dispensed with in his case; but was specially enjoined by the Holy Spirit Himself, who did not say, "I have separated them," but "Do ye separate them for Me."

Here (says Chrys.) we may see a proof of the Divinity of the Holy Ghost. The Prophets were ministering to the Lord. He does not say, Separate Paul and Barnabas to the Lord, but to Me, for the Ministry to which I have called them: showing that

He is coequal with God.

"When was St. Paul ordained to be an Apostle?"

This is an important question, and much has been written upon it (see Lardner, iii. p. 259).

But it does not seem that sufficient attention has been paid to the important difference between his call, and mission to the Apostleship.

He had received an immediate call from Christ at his Conversion, and was even then sent to the Gentiles (Acts xxvi. 16-18), προs obs σè ἀποστέλλω, to whom I send thee as an Apostle.

It is therefore true that he was then divinely called and sent to be an Apostle to the Gentiles.

But he was not then ordained to be an Apostle. He had not as yet received the inward spiritual gifts of the Holy Ghost, and the external visible mission, which were requisite to authorize, qualify, and enable him to execute Apostolic acts. See note below on Acts xxvi. 17.

He had also supernatural Revelations in Arabia from Christ (Gal. i. 11-17); and these Visions and Revelations were arguments and motives to himself, for entering on the Apostolic office. But they would not carry conviction to others, and persuade them to receive him as an Apostle.

And he does not appear, as yet, to have exercised Apostolic functions. Nor is he, as yet, called an Apostle by the Holy Spirit writing by St. Luke; but he is only a Prophet, or Teacher (xiii. 1).

In order to execute the office of an Apostle, it was provided that he should not only have an inward call from God, but also have an external mission and ordination from Him, by the instrumentality of persons in the Church who were qualified to ordain him.

This is what he received, when the Holy Ghost said, Separate to Me now Barnabas and Paul for the work to which I have called them (Acts xiii. 2).

A distinction must therefore be made between the call, and the separation, to the work of the Ministry. And nothing more clearly shows the necessity of a regular external mission (see Article XXIII.), as well as an inward spiritual call, than the example of St. Paul, who was converted in an extraordinary manner, and eminently privileged by an "abundance of Revelations and Visions of the Lord" (2 Cor. xii. 7), and who was directly nominated and appointed by the Holy Ghost Himself speaking from heaven to the Church (v. 2); and yet even he did not venture to enter on Apostolic functions, and did not receive the name of an Apostle, till he had been ordained by the laying on of hands.

It is the special function of God the Holy Ghost to qualify men by the divine unction at Ordination to discharge the duties to which they are called. See Acts xx. 28, and Bp. Pearson,

Art. viii. p. 616.

This is the second instance, recorded in the Acts, of Ordination to the Apostolic Office. It leads us to consider the agency by which, and the purposes for which, the Ordination of Apostles was effected; and its bearing on the Regimen and Polity of the Church, as regards the Christian Ministry.
Christ, the Son of God, manifest in the Flesh, was sent by God. He was God's Apostle (Heb. iii. 1) to Men: He is the Bishop of their souls (1 Pet. ii. 25).

He, when personally present upon Earth, chose the Twelve Apostles.

While He was upon Earth, one of the Twelve died.

Yet, although Christ was forty days upon earth "speaking of the things concerning the kingdom of God" (Acts i. 3), after this vacancy had occurred, He did not fill it up then.

But the first Act which the Apostles performed after Christ's Ascension into heaven, was to pray to Him to show "which of the two," whom they had nominated, "He had chosen, to take part in the ministry and Apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell" (Acts i. 24).

The words of the Original are remarkable there, - Kúpic, ανάδειξον ον έξελ έξω έκ τούτων των δύο ένα. The word έξελέξω connects the choice of the one with the choice of the original Twelve (see note, and cp. Acts i. 2). And the word eva, one, reserved for the end of the sentence, is emphatic, and is contrasted with δύο, two. If more than one had been chosen to succeed to the vacancy, it might have been supposed, that the persons so chosen were not severally and singly equal in dignity to the one, whose place they together occupied. But by the choice of one out of two to succeed one, it was shown that the one so chosen was equal to him whom he was chosen to succeed. Hence the Holy Spirit adds, "The lot fell on Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven Apostles."

Hence we derive certain important inferences,-

(1) That Christ, though no longer seen on earth, is as much present with His Church as when He was personally visible; and that He can as well choose an Apostle, when he is sitting on His throne in heaven, as when He is walking by the Sea of Galilee.

(2) That the Apostolic office was to be continued in the Church. The first act done by Him after His Ascension was to provide for its continuance.

(3) That the Episcopal form of Church Government, which alone exhibits that continuance, is the regimen of the Church that is most in accordance with the will of Christ.

(4) That all the Apostles were equal in dignity. They are called "the Eleven" (Acts i. 26). If one of the Apostles, e. g. St. Peter, had been superior in degree to the other Ten, he would not have been classed with them.

(5) That their successors are equal to them in all ordinary Apostolic functions. Matthias is equal to Judas, into whose place he succeeds, and he is "numbered with the Eleven Apostles.

(6) Even therefore if the Bishop of Rome is the successor of St. Peter, he has no claim on that ground to domineer over his brethren, the other Bishops of the Church.

The Descent of the Holy Ghost made no change in these principles of Church Polity; it confirmed them; at the same time, it extended their application. Before that descent, the Apostles prayed to Christ to show His Will by the medium of Lots, in the election of a successor to the vacant place among the Apostles. The Holy Grost had not then been given. But after the Day of Pentecost, all reference to Lots ceased. The Father sent the Holy Ghost, in the Name of the Son (John xiv. 26), to be the Interpreter of the Will of the Ever-Blessed Trinity in the Regimen of the Church.

Hence, therefore, in the passage now before us (Acts xiii. 2), which describes the first Ordination to the Apostolic office after the Day of Pentecost, we hear the Voice of the Holy Spirit Himself. "The Holy Ghost said, Separate Me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." Barnabas and Saul are ordained to the Apostleship. Henceforth they are called "Apostles," and perform Apostolic Acts. They are equal in dignity to the original Twelve, who had been chosen by Christ upon earth. Paul says of himself, that he is not "a whit behind the very chiefest Apostles" (2 Cor. xi. 5).

Judas had fallen away from his place: two persons were named; but only one was chosen to succeed him. equality of the successor to him whom he succeeded had been declared.

This point being established, we now find a provision made not only for the permanent continuance, but also for the ampler extension of the Apostolic office.

The next Apostle who died after Judas was St. James (Acts xii. 2). Here also two persons are named (Barnabas and Saul), and both are ordained to the Apostleship. They are ordained by the instrumentality of men, acting by command of the Holy Ghost:

Accordingly, the Church of England, in her Office for the consecration of Bishops, recognizes this act at Antioch, as the Ordination of St. Paul and Barnabas.

Thus, then, in these several Scriptures, we may recognize a divine dispensation for the continuation and multiplication of the Apostolate.

After this time, special utterances of the Holy Ghost, singling out particular persons for this office, are no longer distinctly heard. They cease, as Lots ceased. But the Holy Spirit is ever speaking and acting in and by the Apostles and the Church, which is His Temple; He ordains a Timothy at Ephesus, and a Titus in Crete, and Angels in the Churches of Asia, and others after them in succession to this day, to perform the ordinary functions of Apostles, and to be their successors, not indeed in the working of miracles, -which were but for a season, -but in all that is requisite for edifying the Body of Christ in every age and country, and for communicating to the immortal soul those ordinary gifts and graces which are necessary for its spiritual health here, and for its everlasting glory hereafter.

These conclusions are confirmed by the consentient voice and concurrent practice of the Church Universal, which is the Body of Christ, and is guided by the Holy Spirit, and which has authorized one form of Ecclesiastical Regimen, that by Bishops, whom she regards as successors of the Apostles in all ordinary Apostolic Offices and Acts (see on Acts xx. 28).

Here is a strong testimony for Episcopacy, as distinguished from the theory of the Papal Supremacy on the one side, and from Presbyterian parity and Lay Ordinations on the other.

In fine, this subject derives a solemn importance from the considerations,-

(1) That the Son of God was sent by the Father to be the Apostle and Bishop of our souls. 1 Pet. ii, 25.

(2) That when on Earth He chose the Twelve. Matt. x. 1.(3) That when He had ascended into heaven, He appointed Matthias to succeed to the place in the Apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell. Acts i. 24-26.

(4) That after the Day of Pentecost the Holy Ghost ordained Paul and Barnabas to the same office. Acts xiii. 1-3.

(5) That the Bishops of the Church are the successors of the Holy Apostles; and that their office includes within itself the two inferior orders of Priests and Deacons. See further on this subject note prefixed to 1 Tim. iii., p. 433.

(6) Thus then we see the Three Persons of the Ever-Blessed Trinity, God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, all cooperating in the Institution and Continuance of that Office which is the Foundation of the Threefold Ministry; and thus Episcopacy is grounded on the same sanction as that of Christianity itself, which is instituted and propagated by Baptism in the NAME of the TRIUNE GOD.

4. ἐκπεμφθέντες] This is St. Paul's first Missionary Tour. It begins at Antioch, and ends there. See xiv. 26. The reason of this appears from the peculiar character of that City

Observe, that the range of St. Paul's missionary labours always expands in his successive Tours. This first tour is a short one, the next is larger; and so on till he comes to Greece, Illyricum, Italy, Spain, and perhaps Britain. See Rom. xv. 24. Introd. to Hebrews, p. 366.

He did not go at first to Sergius Paulus,—a Gentile,—but the Proconsul sent for him, v. 7.
"In the Synagogues." We may observe here the prospective adaptations of the World for the reception of the Gospel, by God's providential dispensation, in the dispersion of the Jews, and in the erection of Synagogues throughout the world, which served as temporary Churches to the Apostles for preaching the Gospel, from the words of the Law and the Prophets, which were "read there every Sabbath Day" (see v. 27, and xv. 21), and which furnished texts for their Sermons.

Thus the soil of the World was already ploughed into furrows to receive the seed of the Gospel; or, to use another figure, the Synagogue was the vestibule of the Church. See the references made to Synagogues in this history, Acts ix. 20; xiii. 5. 14. 42, 43; xiv. 1; xv. 21; xvii. 1, 2, where it is said, κατά τδ $\epsilon i\omega\theta$ δs $\tau\hat{\varphi}$ Παύλ φ $\epsilon i\sigma\hat{\eta}\lambda\theta\epsilon$ κ.τ.λ., and cp.  ἀνθυπάτφ] Proconsul. Another instance of St. Luke's acracy. Cyprus had been subject to a "Proprætor," being an Imperial Province under Augustus; but that Emperor, in B.C. 27, converted it into a Senatorian Province, under a Proconsul (Dio Cass. liii. 12, p. 504, and liv. 4, p. 532); and such it was under Claudius, as is proved by a coin of that reign bearing the inscription Claudius Cesar, and on the reverse ΕΠΙ ΚΟΜΙΝΙΟΥ ΠΡΟΚΛΟΥ ΑΝΘΥΠΑΤΟΥ ΚΥΠΡΙΩΝ. See Akermann, Numismatic Illustrations of N. T., pp. 39-42, who gives the names of four 'Ανθύπατοι of Cyprus.

It was thought by many, that Cyprus must have been under a Proprætor (and not a Proconsul), because Strabo (xiv. ad fin.) calls it an ἐπαρχία στρατηγική μέχρι νῦν. Hence even Beza would have altered the text here from Proconsul into Proprætor; and did so change it in his Translation.

But it appears from Dio Cassius, p. 504, c, that all the Governors of the Senatorian Provinces were called Proconsuls, though they had been only Prætors; and the coins of Cyprus, and ancient Inscriptions of the age of Caligula and Claudius, give the title of Proconsul to the Governor of Cyprus. This has been pointed out by Cardinal Noris (Cenotaph. Pisan. p. 219), Engel (Kypros, 1843); and in England by Lardner (i. p. 19), Conybeare and Howson (chap. 5), and others; and thus St. Luke's accuracy has been vindicated.

There is little doubt, that in other cases, where some difficulties may still exist in the records of Holy Writ, a similar result would be attained, if all their circumstances were known.

 - ἀνδρὶ συνετῷ] an intelligent and wise man. A remarkable description. Two Proconsuls are placed in striking contrast with each other in this history; Sergius Paulus, Proconsul of Cyprus, and Gallio, Proconsul of Achaia (xviii. 12—17). The one is eager f Exed. 7. 11. 2 Tim. 3. 8.

8. 'Ελύμας] Elymas, the professional name of Bar Jesus, the Jew, and equivalent to μάγος, from קלומא, "in linguâ Arabicâ et Persicâ magus." (Rosenm.)

9. Σαῦλος, ὁ καὶ Παῦλος] Saul, who is also Paul. His name was changed at his Ordination to the Apostleship, as Simon was named Peter when called by Christ (Chrys.), and the sons of Zebedee were surnamed Boanerges, Mark iii. 17. But in Paul's case there was not an addition to the former name, but a change in it; and yet so as to leave much of the original name;

Some Expositors have said that this change was merely allusive and alliterative, -as Jason from Jesus, Pollio from Hillel, &c., for readier acceptance among the Romans;

But surely there was something more than this in the case of the Apostle to the Gentiles;

The change seems to have been made,

(1) Because Σαῦλος was a purely Jewish name, מָשְאֵל, and

(2) Because among the Greeks it might expose him to contempt, as having the same sound as σαῦλος (not σαυλὸς, see Passow in v.), wanton. See Homer, Hymn. Mercur. 28, and Ruhnken there. (3) To indicate his change and call to a new life; from a Jew to a Christian; from a Persecutor to a Preacher of the Gospel. "Patitur Paulus," says an ancient author in Aug. Append. Serm. 204, "quod fecerat Saulus. Saulus lapidavit, Append. Serm. 204, "quod Jeceral Saulus. Saulus lapidavit, Paulus lapidatus est; Saulus Christianos virgis affecit, Paulus quinquies quadragies una minus accepit. Saulus persecutus est Ecclesiam Dei, Paulus submissus est in sporta; Saulus vinxit, Paulus vinctus est."

(4) But in the change of Σαῦλος to Παῦλος much of the original word was left, and commemorated what he had been, and bespoke God's mercies to him in his new condition. Compare the slight verbal changes in Abram, Sara, Hoshea the son of Nun, and others. (Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 132.) The fire of zeal of Σαῦλος still glowed in the heart of Παῦλος, but its flame was purified by the Holy Ghost.

(5) His "new name" denoted also his mission to the Gentiles, of whom the Romans were the principal nation, to whom the name Paulus was familiar.

16) Some add that it was a token of humility, "Paulus, (6) some and that it was a token of humility, "Paulus, (1) Cor. parvulus, quia se judice ἐλάχιστος τῶν ἀποστόλων" (1 Cor. xv. 9, where see note); as S. Augustine says in Ps. lxxii. (in an observation undeservedly ridiculed by some in recent times), "ex Saulo factus est Paulus, ex superbo modicus; Paulum enim modicum est," and De Spir. et Litera, c. 7. On St. Paul's relation to Benjamin "the little," see on ix. 1, and on 1 Cor. xv. 8.

(7) The first convert whom he is recorded to have made was a noble Roman, the Proconsul of Cyprus, then a Senatorian Propince (Pio Care in p. 502) where comment (and preparament)

vince (Dio Cass. iv. p. 523), whose cognomen (not prænomen) was Paulus; and thus his name Paulus was a name of good augury, as presaging St. Paul's future success in the Roman and which they have triumphed, by the names Adiabenici, Parthici, Sarmatici; so Saul, being sent to preach to the Gentiles, brought back a trophy of his victory from the first spoil won by the Church, the Proconsul Sergius Paulus; and erected his banner therewith, and instead of Saul was called Paul." It is not said by Jerome that he gave himself this name on this account, which might indeed have been scarcely consistent with humility.

As S. Jerome says (in Epist. ad Philem.), "As Scipio, after the conquest of Africa, took the name of Africanus; and Metellus, having subdued Crete, gained the title of Creticus for his family; and Roman Generals are called from the nations over Gentile world.

St. Paul, the Apostle of the Greeks, was the Æmilius Paulus of the Gospel. He was indeed Macedonicus. heavenly vision of the man of Macedonia (xvi. 9), and brought Macedonia to Christ.

(8) Names imposed upon holy men, at the beginning of their career, were prophetic and significant of their office. if the Western World is to have a Head, certainly Paul, with his Roman name and mission to the West (Clem. Rom. i. 5), might seem to challenge that title for himself, rather than he who bore the Aramaic name Cephas, and the Greek one Peter.

- ἀτενίσαs] intently fixing his eyes. It has been argued by some from this expression here and in ch. xxiii. 1, that Paul never recovered his sight as before his Conversion, when he was blinded for a time by the "glory of that light." But it would seem rather, that the reverse might be inferred from the use of the word ἀτενίζω, which indicates a vigorous exercise and tension of the optic nerves, by which the spectator penetrates with a keen and piercing glance to the extreme point of his field of view. See the passages in i. 10, where it is used of the Apostles, and iii. 4, of St. Peter, vii. 55, of St. Stephen,-when their visual faculties were most strongly stimulated, and most powerfully exercised. It appears to be employed also here and elsewhere to indicate that faculty which the Apostles possessed, of discerning the spirits and scrutinizing the inward affections.

10. viè Διαβόλου] By his name he was 'son of Jesus,' but by opposing Jesus he became son of the Devil.

11. έση τυφλός—χειραγωγούς] thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. Saul himself, in his blind rage against the Church, had been stricken with blindness by God. Elymas, in his blind perversion of the truth, is now stricken with blindness by God at Paul's word. Paul was stricken in mercy, till he prayed, and was restored by God through the agency of Ananias (ix. 11. 17, 18), in order that he might see the light of the Gos-So Elymas was threatened with blindness for a season (cp. Luke iv. 13), that he might repent and see the light in body and soul. Saul had χειραγωγούντας, who led him to Damascus, where he received his sight (ix. 8), and Elymas had his χειραγωγούν. The scales had fallen from the eyes of Saul (ix. 18). A mist falls on the eyes of Elymas, and that mist was "for a season,"-a season of repentance, and might be dispelled, if he would resort to the same restoratives as St. Paul.

Thus the temporary blindness of the eye might be ministerial to the eternal light of the soul. Let these circumstances be considered by those who would charge St. Paul with cruelty. See

In what language did St. Paul preach in Pisidia?

Strabo (xiii. ad fin.) distinguishes the Pisidian tongue from the Greek and the Lydian; and if St. Paul spoke to the people in their vernacular tongue, his address was in some other language than Greek. We do not find that he had any difficulty in making himself understood by any of the various populations of Asia Minor, who spoke many different languages (see Strabo xii. in Lightfoot, ii. 693); and this is a confirmation of what was stated above concerning the gift of Tongues (ii. 4). See below, on xiv. 11.

18. ἐτροφοφόρησεν] bare them, as a nursing father bears his children. So A, C, E, and seven cursive MSS., and many versions, e. g. Syr., Copt., Æthiop., Sahid., and some early writers. So Bornemann, Bloomf., Tisch. (ed. 7), and Alford. The word is from Deut. i. 31, LXX, τροφοφορήσει, where Codex Vat. has τροποφορήσει σε Κύριος δ Θεός σου ως είτις τροφοφορήσαι άνθρωπος τον υίον αὐτοῦ.

The word also occurs in 2 Macc. vii. 27, ἐλέησόν με τὴν ἐν γαστρὶ περιενέγκασάν σε μῆνας ἐννέα, καὶ θηλάσασάν σε ἔτη τρία, καὶ ἐκθρέψασάν σε, καὶ ἀγαγοῦσαν εἰς τὴν ἡλικίαν ταύτην, καὶ τροφοφορήσασαν, and in Macarius, Homil. 46, ἀναλαμβάνει, καλ περιθάλπει καλ τροφοφορεί έν πολλή στοργή (Eustath. Odyss.

B. 131).

And it is explained by Cyril, Gloss., ώς τροφός εβάστασε, bare them as it were on his back, as a nursing father does his child. Cp. Exod. xix. 4. Numb. xi. 12. Isa. xlvi. 3; and cp. Deut. v. 15; viii. 2. Isa. lxiii. 9. Hos. xi. 3. Amos ii. 10.

This is a better reading than that of Elz., ετροποφόρησεν (bare their manners), which was indeed true, but not likely to be said, especially by St. Paul, who sought, as far as was consistent with truth, to offend none, and conciliate all (1 Cor. ix. 20);

St. Paul might well begin his address by reminding the Jews of their privileges in being nursed by the tender care of God; but it is not probable that so consummate an orator would have commenced his address with what would exasperate and repel them, viz. with a commemoration of their ingratitude to Him.

19. ἔθνη ἐπτά] seven nations. Deut. vii. 1. Vol. I.—Part II.

κατεκληρονόμησεν] He assigned as an inheritance. So A, B, C, D, E, G, and many Cursives, and this is received by Lachm., Tisch., Born., Alf.—Elz. has κατεκληροδότησε, which is probably a gloss on the other word, used in an uncommon sense. Cp. Numb. xxvi. 54. 56. Josh. xiv. 2. Ps. lxxviii. 55.

20. ως έτεσι τετρακοσίοις και πεντήκοντα και μετά ταῦτα] for about four hundred and fifty years: and after these—. Elz. has και μετά ταῦτα ως έτεσι τετρακοσίοις και πεντή-

The true reading has been happily restored by Lachmann from the oldest MSS., A, B, C, supported by the Latin, Coptic, Armenian, and Sahidic Versions, and by Chrys., and by D, which

This solves the question which has been the subject of much discussion in the comments upon this verse. The Latin Version explains it well thus, "quasi post quadringentos et quinquaginta annos," i. e. from the great epoch to which St. Paul had referred at the commencement of his speech, their reception into covenant with God, in Isaac, which was about (&s) 450 years before their entering into their inheritance in the promised land, i. e. from A.M. 2046, the birth of Isaac, to A.M. 2493, when the land began to be cultivated by the Israelites.

As Bengel well says, "Distributio terræ (Canaan) non est initium periodi quasi annorum ccccl, sed meta;" and he refers to John ii. 20 for the use of the dative, "quo innuitur, quantum annorum ab initio rei intercesserit, dum res ipsa eveniret."

It is therefore unreasonable to allege, that this calculation is irreconcileable with that in 1 Kings vi. 1. That chronological period begins with the Exodus, this ends with the entrance into

But it is worthy of remark, that the interval between the birth of Isaac and the entrance into Canaan was equal in duration to the interval between the deliverance of Exodus and the building of the Temple; and nearly corresponded to the time from the rebuilding of Jerusalem, after the Captivity, to the Death of

The entrance into the Promised Land, and the building of the Temple, were earnests and figures of the entrance opened into Heaven, and of the building up of the Christian Church, by the Sacrifice of Christ on the Cross; and each of these three Events was preceded by some great national Mercy at a distance of about 450 years.

A few more words on the reading of this passage;

One of the characteristics of a modern school of Biblical Criticism, is its inordinate love of discovering discrepancies in

Holy Scripture;
This is remarkably exemplified in some recent expositions of this passage;

The reading of the three principal Uncial MSS. removes the discrepancy which is found in the received text between this verse and 1 Kings vi. 1.

Yet, some Critics, who, on other occasions, disparage the received Text, and profess great respect for the authority of the Uncial MSS., here treat the Uncial MSS. with contempt, and affirm that they have been "corrupted, in order to solve the chronological difficulty."

Such an example as this is, however, instructive. to neutralize the evil arising from the supposed "discovery of discrepancies" in Scripture. It suggests the reflection, that those allegations are not made on solid grounds, but proceed from the impulses of an arbitrary caprice, which disparages History and Criticism, and loves to gratify a morbid appetite of scepticism by contradictions invented by itself, and imputed to Holy Writ.

St. Paul's statement agrees with Josephus (Ant. vi. 14. 9), who says that Saul reigned eighteen years before Samuel's death, and twenty after it. 25. ἐπλήρου] was fulfilling: in the execution of his mission, as the πρόδρομος or forerunner of Christ.

29. 1θηκαν els μνημεΐον] they laid Him in a tomb. Because the Jews delivered Christ to Pilate, they are represented as the Authors of His Death and Burial, although they did not transact either the one or the other with their own hands.

As far as His Death and Burial were acts of enmity towards Him, they are accounted the agents, as Judas, who only gave occasion to the purchase of the Field of Blood, is called the purchaser of it. Acts i. 18. See note there.

The reason of this seems to be, that Almighty God, Whose Word Holy Scripture is, traces human actions back through the indirect processes of intermediate agency, and lays the responsibility of them at the door of the original promoters.

On the other hand, as far as Christ's Death was a work of Love, it is ascribed to God and Christ (Matt. xx. 28. Rom. viii. 32. Gal. i. 4. 1 Tim. ii. 6); and God and Christ are blessed for that work which caused the rejection of the Jews; just as Joseph of Arimathæa and Nicodemus are mentioned honourably in Scripture (John xix. 38) for performing the work of His Burial, which is here ascribed, not without censure, to the Jews.

Thus even the worst actions of man are overruled for good, and the enmity of Satan is made an occasion for the triumph of the love of God.

32. $\hat{\eta}\mu\hat{\omega}\nu$] of us: Elz. $\hat{\eta}\mu\hat{\omega}$, which appears to have little MS. authority: $\hat{\eta}\mu\hat{\omega}\nu$ is in A, B, C*, D, and is supported by Vulg. and other versions. The sense is,—He has fulfilled them to the children of ourselves; and much more to us; to us and our posterity. Cp. ii. 39. St. Paul loves to identify himself with his hearers.

33. ψαλμφ τφ δευτέρφ] in the Second Pealm. Psalm ii. 7. Some, with Cod. D, Origen, and Hilary, read τῷ πρώτφ. What is now the Second Psalm, originally formed one with the First, or rather the First Psalm was the Procemium to the Psalter. See Michaelis and Rosenmüller here.

(1) Thou art My Son from Eternity (Chrys., Cyril).

I have begotten Thee to-day, in a double respect, (1) At thy Incarnation (see S. Cyril, in an excellent Scholium, Caten. p. 224).

(2) At thy Resurrection from the dead; on which St. Paul here specially dwells, as in Heb. i. 5; and to which the Psalmist specially refers, as appears from the fact that the Mediatorial Kingdom of Christ, which he is there describing, is consequent Kingdom of Christ, which he is there describing, is consequent on, and due to, Christ's obedience and sufferings, and Resurrection from the dead (see above on Matt. xxviii. 18). And it was true, in an emphatic sense, that, at the Resurrection, God said σήμερον γεγέννηκά Σε, for Christ is πρωτότοκος τῶν νεκρῶν, the first-begotten of the dead (Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5). See above, Acts ii. 24. "The Resurrection of Jesus," says Lightfoot, "was the Dawn of the new world, the Morning of the New Creation." See above on John xvi. 21 and Acts ii. 24.

Here, in this first Sermon, which St. Paul is recorded to have preached in a Jewish Synagogue, we have the germ of his two Epistles to the Galatians and Romans, concerning the great doctrine of Justification; an internal evidence of genuineness and veracity. These two verses contain the sum of the Gospel, as distinguished from the Law. Hammond in Rom. iii., note B.

It is observable also that St. Paul's address appears to be formed on the same model as St. Stephen's-another proof of its influence on him, and of the truth of the history. See above, chap. vii. 58.

But it is probable that Disa is a radical word (see Pococke, in Not. Miscell. in Porta Mosis, p. 29), signifying unjust or insolent. Hence the Version of the LXX, καταφρονηταl, which is confirmed by the Syriac (see Rosenmüller). It is not very likely, and ought not to be taken for granted, that so common a word as D'is has been mistaken by the transcriber:

 παρεκάλουν] Elz. adds τὰ ἔθνη, which is also a gloss; and is not found in A, B, C, D, E.
 This is important. The ἔθνη, Heathens, were not attendants at the synagogue, and it is not till v. 46, after two offers of the Gospel to the Jews, that the Apostle turns to the Gentiles.

το μεταξύ σ.] the following Sabbath - το εσόμενον-(Theophyl.), not, as some say, the intervening week. Paul showed his wisdom and charity toward the Jews by preaching on their Sabbath. Ammonius also here interprets το μεταξύ by το ἐσόμενον. Cp. v. 44, and μεταξύ is thus used for the "following" by Josephus, B. J. v. 4. 2; c. Apion. i. 21.

43. ἔπειθον προσμένειν] they were persuading them to cleave to the grace of God. See above on xi. 23; xiv. 22. Elz. has ἐπιμένειν, but A, B, C, D, E have προσμένειν.

Είτ. has έρχομένφ, but έρχόμενος seems to be more applicable to what is still future, or is expected to come, and not past. See xviii. 21, την έορτην την έρχομένην. Josephus has τῆ ἐρχομένη, for the next day, Ant. vi. 11. 9. (Grinfield.)

48. και επίστευσαν δσοι ήσαν τεταγμένοι els (ωήν αιώνων) and as many as were ordered, i.e. were set in order (by God's grace, and by His Word preached by St. Paul, and by their own will concurring therewith, see v. 43), to eternal life, believed, made profession of their faith, in the Gospel.

These words are rendered in the Authorized Version, "as many as were ordained to eternal life believed;"

The words τεταγμένοι ήσαν are happily chosen, because they have a passive and also a middle sense; and represent the twofold operation of divine grace on the heart, and also the concurrence of the human will; both of which are requisite to Faith, and

The Jews had rejected the offers of the Gospel made by St. Paul, see vv. 45, 46; they were thrusting the word away from themselves, ἀπωθοῦντο τὸν λόγον. They, on their side, were unruly and obstinate; they were ἀποτεταγμένοι τῆ ζωή.

But, on the other hand, the Gentiles rejoiced, and glorified the word of the Lord; they had been τεταγμένοι, set in order, to life eternal by God, working by the preaching of St. Paul, and disposing them to receive the Word preached; and they readily complied with the divine will, word, and work; they obeyed St. Paul's preaching, and, like good soldiers of God, being mustered by Him. set themselves also in order to march onward, in the way that leadeth to eternal life, ἦσαν τεταγμένοι εἰς ζώὴν aἰώνιον (see Mede's Works, p. 21, Book i. As many as had done this, επίστευσαν; that is, they boldly and nobly, and in spite of the rage and blasphemy of the Jews (v. 45), and the persecution which they stirred up against Paul and Barnabas, whom they expelled out of their coasts (v. 50), made public profession of their faith, and were received by baptism into the Church.

This Exposition is confirmed by the authority of ancient Greek writers. See Caten. p. 230, where τεταγμένοι is explained by els τοῦτο τὸ τάγμα ἐλθόντες.

This word ἐπίστευσαν, as in numerous other places of the Acts, and the other books of the N. T., means, they made a public profession of faith; they joined the number of the πιστοί puote projession by joint in the joint christo, et aggregati sunt Ecclesiæ." See what follows immediately here, ch. xiv. 1, x έγένετο αὐτοὺς λαλῆσαι ώστε πιστεῦσαι πολύ πλ $\hat{\eta}$ θος, who are there distinguished from of ἀπειθοῦντες Ἰουδαίοι. See also Titus iii. 8, where of πεπιστευκότες τῷ Θεῷ means those who have made public profession of Christianity;

The word enforcement brings out clearly the doctrine that it is requisite for all-who have been called by God, and would set themselves in the way to eternal life-not only to believe, but also to profess openly, the true faith, in the public communion of the Visible Church; and that this is the only way to life eternal.

See Matt. x. 32. Rom. x. 10.

The Vulgate has "quotquot erant præordinati" here, whence the English Version, "as many as were ordained." In like manner in the cognate text, ii. 47, τους σωζομένους, the Vulgate has "qui salvi fierent," whence the English Version, "such as should be saved;"

It would be interesting to inquire, What influence these renderings in the Vulgate Version had on the minds of some, like St. Augustine and his followers in the Western Church, in treating the great questions of Free-Will, Election, Reprobation, and Final Perseverance?

What, also, was the result of that influence on the minds of some writers of the Reformed Churches, who rejected the authority of Rome, which almost canonized that Version; and yet in these two important texts (Acts ii. 47; xiii. 48) were swayed away by it from the sense of the Original?

The tendency of the Eastern Fathers, who read the original Greek, was in a different direction from that of the Western School; and Calvinism can receive no support from these two texts as they stand in the original words of Inspiration, and as they were expounded by the primitive Church.

11. Αυκαονίστί] in the Lycaonian tongue. An Assyrian dia-et. (Jablonsky, "de linguâ Lycaoniâ.") lect. (Jablonsky, "de linguâ Lycaoniâ.")

It has been argued by some, that St. Paul could not have understood this language, or he would have made his remonstrance to the people on hearing these words, and before the priest brought out the victims to sacrifice. And thence it has been inferred, that St. Paul did not possess the power of speaking in the tongues of foreign nations, to whom he was sent. The words of Chrysostom on this passage have been cited in support of this assertion. S. Chrys. is answering the question why the Apostles did not interfere before, to check the adoration of the Lycaonians; and he says, οὐκ ἢν οὐδέπω δῆλον τῆ γὰρ οἰκεία φωνῆ ἐφθέγγοντο· διὰ τοῦτο οὐδὲν αὐτοῖς ἔλεγον, ἐπειδὴ δὲ εἶδον τὰ στέμματα, τότε ἐξελθόντες κ.τ.λ., i. e. the design of the populace was not yet manifest, for they were speaking in their own tongue, and therefore the Apostles said nothing to them (for such—notwithstanding the objections of some learned persons—seems to be S. Chrysostom's meaning); but when they saw the garlands, then they went forth and expostulated with them. It may be, that the gift of understanding and speaking foreign languages was not always present with the Apostles; it may have been, and probably was, modified according to various circumstances of time and place. But it is certain, that in Chrysostom's opinion St. Paul was able to understand and speak in various foreign languages, which he had never learnt; as may be seen in that Father's Thirty-fifth Homily on the First Epistle to the Corinthians, ch. xiv. (Chrys., Opera, tom. x. pp. 320-327), where he speaks of the gift as bestowed for the preaching of the Gospel to foreign nations, τίνος ένεκεν έλαβον αὐτό (τό τῶν γλωσσῶν χάρισμα) οἱ ἀπόστολοι; ἐπειδἡ πανταχοῦ διέρχεσθαι ἔμελλον. See also his words above, Acts ii. 4. And it is observable, that in that Homily (p. 327) Chrysostom refers to St. Paul's conduct here at Lystra, without any intimation that it suggested any qualification of his statement, and of that of the Apostle himself in that chapter, v. 18, "I speak with tongues (i. e. as Chrys. interprets it, in foreign languages) more than they all."

It seems most probable that St. Paul understood what the Lycaonians said:

St. Luke understood the speech of these Lycaonians; for he tells us what the words were, and their meaning. And if St. Luke understood it, why not also St. Paul? Beside, in v. 14 it is not said ἰδόντες, but ἀκούσαντες. The multitude spoke in their own Lycaonian tongue, and it is not probable that they knew any other. And St. Paul addressed the multitude (see v. 14); he therefore understood the Lycaonian tongue. The same Divine Power which gave effect to his words, "Stand upright on thy feet" (v. 10), enabled him to speak them in the tongue understood by him to whom he spoke, and who "listened to his words" (v. 9); and if understood by him, they were understood by the crowd also, who therefore were ready to deify the speaker.

St. Paul had good reason to wait till the Priest brought forth his victims, and would have done sacrifice; because he had thus a more visible and palpable argument for his subsequent appeal in v. 15, where he says, "We preach to you to turn from these vanities to the living God." Every one must feel how much the presence of the oxen and the garlands, and the priest and his apparatus for sacrifice on the altar in front of the Temple, add to the beauty of Raffaelle's Cartoon, and to the force of the Apostle's eloquence.

It has indeed been said by many in recent times, that the power of speaking in various foreign languages was not possessed by the Apostles, and therefore could not have been exercised by them in preaching the Gospel; and that there is no trace of such exercise of it in the Acts of the Apostles.

Surely there is such a trace in the narrative before us, and another similar trace in ch. xxviii. 4. But perhaps the most striking evidence of their power of speaking foreign languages is to be found in the silence of St. Luke as to any thing like previous study or preparation on the part of St. Paul or any of the Apostles, before they set out on their missionary journeys, or as to any difficulty or hindrance experienced by St. Paul or any of the Apostles, from inability to speak the language of foreign countries, in their execution of the commission they had received from Christ to "go and teach all Nations."

In the history of modern Missions, we see learned and accomplished men sent forth to preach the Gospel in foreign parts, and spending years in acquiring the languages of the countries to which they are sent. For example, a Bishop of New Zealand employs his six months' voyage to his diocese, in learning the dialects of the Pacific.

But what do we hear like this in the Acts of the Apostles? We never see or hear of any of the Apostles sitting down to learn a foreign language; and yet they have a Divine commission to go and preach to all nations. We see unlearned and ignorant Galilæans standing up at once and addressing vast crowds in large cities with Divine eloquence, and great multitudes are converted by them.

We see St. Paul sent forth from Antioch as an Apostle to the Gentiles, and soon we hear him speak to the native tribes of Pisidia, Lycaonia, and Malta, and find him travelling to Illyricum and meditating a journey to Spain. We hear him say that he is a "debtor to Greeks and Barbarians,"—that is, to all (Rom. i. 14),—to preach to all; but we never see him pause for a moment in his course, to learn any foreign language, or ever impeded by the want of it.

On this subject see further above, ii. 4, and xiii. 15, and below, xxviii. 2-4.

St. Luke did not state that they possessed and exercised the gift, because the fact is clear from his narrative. S. Jerome well says (ad Hedib. vol. iv. p. 178), "Acceperunt Apostoli donationum genera, et quod magis necessarium erat, diversitatem linguarum omnium gentium, ut annuntiaturi Christum nullo indi-gerent interprete." He then refers to the speaking of St. Paul in the Lycaonian tongue, as described in this chapter, and says, "in Lycaoniâ quum audissent Paulum et Barnabam loqui linguis suis, deos in homines conversos esse credebant."

The teaching of the Church of England on this subject is clear from her Proper Preface for Whitsunday. See above on ii. 4.

— oί θεοὶ ὁμοιωθέντες] the gods in the likeness of men came down to us: and (v. 12) they were calling Barnabas Zeus, and Paul Hermes; for he was the chief speaker. See Homer, Odyss. xvii. 484. Hesiod, Opp. et D. 247. Catull. lxv. 384. Zeus or Jupiter is often associated with Hermes or Mercurius in mythological accounts of divine apparitions. See Plautus,

"In faciem versus Amphitryonis Jupiter, Dum bellum gereret cum Telebois hostibus, Alcmenam uxorem cepit usurariam; Mercurius formam Sosiæ servi gerit

Ovid, Met. viii. 626:

Absentis.'

"Jupiter huc, specie mortali, cumque Parente Venit Atlantiades positis caducifer alis.'

Fastt. v. 495:

"Jupiter et lato qui regnat in æquore frater Carpebant socias Mercuriusque vias.'

The scene of the tale in which Jupiter is represented as coming down with Mercurius to visit the abodes of men, and as entertained by Baucis and Philemon, and which is so well told by Ovid, Metamorphoses viii. 625-724, and so happily versified by Dryden, Works, iii. pp. 396-399, is laid in a country of which Lycaonia was a district :

" Here Jove with Hermes came, but in disguise Of mortal men concealed their deities."

Barnabas was compared to Jupiter from the grave dignity of his appearance (Chrys.), particularly as compared with St. Paul, who, perhaps, was younger than Barnabas, and his stature and bodily presence less majestic (see 2 Cor. x. 1; xii. 3-9. 1 Cor. ii. 3. Nicephor. H. E. ii. 37); though, as Meyer well observes, the comparison of St. Paul to Mercury, who is always represented as "florens agilisque juventâ," would seem to contradict the apocryphal portraiture of the Apostle derived from the Acts of Paul and Thecla, according to which he was μικρός τῷ μεγέθει, ψιλός την κεφαλήν, άγκύλος ταις κνήμαις.

Hermes, or Mercurius, was the messenger of Olympus; the patron of eloquence, &c. See Misterlitch and others on Horat.

Tertullian says, de Coronâ Mil. 10, "Ipsæ hostiæ, et aræ, ipsi ministri et sacerdotes coronantur."

- τουs πυλώνας] the large gates,-probably valvæ, foldingdoors, -of the court-yard (atrium) of the house in which Paul and

Barnabas were. It seems, that after Paul had wrought the miracle on the lame man, he retired from the public admiration of the crowd into a house, as our Lord often did when He had wrought miracles. Hence the words ακούσαντες (not ίδόντες) and εξεπήδησαν in v. 14. 14. ἀκούσαντες] when they heard. See Athanas. ad Gentes 35. 1. Acoustics of the first point of contact of Christianity with Idolatry, in Holy Scripture. And St. Paul's speech is the first Christian "Apologia ad Gentes," and is the groundwork and model of all succeeding ones in the writings of Justin, Theophilus, Tertullian, Minucius, Arnobius, Clemens Alexandrinus, and other Christian Apologists.

— οἱ ἀπόστολοι Βαρνάβαs καὶ Παῦλοs] the Apostles, Barnabas and Paul. Observe the accuracy of the historian's language.
 They are never called Apostles till now, after their ordination at Antioch. See above on xiii. 2.

16. παρφχημέναις This form, as well as παρφχηκότα, is used by S. Hippolytus, Philosophumen. p. 337, and de Antichristo, § 2. 17. καίτοιγε] and yet. See xvii. 27. 'Αγαθουργών, conferring benefits. So A, B, C.—Elz. has ἀγαθοποιών. The former reading seems preferable, as bringing out more clearly the truth, that God was not only Maker of what is good, but was also their εὐεργέτης or Benefactor.

ἡμῶν-ἡμῶν] to us-of us. Some Editors read ὑμῶν, to you, and budy, of you, from D, E, G, and a few cursives. But it seems to be more in St. Paul's manner to conciliate his hearers by identifying himself with them. The blessings of Providence extend to all mankind; and the Apostle, as one of the universal family, was a partaker in them, and is thankful for them. In his comprehensive largeness of heart he owns every one as a brother. His feeling is,

" Homo sum, humani nihil a me alienum puto."

- δετούς-καιρούς] showers-seasons. Therefore the elements and Seasons are like God's Apostles and Evangelists in the natural world, always preaching His love, wisdom, and power. And so οὐκ ἀμάρτυρον ἐαυτὸν ἀφῆκεν. Cp. Acts xxvii. 27. Therefore they who fell away to Idolatry, or to Atheism, are without excuse. Rom. i. 20.

19. λιθάσαντες τον Παῦλον] having stoned Paul; a punishment for the part he took in the stoning of Stephen, vii. 58;

viii. 1. (Woltzog.)

20. avaorás] having risen up, after being stoned. 2 Cor. xi. 25, ἄπαξ ἐλιθάσθην, and cp. 2 Tim. iii. 11, one of the most marvellous of all his deliverances; after being stoned by his enemies, and dragged by them out of the city, and left for dead, he arises, and on the morrow goes forth to Derbe—perhaps on foot—a journey of some hours.

There must have been something strange and perplexing to his converts, that a person endued with such marvellous powers in action, as St. Paul had just shown at Lystra, should be subject to such severe suffering. His afflictions, combined with his mira-cles, might disappoint and stagger them. How natural and needful therefore was it, that soon after these wonderful events he should preach on the topic mentioned in v. 22, that "through much tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of God!'

23. χειροτονήσαντες—πρεσβυτέρους] Cp. 2 Tim. i. 6. Paul and Barnabas had the episcopal dignity, and therefore ordained not only deacons, but priests. Ammonius, in Caten. p. 240. But it has been questioned, whether the word χειροτονία (as well as χειροθεσία) signified Ordination in the Apostolic age.

Its primary signification is election (properly by show of hands), and in this sense the verb χειροτονέω seems to be used in 2 Cor. viii. 19; and it is not used in any other passages except that and the present, in the N. T.

But the word προχειροτονείν is used in Acts x. 41, and is applied to God Himself, and (as Valck. observes, p. 474) means to pre-ordain, or appoint by choice.

The substantive xespotovia never occurs in the New Test. The passages where Xeipororew occurs in the Apostolic Fathers, do not throw much light on the question. See Ignat. Phil. 10, χειροτονήσαι θεοπρεσβότην, Polyc. 7. They appear to suppose election on the part of the people; whether they do not also suppose ordination by laying on of hands is not certain. sition of hands both χειροτονία and χειροθεσία, as may be seen in the Canons of the Council of Nice (c. 19) and Chalcedon (c. 15).

"Yet sometimes these words are distinguished, as by the author of the Constitutions, where he says, πρεσβύτερος χειροθετεί, οὐ χειροτονεί, a presbyter gives imposition of hands, but does not ordain. . . . Neither does χειροτονία always signify Ordination in ancient writers, though it does most commonly so, as Fronto Ducœus (in Chrysost. hom. 1, ad pop. Antioch. p. 1) and other learned persons have showed."

The following are the arguments in favour of assigning the sense of Ordination to χειροτονήσαντες—not however as necessarily here implying the laying on of hands.

(1) That the nominative case agreeing with that participle is

Paul and Barnabas.

(2) That Ordination was performed by Paul (see 2 Tim. i. 6), and was to be performed by Timothy, the Bishop of Ephesus

(see 1 Tim. v. 22).

(3) That χειροτονήσαντες was generally understood in this sense by Ancient Authors, cp. S. Jerome in Isa. lviii. Theodoret H. E. i. 9. S. Jerome, I. c. says, "Plerique nostrorum $\chi \epsilon \iota \rho \circ \tau o \nu l a \nu$, id est ordinationem clericorum, quæ non solùm ad imprecationem vocis, sed ad impositionem impletur manûs,—sic intelligunt, ut assumant testimonium Pauli, Manus citò nemini imposueris." 1 Tim. v. 22. And Chrys. says (in Act. vi. 7), "This is χειροτονία—viz. the hand is laid on the head; and thus God works. His hand touches the head τοῦ χειροτονουμένου, if χειροτονία is rightly administered."

(4) The Ancient Versions of this passage authorize this sense. Thus Vulg. has "cùm constituissent presbyteros." And Valck., p. 474, "Seniores in Ecclesiå constituere, est χειροτονείν πρεσβυτέρουs." Cf. 2 Cor. viii. 19.

— κατ' ἐκκλησίαν] They ordained several Presbyters to each Church; but we hear of only one chief Spiritual Pastor of Crete or of Ephesus; and only of one Angel of the several Apocalyptic Churches (Rev. ii. 1—18; iii. 1—14).

— πρεσβυτέρουs] This is the first mention in the Acts of the Ordination of Presbyters; but there were Presbyters before this. See xi. 30; and cp. xv. 2. 4. 6. 22.

25. Πέργη] Perga. See xiii. 13.

- 'Αττάλειαν] Attaleia, on the coast of Pamphylia, at the mouth of the river Catarrhactes; built by Attalus Philadelphus, King of Pergamus, in a convenient position for commanding the trade of Syria or Egypt. Howson, i. p. 242.

26. 'Αντιόχειαν, δθεν] Antioch—next after Jerusalem, the centre of Christianity—especially of Gentile Christianity. See above, xiii. 2, 3; xv. 2.

27. ἥνοιξε-θύραν] opened the door by the Keys of the Christian Ministry—a reference to our Lord's promise of the Keys, particularly to St. Peter (Matt. xvi. 19), by whom first Our Lord opened the door of the Church to Jews and Gentiles.

But we see here that this "power of the Keys," and of opening the door of the Church is ascribed to others also. Cp. Col.

CH. XV. 1. καί τινες—σωθηναι] And certain persons came down from Judæa (to Antioch) and were teaching the brethren, that unless ye be circumcised according to the custom of Moses, ye cannot be saved. The assertors of these propositions were Pharisees who had embraced the Gospel, see v. 5. According to Epiphanius and others, the leader of these was Cerinthus, who excited the faithful against Peter (Acts xii. 17) for baptizing Cornelius and the Gentiles, and against Paul for not circumcising Titus (Gal. ii. 3). See Epiphan. hær. 28 and 30, pp. 111—114, Philastrius, de hær. 36. S. Aug. de hær. in v.; and S. Jerome, Epist. 89. Theodoret, hær. ii. 3. With Cerinthus was associated Ebion, who held the same tenets with regard to the ceremonial law. See Epiphan. hær. 30, and A Lapide here, and Tillemont, Mémoires ii. p. 25.

A great part of this Chapter is quoted by S. Irenœus, iii. 14.

2. $\tau\hat{\phi}$ $\Pi\alpha\dot{\phi}\lambda\dot{\phi}$ $\kappa\alpha\dot{\phi}$ $\tau\hat{\phi}$ $B\alpha\rho\dot{\phi}\beta\dot{\phi}$] Paul and Barnabas, and Titus also was with them, for there is little doubt that this is the visit of which St. Paul speaks, in his Epistle to the Galatians, ii. 1—10. See Irenœus, iii. 13, and Bede, and Bp. Pearson here, p. 379, "fourteen years after St. Paul's conversion." Cp. Kitto, pp. 299-305, and Meyer, and see the notes below on Gal. ii. 1-3; and above, Chronol. Table, pp. 24. 26.

- πρός τους αποστόλους και πρεσβυτέρους] to the Apostles and Presbyters. This expression is repeated four times in this chapter (vv. 4. 6. 22, 23. See also xvi. 4). It marks a distinction between the Apostles and Presbyters or Elders, and a superiority of order in the former. Ammonius.

We may also observe the frequent occurrence of ἀδελφοί, brethren, in this chapter—denoting the general body or $\pi\lambda\hat{\eta}\theta$ os (v.~12) of the Christian Laity. See vv.~1.~3.~7.~13.~22,~23.~32,33. 36. 40. And thus we have presented to us a view of the primitive organization of the Church for settling controversies,

1. of Απόστολοι, the Apostles with a "vox delibe2. of Πρεσβύτεροι, the Presbyters rativa."
3. of Αδελφοι, the Brethren, or the Laity, assisting at the deliberations (see v. 7. 11), and giving force to the decree of the Council by recention of it. Council by reception of it.

On this latter point, see further on v. 23.

This Council of Jerusalem is the model of all succeeding ones, except so far as their circumstances may have been modified by the renunciation of heathenism on the part of the Governing Power of a Country, and by its reception into the Christian Church. See Bp. Andrewes on the Authority of Christian Princes in summoning Councils, Serm. vii. vol. v. pp. 156-168; also Hooker, viii. 5; and the Expositors of the XXIst Article.

6. συνήχθησαν οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι] the Apostles and the Presbyters were gathered together.

The first Council of the Christian Church.

The Convention of the Disciples (Acts i. 15) for the election of an Apostle, and the assembly for the appointment of Deacons (Acts vi. 11) are reckoned by some as Councils (e. g. by Cabassutius, de Conciliis, cap. i. ed. Lovan. 1776); and some add the Assembly at Miletus, Acts xx. 17: but these differ much from this Synod at Jerusalem.

It was a maxim of the Ancient Church "to do nothing without the Bishop"—μηδὲν ἄνευ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου πράσσειν (Ignat. ad Trall. 2). And (as Grotius observes) at this Council, the Apostles, although they had a sufficiency of right and of divine gifts in themselves, yet have left a lesson to Bishops, to do nothing without their Presbyters.

For a Summary of the purport and acts of this Council of usalem, see Hooker, 11. Al.

- iδείν] to see; "ut cognoscerent;" the Hebr. " (yada) is rendered by ίδείν in LXX (see Lev. xxiii. 43. Deut. iii. often rendered by iδεûν in LXX (see Lev. xxiii. 43. Deut. iii. 19; xxxiv. 6), and from that Hebrew root, the words είδω, είδημι, and video, seem to be derived.

7. Hétpos Peter; he rises first to make his defence, having been the first object of attack. See on v. 1. The summoning of this Council, and the part taken in it by St. Peter, seem to present a strong argument against the doctrine of his supremacy; and much more against that of the supremacy of the Bishops of Rome, who profess to be his successors. If St. Peter had been Supreme Head of the Church, and if his decrees were absolute and infallible, there was no need of this appeal from Antioch (which Romish Divines affirm to have been St. Peter's see) to Jerusalem. There was no occasion for the assembling of a Council of Apostles and Presbyters there. If St. Peter had been, what every one of his so-called successors professes to be, by virtue of their alleged succession from St. Peter-Supreme and Infallible Head of the Church of Christ upon earth; then the appeal would have been to St. Peter himself; and he would not have attended the Council, to make his defence before it. And the decree of the Council would not have We should have had a Papal brief, and not been framed as it is. a Synodical decree.

The Holy Spirit appears to have taught the Church by this history, that in doubtful and controverted matters the appeal is not to any single Buhop, even though he be an Apostle, but to a Council of the Church; that is to say, to the Holy Ghost Himself, Whose presence and guidance have been promised by Christ to the Church, and may be rightly expected by her, when in imitation of ancient Councils, who placed the Volume of the Gospels on a royal throne in the midst of the Conclave, she prays for His direction, and regulates her deliberations, as St. James here teaches her to do, vv. 16-19, by His Holy Word.

And whatever has been decreed by Councils of the Church, duly constituted, and conducting their deliberations on this principle,-and whatever, having been so decreed by Councils, has been received by the consentient voice of the faithful, Clergy and Laity, in Christendom, which is the Body of Christ, and has taken root in its usage, that may be safely accepted as a true exposition of Christian doctrine.

It has been indeed alleged, that such principles as these impute Infallibility to a given body of men, e.g. to a Council; and that these principles are therefore liable, though not in the same degree, to the objections urged against the doctrine of Papal Supremacy. But this allegation is erroneous. It confounds two things which ought to be kept distinct, viz. à posteriori Inerrancy, and à priori Infallibility. The Romish theory asserts that the Pope is infallible, -i. e. that he cannot err in any thing that he may decree ex cathedra, as Pope; whether or no, what he has decreed, may be subsequently received by the consent of Christendom. But no such authority is rightly claimed for a Council. It cannot be said à priori, that a Council, or any given body of men, however wise or holy, who meet together, may not err. But it may be justly asserted, that when Councils are duly constituted and convened, and ground their deliberations on Holy Scripture; and when what they decree, is à posteriori received by the faithful, and becomes part of the Code of the Church, then what is so determined and received, is not erroneous, but true.

- ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων] from primitive days,—the beginning of the Gospel. See xi. 15, ἐν ἀρχῆ, at the beginning, or the Day of Pentecost. xxi. 16, ἀρχαίφ μαθητῆ. Phil. iv. 15, ἐν ἀρχῆ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου. For the fact of St. Peter's selection, see Acts x. 20; xi. 12-15.

St. Peter refers to Christ's promise to him, that he should open the kingdom of heaven with the keys of the Word and Sacraments. Matt. xvi. 19.

— πιστεῦσαι] To be engrafted in His Church on their public profession of faith in Christ. See on xiii. 48. 8. ἐμαρτύρησεν αὐτοῖs] He bare witness to them by the visible descent of the Holy Spirit upon them, "as upon us at the beginning," Acts x. 44, 45; xi. 15. 10. $\tau l \pi \epsilon \iota \rho d \zeta \epsilon \tau \epsilon \tau \delta \nu \Theta \epsilon \delta \nu$] Why do ye tempt God, Who has already declared His pleasure in this matter, by His vision to me and to Cornelius, and by the descent of the Holy Ghost on him, and on other Gentiles evangelized by my ministry? Acts x. 44; xi. 15. Why do ye tempt Him, by controverting what He has decided, and by resisting His will?

— ζυγόν] The yoke of the Ceremonial Law; instead of the χρηστὸς ζυγὸς, 'of Christ.' Matt. xi. 29, 30.

— οὐκ ἰσχύσαμεν] had not strength to bear—not a complaint of divine severity, but a confession of human infirmity. Cp. Phil.

11. 'Ιησοῦ] Elz. adds Χριστοῦ, which is not in A, B, E, G, H. The hope of salvation (τοῦ σωθῆναι) is expressed emphatically by the word 'Ingov's, or Saviour, standing alone.

13. 'Ιάκωβοs] James. The Bishop of Jerusalem. (Chrys.) It is probable that as such he was President of the Council; and see St. Paul's words, Gal. ii. 9, concerning this assemblage, where he places James first.

(1) The first argument (for the reception of the Gentiles on equal terms with Jews, and without the imposition of the ceremonial law, now fulfilled in Christ) was the Nature of the Law itself, which even they to whom it was given were too weak to bear (v. 10).

(2) The second was from God's choice, that the Gentiles should be evangelized by Peter (vv. 7, 8).

(3) The third is from the visible signs of God's approval, manifested in the miracles wrought by Him, through the instrumentality of Barnabas and Paul, in preaching to the Gentiles.

(4) The fourth argument, stated by James, vv. 16-19, is from ancient prophecy, foretelling the restoration of the house of David in the evangelization of the world: and to this St. James adds.-

ακούσατέ μου. 14 k Συμεων εξηγήσατο, καθως πρώτον ὁ Θεὸς ἐπεσκέψατο λαβείν k2 Pet. 1.1. έξ έθνων λαὸν τῷ ὀνόματι αύτοῦ. 15 Καὶ τούτω συμφωνοῦσιν οἱ λόγοι των προφητών, καθώς γέγραπται, 16 1 Μετά ταῦτα ἀναστρέψω καὶ ἀνοικοδομήσω 1 Amos 9. 11, 12. την σκηνην Δαυΐδ την πεπτωκυίαν, καὶ τὰ κατεσκαμμένα αὐτης ανοικοδομήσω, καὶ ἀνορθώσω αὐτὴν, 17 ὅπως ἃν ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸν Κύριον, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, ἐφ' οθς έπικέκληται τὸ ὄνομά μου ἐπ' αὐτούς, λέγει Κύριος ὁ ποιῶν ταῦτα. 18 Γνωστὸν ἀπ' αἰῶνός ἐστι τῷ Θεῷ τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ. 19 Διὸ ἐγὰ κρίνω μὴ παρ- $^{\rm m\ ver.\ 29.}_{\rm Gen.\ 9.\ 4.}$ ενοχλεῖν τοῖς ἀπὸ τῶν ἐθνῶν ἐπιστρέφουσιν ἐπὶ τὸν Θεόν· $^{20\ {

(5) A fifth, the crowning argument of all, derived from God's own attributes, His universal Knowledge, and Care, and everlasting Love, for what He has made (τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ, v. 18). And since He is the Maker and Father of the Gentiles, as well as of the Jews, therefore they are objects of His Love even from the

14. Συμεών] Simeon, γίνοψ, i. e. Simon Peter. See 2 Pet. i. 1. James does not say Πέτρος, but uses his original Hebrew name, as supplying an argument à fortiori. Simon, the Apostle of the Circumcision, he who has not changed his name, like Saul the Apostle of the Gentiles, but retains his original Hebrew appellation, although Petros is added to it, he with all his Jewish habits and prepossessions, has shown what God has done by him among the Gentiles. And now hear what your own Hebrew Prophets say to the same effect. He has been a true Simeon, hearing and obeying God; imitate him.

This is the last mention of St. Peter in the Acts of the Apostles. For some notices of his subsequent history, see below, Introduction to his first Epistle, and notes on 1 Pet. v. 13, and 2 Pet. i. 13.

- λαόν] Elz. adds ἐπὶ, which is not in A, C, D, E. The sense is, to take a people for His own Name, from the Gentiles; a saying best illustrated by our Lord's command to His Apostles, to go and baptize all Nations in the One Name of the Triune God.

16. την σκηνήν] = τορ, tugurium, tabernaculum, domum. The word is not palace, but tent, to show the low estate to which the house of David had been reduced, when raised up into the Universal Church by Christ: cf. Isa. liv. 2. The Tabernacle of David is the Church of God, to be raised up in the Seed of David, which is Christ, the Eternal Word, Who pitched His tent in our Nature (John i. 14) in the house of David, and so raised up for ever the tabernacle of our fallen humanity (Ecumen. p. 123 and compare Hengstenberg, Christol. iii. 227), and in Whom all Nations are blessed.

This is a remarkable interpretation of Hebrew Prophecies; an interpretation delivered at Jerusalem itself, by the Apostle St. James, the first Bishop of Jerusalem. And it declares that the true Restoration of the Tabernacle of David is to be found in the reception of the residue of the human family, and in the flowing-in of all Nations, whether Jew or Gentile, into the Church of Christ. Is not this a divine declaration on the true " Restoration of the Jews?"

Amos ix. 12 says, אָמֵען יִירְשׁוּ אָה־שְׁאֵרִית אָרוֹם, ut possideant residuum Edom, et omnes gentes super quas invocatum est nomen Meum in eas, Dominus dixit, which the LXX renders δπως εκζητήσωσιν οί κατάλοιποι των ανθρώπων και πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, ἐφ' οδς ἐπικέκληται τὸ ὄνομά μου ἐπ' αὐτούς, λέγει Κύριος ὁ ποιών

It has been supposed by some that the LXX read DIN for ארום, and ייןשׁר for ייןשׁר, but this supposition is not necessary (see Pococke, Port. Mos. iv. p. 46). The is often the note of the nominative case; and the LXX Version, which is sometimes a Targum or Paraphrase, regards Edom as a general representative of those who were alien from God.

St. James and St. Luke adopt that Version, as not contrary to the mind of the Spirit, and indeed as expressing that mind, declared in numerous other places of Holy Scripture (quoted by Mr. Grinfield), which are almost identical in sense with the words of the LXX. See, for instance, Ps. lxxxvi. 9, πάντα τὰ ἔθνη δσα έποίησας, ήξουσι και προσκυνήσουσι, και δοξάσουσι το όνομά σου. Ps. xxii. 31; cii. 18. Isa. xliii. 7.

17. ἐφ' οὐς—ἐπ' αὐτούς] a Hebraism retained by the LXX, from the original of Amos. Cf. οὖ—αὐτοῦ l Pet. ii. 24. Rev. vii. 2; xiii. 12. Vorst. de Hebr. p. 546. The αὐτοὺς gives an emphasis to the relative,—even upon them. Cp. Winer, p. 134. Vol. I.—Part II.

— ταῦτα] these things. Elz. adds πάντα, all, which is not in A, B, C, D, nor in Irenæus, l. c. The quotation from Amos ends at ταῦτα. And the comment of St. James begins at γνωστόν.

18. γνωστὸν ἀπ' alῶνός ἐστι τῷ Θεῷ τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ] known from eternity to God is His own work. This reading, which is adopted by Lachmann (with the omission of ἐστιν) and by Bornemann, is authorized by A (omitting ἐστιν) and by D, and by Irenœus, iii. 14, who has "Cognitum à sæculo Deo est opus Ejus," and by Vulg., Arm., Syr., omitting τῷ Κυρίφ.

γνωστὰ is the reading of B, C, which omit the rest of the clause. Ε has γνωστὰ ἀπ' αἰῶνός ἐστι τῷ Θεῷ πάντα τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ, which is the reading of Elz.

The emphatic words are γνωστὸν, known, and έργον, work. God is the Maker of all; and He, the common Father of all, knows (i. e. not only foresees, but cares for and loves, יַרַע, novit, dilexit, Gen. xviii. 19. Exod. i. 8; ii. 25; xxxiii. 12. 17. Hos. v. 4, and passim) from the beginning, not only the Jews, but all men; and not only men, but His works generally, i. e. every thing that He has made. His mercy is over all His works from everlasting. He hateth nothing that He hath made. See above,

The argument of St. James is, therefore, The decree that I propose is nothing new, but is based on the foundation of God's eternal Foreknowledge of, and Universal Love to, all His

19. ἐγὰ κρίνω] 'ego censeo;' I give as my sentence. Cp. xvi. 4, δόγματα τὰ κεκριμένα ὑπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων καὶ τῶν πρεσ-βυτέρων, and xxi. 25, κρίναντες μηδὲν τοιοῦτον τηρεῖν, words which show that no single voice of any one Apostle (James, or Peter, or Paul) was predominant over the rest

20. ἀλισγημάτων] A word peculiar to the N. T. and the LXX Version of the Old. See Dan. i. 8. Mal. i. 7. 12, explained by εἰδωλόθυτον Acts xxi. 25. It is derived from ἀλισγέω, which the LXX use for נְאֵל, "redimo sanguine (a remarkable intimation of redemption by the effusion of blood), sanguinem effundo, et sanguine effuso maculare, ideòque contaminare" (Zeph. iii. 1. Isa. lxiii. 3).

The Greek ἀλισγέω appears to be derived from an unused root, ἀλίω, i. q. κυλίω, volvo, to wallow in the βόρβορος or mire of uncleanness, especially in blood. See Valck. here, and cp. κύλισμα βορβόρου, 2 Pet. ii. 22.

On the reason and obligation of the Decree with regard to things offered to idols, see note on πνικτοῦ καὶ αίματος, v. 20.

 τη̂ς πορνείας] fornication. This injunction was rendered necessary by the then condition of the Gentile World. Cp. 1 Thess.
 iv. 5. Eph. iv. 18, 19. A striking proof of moral depravity in what was called an enlightened age.

See Bp. Sanderson's excellent remarks (Serm. vi. ad Populum, § 9, vol. iii. p. 220), where, after showing by examples, into what a state of moral blindness and degradation the Heathen Nations had sunk in that age of intellectual light (a solemn warning to other Nations), in their connivance at this deadly sin, and it may be added, even in their consecration of it by religious rites, of temple, priest, and sacrifice (e.g. at Corinth, Paphos, Cyprus), he proceeds to say, "Out of this consideration, the Apostles in that first Council holden at Jerusalem, thought it needful by Ecclesiastical Canon, among some other indifferent things for the Church's peace, to lay this restraint upon the converted Gantiles that they should abstain from formination. verted Gentiles, that they should abstain from fornication.

"Not, as if fornication were in itself an indifferent thing, as those other things were; or as if those other things were, in themselves, and simply, unlawful, as fornication was. But the Apostles did therefore join fornication and those other indifferent things in the same Canon, because the Gentiles accounted fornication a thing as indifferent as what was most indifferent."

thing as indifferent as what was most indifferent."

καὶ τοῦ πνικτοῦ, καὶ τοῦ αἴματος. 21 " Μωϋσης γὰρ ἐκ γενεῶν ἀρχαίων κατὰ πόλιν τους κηρύσσοντας αυτον έχει, έν ταις συναγωγαίς κατά παν σάββατον άναγινωσκόμενος.

- τοῦ πνικτοῦ, καὶ τοῦ αἵματος] i. e. from blood, whether in the animal strangled (i. e. so that the blood is not allowed to issue from it when killed), or blood poured out from it. τὸ πνικτὸν was regarded as a delicacy by the Gentiles. Cp. Casaubon ad Athen. ii. c. 24.

The foundation of this prohibition is in the command given to Noah (Gen. ix. 4), and renewed in the Law. Lev. iii. 17; vii. 26; xvii. 10; xix. 26. Deut. xii. 16. 23. 1 Sam. xiv. 33; and see the passages from the Rabbis in Lightfoot, ii. 697.

Things which are not unlawful in themselves, but indifferent, may become inexpedient and evil, "per accidens, ratione scan-dali." "Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused" (1 Tim. iv. 4), and "all things are lawful to me," says St. Paul, "but all things are not expedient" (1 Cor. vi. 12; x. 23); and if they are prohibited by lawful authority they are unlawful to me who am subject to that authority.

This was the case, in primitive times, with meats offered to Idols, and with blood; an abstinence from which had been commanded before the Law, by three of the seven precepts given to Noah, as the Jews affirm. See Seder Olam in Selden de Jure Heb. vii. 3, p. 809. Gieseler, Eccles. Hist. § 17, note 7, and § 26, note 6.

This Apostolic decree to abstain from blood was carefully observed for some time after the Apostolic age.

"It was the custom of the Christian Church, almost till the time of S. Augustine, to abstain from eating of blood, in com-pliance with the rule given by the Apostles to the Gentile Converts. Therefore by the most ancient laws of the Church all clergymen were obliged to abstain from it, under pain of degradation. This is evident from the Apostolical Canons (Can. 69), and those of the Council of Gangra (Can. 19), and of Trullo (Can. 67). But this was looked upon by some only as a temporary injunction; so it appears from S. Augustine (c. Faust. xxxii. 13) that in his time it was of no force in the African Church. For he says that in his time few men thought themselves under any obligation to observe it. . . . He that would see more about it may consult Curcellaus, de esu sanguinis, cap. 13." Bingham, xvii. 5. 15. And cp. the authorities in Howson, 262, 3, whence it appears that the Greek Church still maintains the obligation of the Apostolic decree concerning abstinence from blood.

The Apostles thought it expedient to require from the Gentile Christians an abstinence from these things; for divers

(1) Because the eating of things offered to idols (known to be such) was almost unavoidably connected with the worship of See 1 Cor. viii. 10.

(2) Because the eating of things strangled, and blood, would have revolted the Jewish Christians from intercourse with them, and so have been a hindrance to Church-Unity.

(3) Because the Apostles desired to show the Jewish Converts that they had a tender regard for their scruples, especially when grounded on Ante-Levitical Law and Usage; and there was a reasonable hope, that therefore the Jewish Christians, on their side, would be more disposed to comply with the Apostles in not enforcing on the Gentile Christians the Rite of Circumcision and the other ceremonies of the Levitical Law.

On these points, see Augustine (c. Faust. xxxii. 13), and Hooker (Preface, iv. 5 and IV. xi. 5), who says, "The Apostles did not impose upon the Churches of the Gentiles any part of the Jews' ordinances with bond of necessary and perpetual observation (as we all both by doctrine and practice acknowledge), but only in respect of the conveniency and fitness of the present state of the Church, as it then stood."

Again Hooker (Serm. iii. p. 619) says, "A positive law is that which bindeth them that receive it, in such things as might defore have been either done or not done without offence, but not after, during the time it standeth in force. Such were those Church Constitutions concerning strangled and blood. But there is no person whom, nor time wherein, a law natural doth not bind."

On this important question, involving a discussion of the fundamental principles of Law, and of the duty and right of Conscience, see also Bp. Sanderson, Serm. v. ad Pop. iii. p. 160, § 16, and p. 169, "The Apostles in the first Council holden at Jerusalem, laid upon the Churches for a time a restraint from the eating of blood, and things sacrificed to idols and strangled."

It may be noticed here, that the Apostles would not have prohibited the Gentile Churches the eating of blood, in this unqualified manner, if they had believed in a carnal presence of flesh and blood in the Holy Eucharist. Therefore this Decree of the First Council of the Christian Church may be rightly appealed to, as containing a primitive protest against the Romish dogma of Transubstantiation.

21. Μωϋσης γάρ] For Moses, from primitive ages, hath in every city those who preach him, in that he is read in the synagogues every Sabbath-day. We will send by letter these decrees to the every Sabbath day. We will send by letter these decrees to the Gentile Christians, but it is not necessary to transmit them to the Jewish Christians, because they have them already in substance in the Pentateuch, which they hear every Sabbath-day (Chrys.); or, as Cassiodor. expresses it, "sufficere Mosi, quod congo.); or, as classically. Expressed by same the most angle of the same of been sent to the Jewish Christians.

The Jews in all parts of the world have enjoyed the manifold blessings of Divine Revelation, for many ages. The season is now arrived for a communication of equal spiritual benefits to the Gentile World.

This clause may also intimate—that it was necessary to frame and transmit these Decrees to the Gentile Christians, because the Law of Moses is always sounding every where, from ancient times, in the Synagogues; and because the Mosaic Law has therefore, from its venerable antiquity and wide-spread diffusion, great influence, even in heathen countries; and because it could not be expected that the Jewish Christians would communicate, as brethren, with those who set that Law at defiance even in those things which were anterior to that Law, and belonged either to the Patriarchal dispensation, or even to the Natural Law.

Further, by this honourable reference to Moses and the Law, on the part of the Church at Jerusalem-while she was declaring the non-obligation of the ceremonial Law on the Gentile Christians-the Jews and Jewish Christians would be conciliated, and might reasonably infer that there was good reason for the nonexaction of Circumcision from the Gentiles on their reception into the Church. See Chrys.

- κηρύσσοντας-αναγινωσκόμενος] He is preached by being An apostolic statement of the important truth vindicated by Hooker (E. P. V. xix.), that public Reading of Holy Scripture is Preaching.

22. Σίλαν] Silas or Silvanus, a προφήτης (see v. 32), and afterwards the companion of St. Paul (xv. 40; xvi. 19. 25; xvii. 4), and associated with him in the preambles of his Epistles. See 1 Thess. i. 1. 2 Thess. i. 1, and on Phil. i. 1, p. 335. See also 1 Pet. v. 12.

This name is always written Ziλas in the History of the Acts, where the word occurs thirteen times; and Lilouards by St. Paul and St. Peter. On the contractions of proper names, see Winer, Gr. Gr. § 16, p. 93. Examples in the New Test. are 'Απολλώς for -άνιος, 'Αρτεμᾶς for -ίδωρος, Νυμφᾶς for -όδωρος, Ζηνᾶς for -όδωρος, 'Σπαφρᾶς for -όδιτος, Λουκᾶς for Lucanus. Cp. note below, on Titus iii. 13.

- ἄνδρας ἡγουμένους] A strong proof (as Alford well observes) that Silas was not (as some have imagined) the Author of the Acts of the Apostles.

This being the case, and this passage being one which has been made the subject of controversial disputation, I have deemed it best to leave the Text as it stands in the commonly received edition; and to accompany it with a statement of the evidence concerning the retention of the wal oi, so that the reader may form his own judgment on the matter.

The kal is not in D, and the words kal of are not found in A, B, C, nor in the Vulgate and Armenian Versions; nor in Irenœus, iii. 14, nor Origen, c. Cels. p. 396 (see Wetstein and Mill, proleg. 1350). They have therefore not been admitted by Lachmann, Bornemann, and Alford. And this reading, which omits kal oi, seems to be confirmed by internal evidence,-

(1) à priori, Paul and Barnabas are said to go up " to the Aposiles and Elders at Jerusalem (xv. 2) concerning this question."

(2) The "Aposiles and Elders" are said "to have met

(2) The Apostes and Etters are said "to have met together to consider this matter" (xv. 6).

(3) à posteriori, Paul is said to have gone through the Cities, delivering to them to keep the Decrees determined by "the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem" (xvi. 4).

This triple mention of Apostles and Elders, without the addition of any other party, is significant;

It seems to indicate that "the Apostles and Elders" constituted the Council, as far as deliberative voice and definitive sentence were concerned; and therefore the Decree was promulgated in their names.

And this interpretation is confirmed by the subsequent usage of the Christian Church in Synods. See Bingham (ii. 19. 11—13), "It is agreed on all hands by unprejudiced persons, that Presbyters had liberty to sit and deliberate with Bishops in Provincial Councils." See above on v. 6.

And, as Abp. Cranmer says (in Bp. Burnet's History of the Reformation, c. i. 353), "In all the Antient Councils of the Church in matters of Faith and Interpretation of Scripture, no man made definitive subscription but Bishops and Priests, forsomuch as the declaration of the Word of God appertains unto them." See also Hooker, VIII. vi. 8, and VIII. vi. 12, "It cannot in any reason seem otherwise than most fit, that unto Ecclesiastical Persons the care of devising Ecclesiastical Laws be committed.'

So Dr. Field writes; "Our adversaries (the Romanists) say that the Protestants affirm that Laymen ought not only to be present in General Councils, but also to have decisive voices as well as they of the Clergy; and thereupon they charge us with great absurdity."

"It is agreed, that Ministers only have decisive voices in Councils, in sort before expressed." So also Bp. Beveridge (Codex Canonum vindicatus 1678, p. xx), "Laici ad judicium de doctrina aut disciplina Ecclesiastica ferendum nunquam admissi sunt." And so Dr. Field adds (on the Church, v. c. 49. missi sunt." And so Dr. Field adds (on the Church, v. c. 49, p. 646, ed. 1635), "The persons that may be present are of divers sorts; for some there are with authority to teach, define, prescribe, and to direct. Others are there to hear, set forward, and consent unto that which is there done. In the former sort, none but only Ministers of the Word and Sacraments are present in Councils, and they only have deciding and defining voices; but in the latter sort, Laymen also may be present; whereupon we * Ego, N. definiens subscrips; but the Emperor, or any other Lay person, ' Ego, N. consentiens subscripsi.

And this has been the practice from time immemorial in land. See Bp. Kennett's Eccles. Synods, ed. London, 1701, Part i. p. 249, where he says, "By collating the history of all our Saxon Councils, it is easy to discover, that, if the subject of any laws was for the outward peace and temporal government of the Church, such laws were properly ordained by the King and his great Council of Clergy and Laity intermixed, as our Acts of Parliament are still made. But if there was any doctrine to be tried, or any exercise of pure discipline to be reformed, then the Clergy of the great Council departed into a separate Synod; and there being the same men in a different and sole capacity, they acted as proper Judges within the power of the keys. Only when they had thus provided for the state of Religion, they brought their Canons from the Synod back again to the Council, to be ratified by the King with advice of his great men; and so wisely made the Constitutions of the Church to be Laws of the Realm. I cannot imagine that the Saxon National Assemblies were any more mixed Councils than our English Parliaments are. had authority not only in Civil matters, but in all external Church affairs; so have ours. Yet theirs did not meddle with Doctrines or Spiritual Discipline, nor will ours.

"The Norman's Revolution made indeed no change in this The Conqueror in his great councils had his spiritual and his temporal Barons; and they jointly advised him upon all the exigencies of preserving the peace, and advancing the interest of Church and State. But when matters arose that were purely spiritual, then the King allowed a Legate or an Arch-Bishop to meet the other Prelates in a distinct Synod, and there to act as the Church Representative."

These are the principles which regulate the proceedings of the Church of England in her Convocations, where Bishops and Presbyters sit and deliberate as Brethren; but no Canon framed by them has force of law in the Courts of the Realm, unless it is received and ratified by the Crown.

— ἀδελφοῖs] to the brethren. The inculcation of the word brethren in the Preamble of this Decree of the first Council of the Church, and in this Chapter generally (where it occurs no less than eleven times), was probably designed to show, that, in order to settle Church Controversies, Bishops, and Presbyters, and People, should ever remember, that, although there are divers degrees and orders in the Church,—yet all its members are Brethren. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 8. John xx. 17. Acts vii. 26.

— $\chi alp \epsilon w$] greeting; 'salvere.' Used in the N. T. only by St. James, i. 1; perhaps a sign that he had the principal part in framing the decree.

25, 26. σὺν τοῖς ἀγαπητοῖς ἡμῶν Βαρνάβα καὶ Παύλφ, ἀνθρώποις—'Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ] with our beloved Barnabas and Paul, men who have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. A remarkable testimony. The first Christians Jesus Christ. A remarkable testimony. The first Christians were not wont to praise one another in public. But on the present occasion, such an attestation, especially to St. Paul, was seasonable and appropriate. It was a reply to the charges of the Judaizers against him. It was a public declaration on the part of the other Apostles at Jerusalem, that St. Paul's claims to divine revelations, and to an apostolic mission, were true; and that there was no difference of opinion, or disparity in dignity, between him and the Twelve who had "seen the Lord" on earth. Such a declaration was called for. See ix. 26.

28. ἔδοξε τῷ Πνεύματι τῷ άγίφ καὶ ἡμῖν] it seems good to the Holy Ghost and to us; to us inspired by the Holy Ghost, to us His ministers and organs for declaring the truth,—a mode of ex-pression not uncommon in the Old Testament, where we read, "The people believed the Lord and His servant Moses," Exod. xiv. 31. "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," Judges vii. 18. 20. "The people feared the Lord and Samuel," I Sam. xii. 18. (Severus.) Compare the language of St. John, 3rd Epistle, v. 12.

This expression "it seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us" is an Apostolic statement of the true doctrine of Inspiration. The Apostles were inspired by God, but they did not lose their personal identity. The human element was not absorbed into the divine; but it was spiritualized and transfigured by it.

There is also another reason for the addition of the word us here. We,—though Jews by birth and education, and of the Circumcision,—we declare that the Gentiles are not to be circum-

Cised. (Chrys.)

The English Convocation rightly prays, "Concede ut Spiritus Tuus, Qui Concilio olim Apostolico, huic nostro etiam nune insideat." But it cannot be held with Bellarmine (de Concil. ii. c. 2) that Councils of the Church now are entitled to adopt the words of the text in the framing of Canons. See Hooker, VIII. vi. 7. Abp. Laud against Fisher, § 33. Hammond, i. p. 558. Q 2 the end of the sentence. 39. παροξυσμός] a sharp contention. παροξυσμός, οὐκ έχθρά (Œcum.),—i. e. it was only a transitory ebullition of a natural infirmity of temper; "exacerbatio, non odium." On some circumstances, which had probably led to this contention of Paul and Barnabas, see above on xii. 12, and compare Gal. ii. 1-11, for the preparatory history.

It appears that, as is often the case, one contention led to another;

(1) St. Paul had recently resisted St. Peter at Antioch, and had "rebuked him to the face, because he was to be blamed."

As Bede says (on Acts xv.): "His diebus impletum est, quod Apostolus Paulus ait, 'Cum venisset Cephas Antiochiam in faciem ei restiti.'" (Gal. ii. 11.)

(2) St. Paul had opposed St. Barnabas, who had then been led away by St. Peter's example. (Gal. ii. 13.)

(3) That contention was soon followed by another (viz.) with reference to St. Mark, who was drevids to Barnabas.

On the narrative of this contention it may be observed, (1) That in St. Luke we have a faithful annalist, who when writing the history of the Apostles does not disguise their frailties, nor those of a brother Evangelist, St. Mark.

(2) That a religion is true, which is not damaged by a strife of its chief Teachers, but, under God's Providence, is more widely disseminated in consequence of a difference, which, if that religion had been of human origin, would have been very baneful to it. (3) That the Apostles, and other first Preachers of Christianity, were not exempt from human infirmities; and thus the excellency of the power of the Gospel, in the wonderful change, moral, social, and religious, which it has wrought on the world, is seen more clearly to be of God. (2 Cor. iv. 7.)

(4) That the Inspiration of the Apostles and Evangelists, in what they wrote for the instruction of the Church, and in what was received by the Spirit of Christ in the Church, as Canonical Scripture, is displayed more clearly by the fact, that in what they did, they were not always exempt from human frailty, nor were supposed to be so by the Church, which received their writings as

They had their treasure in earthen vessels. (2 Cor. iv. 7.) "The strength of God was made perfect in their weakness.
(2 Cor. xii. 9.) "Paulus severior," says Jerome, "Barnabi (2 Cor. xii. 9.) "Paulus severior," says Jerome, "Barness. clementior; uterque in suo sensu abundat; et tamen dissensio habet aliquid humanæ fragilitatis." Adv. Pelag. lib. ii. p. 522.

Paul may have erred in his contention with Barnabas, as he did err in his pleading before Ananias (Acts xxiii. 3); and both these incidents are recorded by the Holy Spirit writing by St. Luke. But there is no error in what was delivered by the Holy Ghost, through the agency of St. Paul, to the Church, as Canonical Scripture, and has been received by the Body of Christ, the Church Universal, as such; see below on Gal. ii. at end of the chapter.

(5) That we are not to be scandalized or falter in the faith, if Christian Teachers differ among themselves. There is but One Teacher, whose Charity never failed or was disturbed—Christ. "Soli Dei Filio servabatur sine delicto permanere." de Præscr. 3.) Peter was rebuked by Paul (Gal. ii. 11); Paul and Barnabas strove. And if even Apostles sometimes differed, why need we be perplexed by occasional dissensions between other holy men, such as S. Cyprian and S. Cornelius, S. Cyril and Theodoret, S. Jerome and S. Augustine, S. Chrysostom and S. Epiphanius? Rather let the sight of such differences stimulate the fifth and hone of Christians. Let it induce them to resist the faith and hope of Christians. Let it induce them to raise their eyes from the Church militant on earth to the Church glorified in heaven, and from the transitory strifes of Time to the never-ending peace of Eternity.

(6) That the strife of Paul and Barnabas was afterwards healed, and that St. Mark was recovered to the love and esteem We find Mark with St. Paul, when he addressed the Colossians (iv. 10; cp. Philemon 24), to whom he had written concerning him, and to whom he commends him. And perhaps there is something significant in the terms by which he there describes him, "Mark, kinsman to Barnabas;" as if to intimate that Barnabas had acted a kinsman's part in his tenderness to his relative; and to show his love for Barnabas as well as Mark. And at last St. Paul, who once would not take Mark with him because "he had departed from them, and did not go with them to the work," afterwards sent for him to Rome, and desired Timothy to take, and bring him, " for he is profitable to me for the ministry" (2 Tim. iv. 11), and eventually St. Mark preached, and probably died as a Martyr, at Alexandria. Tillemont, ii. 238.

(7) We find also at the close of the Apostolic history, Silas whom St. Paul chose instead of Mark) associated as "the faithful brother" by St. Peter, with St. Mark, who was St. Peter's "son in the faith." See on 1 Pet. v. 13, and Introduction to that Epistle, p. 43.

 (8) As to the parts taken respectively in this παροξυσμός by St. Paul and St. Barnabas, we may adopt the words of Tertul-lian: "Viderint ii, qui de Apostolis judicant; mihi non tam benè est, imò non tam malè est, ut Apostolos committam." Prescr. 24.) Or, as Chrys. says, τους άγίους δβρίζω; μη γένοιτο. Ο Παθλος έξητει το δίκαιον, δ Βαρνάβας το φιλάνθρωπον: and he well adds, πάνυ ωφέλει τον Μάρκον ή μάχη αδτη, το μέν Παύλου φοβερδυ ἐπέστρεφεν αὐτὸν, τοῦ δὲ Βαρνάβα χρηστὸν ἐποίες μηκέτι ἀπολειφθήναι μάχονται μὲν, πρὸς ἐν δὲ τέλος ἀπαντῷ τὸ κέρδος. It pleased the God of Justice and Mercy to bless the efforts of both Paul and Barnabas. And now, all the παροξ-υσμός of human passion has passed away for ever, and all the fruits of justice and of love, of repentance and of zeal, of honesty and of truth, remain, and will never fail. The two brother Apostles, Paul and Barnabas, and the two Evangelists, St. Mark and St. Luke, are united in the joys of Paradise-never to be severed more. So may all differences in the Church cease!

40. Σίλαν] Silas; associated with Paul, in room of Barnabas; and soon after, Timothy also in the room of Mark. See xvi. 1.

Thus the great Head of the Church overrules even the strifes of Christians, and makes them conducive to the spread of Christianity, and to the good of His faithful people.

Another source of comfort and of hope in times of division.

erei] there at Lystra. Some have inferred from Acts xx. 4, that Timothy was of Derbe: but the present text appears to state that his domicile was at Lystra. And St. Paul connects Timothy with Lystra and Iconium (not mentioning Derbe) in 2 Tim. iii. 11. And here Timothy is said to have had a good testimony from the brethren of Lystra and Iconium: Lystra in both passages being placed first. See further on 2 Tim. iii. 11.

- γυναικός 'Ιουδαίας] of a woman who was a Jewess; Eunice. 2 Tim. i. 5.

2. δs εμαρτυρείτο] who was well reported of by the brethren in Lystra and Iconium. Timothy was well reported of by men, and was pointed out to St. Paul by prophecy, 1 Tim. i. 18; and was personally acquainted with St. Paul's doings and sufferings at Iconium and Lystra. See 2 Tim. iii. 11.

3. περιέτεμεν αὐτόν] he circumcised him, not from any supposition of the necessity of Circumcision, at this time, but because nothing profiteth without Charity; and because all things are to be done for edification, and no offence is to be given to any. Therefore he circumcised Timothy. But Titus, being a Greek, was not compelled to be circumcised. See Gal. ii. 3.

By circumcising Timothy St. Paul showed that he did not condemn those who still continued to observe the Levitical Law. (Cp. 1 Cor. ix. 20.) By not circumcising Titus he showed that he would not enforce that Law, and would communicate with those who judged it to be abrogated, and did not observe it. In the former case he proved his charity; in the latter, his courage; by both together he evinced his clear-sighted appreciation of the partial and preparatory character of the Law, which was now dead, but not yet deadly; and of the ever-living permanence and life-giving universality of the Gospel. See below on Gal. ii. 3—15, and the review of that chapter, pp. 53-55, and I Cor. ix. 20.

- "Ελλην ὑπῆρχεν] he was by birth a Greek. Being a Gentile, by his father's side, and being trained in the truth by his mother, a Jewish believer, Timothy was qualified by his parentage to conciliate Jews and Gentiles, and to bring them to Christ.

6. διῆλθον-Γαλατικὴν χώραν] they traversed Phrygia and the region of Galatia, having been forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the Word in Asia (i.e. Lydia, Caria, and especially the region near Ephesus), and having come toward Mysia, they were attempting to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit of Jesus permitted them not: and having passed along Mysia, they arrived at Troas.

On the Gaulish origin of the population of Galatia, and on other local circumstances of that region, and on St. Paul's visits to that country, see Gal. i. 2—6, and Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians, pp. 36—41, and Howson, i. p. 284.

St. Paul's purpose, it appears, was to travel westward from Lystra to Ephesus—the great maritime Capital of Ionia—but he was not permitted by the Holy Spirit to do so; and he traversed Phrygia and Galatia.

At this time it would seem that he planted the Churches of Galatia, which are mentioned as in existence, and as confirmed afterwards by him, in ch. xviii. 23.

But St. Luke says nothing of their foundation. And why? Perhaps because the reader of Scripture could receive ample information concerning them from the Epistle of St. Paul to the

And here it may be remarked generally, that, as with regard to the Evangelical History, the Holy Spirit says nothing in one Gospel concerning the existence of any of the other three, and yet each Gospel is adjusted to the others and to the whole Evangelical Canon; so in the Acts of the Apostles, there is no mention of any of St. Paul's Epistles, or even of the fact that he wrote a single epistle; and yet in dictating the Acts by the agency of St. Luke, the Holy Spirit appears to have His Divine Eye on what had been already given, or would be hereafter given by Himself to the World, in those Epistles, by the hand of St. Paul.

Here is the ground of the argument handled by Dr. Paley in his "Horæ Paulinæ." The Acts and the Epistles are from One Spirit. No wonder that there is a harmony among them, more deeply felt, because not the result of effort and art, but of oneness of origin from the Spirit of Truth.

Besides, this silence of the Historian of the Acts concerning a very important part of St. Paul's Missionary labours, may serve to remind the Christian reader, especially the Pastor, Teacher, and Missionary, that a record of their works on earth, even though it were in Scripture itself, is not to be too much desired, and is never to be made the aim and end of their efforts; but in this they are to rejoice, that "their names," though unknown on earth, "are written in heaven." (Luke x. 20.)

This leads to the inquiry-Why did the Holy Spirit forbid St. Paul to preach the Word in Asia, and to go into Bithynia? Perhaps He would thus show, that what men consider most illustrious and attractive, is of less account in His sight. He drew Paul away from Ionia and Ephesus, the wealthiest and most brilliant region of Asia Minor, in order that he might preach to the servile and semibarbarous tribes of Phrygia and Galatia. Our Lord chose Galilee of the Gentiles for the scene of His earlier ministry. St. Philip was sent from the populous Samaria to the desert road "that leadeth to Gaza" (Acts viii. 26). And St. Paul is prevented by the Spirit from preaching in Asia, and under the guidance of the same Spirit, he goes and evangelizes the more barbarous tribes of Galatia. The Missionaries of the Gospel in all ages need to be reminded, that poor Pagan villages (see Mark i. 38) and savage tribes are to be converted and sanctified by Christianity, as well as polite cities and cultivated regions; and they whose solitary lot is cast in wild and uncivilized countries will find comfort in the reflection, that Galilee was preferred by Christ to Judæa, and that St. Paul was sent by the Holy Spirit from Ionia to Phrygia and Galatia.

For another special reason why St. Paul went to Galatia at this time, rather than to Asia, see note below on Gal. iv. 13.

this time, rather than to Asia, see note below on Gal. iv. 13.

— Φρυγίαν—'Ασία] Similarly Catullus (xlvi. 5) distinguishes Phrygia and Asia,—" Linquantur Phrygii, Catulle, campi, Ad claras Asiæ volemus urbes."

6, 7. κωλυθέντες—οὐκ εἴασεν] having been forbidden by the Holy Ghost to preach the Word in Asia, they were essaying to o into Bithynia; but the Spirit of Jesus suffered them not. These two instances of the restraining power of the Holy Ghost, exerted to deter men from what seems abstractedly most desirable, are also proofs, that if men labour aright for God, like St. Paul, they may thank Him for what they are not allowed to do, as well as for what they are enabled to do. (Cp. 2 Cor. i. 17.) They need His preventive as well as His assisting grace; they require a χαλινός, or bridle, for their unruly passions, as well as a κέντρον, or spur, for their sluggish will.

This passage may also suggest a reason, why the Gospel was not published sooner, and why it has not been universally diffused. God sees what use men will make of His gifts, and He acts accordingly. See on x. 5.

The Holy Spirit did not now permit them to preach the Word in Asia; but soon afterwards enabled them to do so with great success, so that "all in Asia heard the Word, both Jews and Greeks" (xix. 10). We know also from Pliny's celebrated letter to Trajan (x. 97) that the Gospel was soon planted in Bithynia.

Here also is evidence of the Inspiration of the Apostles and Evangelists. They proved that they had the Spirit, by what they did. St. Luke here affirms that they were guided by the Spirit in what they did not do. What good man could venture to say this, except he were authorized by the Spirit to do so?

May we not also say that here is an illustration of what may at first perhaps be perplexing in Holy Scripture? Many things are not mentioned there, which, if Scripture had been a human work, would not have been omitted. For example, in the Acts, many leading incidents in the history of St. Paul and the other Apostles are passed over. Doubtless the Holy Spirit had good reasons for withholding these things. Doubtless the Evangelists were sometimes restrained by the Holy Spirit from writing, as the Apostles were from preaching. There is Inspiration in their Silence.

See the Introduction to this volume for further remarks on

7. κατὰ τὴν Μυσίαν] toward Mysia. This use of κατὰ = versus, is seen in Acts ii. 10, τῆς Λιβύης τῆς κατὰ Κυρήνην: and see on xxvii. 12, λιμένα βλέποντα κατά Λίβα. Cp. Winer, § 49, p. 357.

- ἐπείραζον] they were essaying.

— τὸ Πνεῦμα Ἰησοῦ] the Spirit of Jesus.—Elz. has not Ἰησοῦ, but it is found in the best MSS., A, B, C, D, E, and in numerous Versions and in the best MSS. Versions, and is received by Griesb., Scholz, Lachmann, Tischendorf, Bornemann, and Alford.

This reading deserves to be noted, as confirmatory of the doctrine of the procession of the Holy Spirit from the Son, as well as from the Father. See above on John xv. 26.

Τρονάδα] Alexandria Troas, now a "Colonia Juris Italici," and an "urbs libera." See Howson, ch. viii. and xx.

The Troad and Philippi (v. 12) are two names associated with battle, and connect the wars of the heroic age, and of the Homeric Deities, with those of the close of Greek History, and the conflicts of the Roman Empire.

But now they are become the scenes of the victories of the Gospel of Peace,-a prelude to the moral change to be wrought by it in the World.

9. δραμα—ἀνὴρ Μακεδάν] a vision: a man of Macedonia. See below, v. 12. It would seem (as Chrys. observes, p. 804) that God proportions His revelations to the necessities of the case. When strong persuasion is requisite He sends an Angel; where less will serve, a man.

- Makedovlav] Macedonia. The Roman name for Northern Greece. The Romans, having reduced Greece by their arms, divided it into two Provinces, Macedonia in the north; and Achaia in the south.

Macedonia comprised Macedonia Proper, Illyricum, Epirus, and Thessaly: the rest of Greece, including the Peloponnesus, was contained in Achaia, which was so called because the Romans had reduced Greece by means of the Achaens then holding the chief place in that country. (Pausan. vii. 17.)

The Roman Province of Achaia corresponded very nearly to that territory which is now called the Kingdom of Greece

10. εξητήσαμεν] we sought means by inquiring for a ship going to Greece,—we endeavoured. Observe St. Luke's modesty. He does not say that he himself joined St. Paul at Troas. He glides as it were imperceptibly into the Apostle's company; and we only know that he was a sharer in his perils and labours, by the adoption henceforth of the pronoun we. See below, xx. 5.

As S. Irenœus remarked (iii. 14) in the second century, "That Luke was an attendant on Paul, and his fellow-labourer in the Gospel, he himself makes manifest, not in a spirit of boasting, but constrained by the truth itself;" and then Irenœus quotes this verse of the Acts. St. Luke thus intimates that he was an eyewitness of what he relates. And his testimony is stronger because he relates nothing specially of himself. He also notices when he is not present. See v. 40.

The first person is dropped at ch. xvii. 1, and resumed in xx. 5, and thenceforth it continues till the end of this book. See on xx. 5, and on 2 Cor. viii. 18.

- συμβιβάζοντες - ἡμᾶς - εὐαγγελίσασθαι] St. Luke says here, that we sought forthwith to go out (of Asia Minor) into Macedonia, assuredly gathering (as an inference from the Vision) that the Lord hath called us (observe 'us') to evangelize them. A remarkable expression, stating a fact of great importance, which almost escapes notice.

They who have observed St. Luke's modesty in speaking of himself, will be convinced by this expression that he himself, as well as St. Paul, was called by God to evangelize the Greeks. And they will be persuaded that the holy Evangelist did what he was called to do.

As to the manner in which he did it, see the notes below on

1 Thess. i. 9, and 2 Cor. viii. 18.

11. Σαμοθράκην] Samothrace; an island near Thrace, and called Samothrace, either from the name of the founder of the colony (Dion. Hal. i. 61), or because it was colonized from Samos (Steph. Byz.), or because in the native language the heights of the island were called σάμοι (Eustath. p. 881). It was celebrated for the mysteries of Demeter and Persephone, and rites of the Cabiri. Cp. Tacit. Ann. ii. 54.

- Νεάπολιν] Neapolis in Thrace; about twelve miles from Philippi, the frontier town of Macedonia.

12. Φιλίππους, ήτις έστι πρώτη της μερίδος της Μακεδονίας π., κολωνία] What do the words πρώτη της μερίδος mean, as applied to Philippi?

(1) Some suppose them to signify the first city on St. Paul's route. See Wieseler, p. 38, and Howson, i. 341.

But this is not probable. The first would be Neapolis; and St. Luke says ἐστι, not ἢν.

(2) Nor can πρώτη πόλις τῆς μερίδος mean "the chief city of that region of Macedonia." See Liv. xlv. 29, who says that Æmilius Paulus, B.C. 167, after the subjugation of Perseus and his kingdom, reduced Macedonia into four parts, and made Amphipolis, Thessalonica, Pella, and Pelagonia, the capitals of their respective districts. Cp. Leake, Northern Greece, iii. 480.

(3) Hence πρώτη is interpreted by some (e. g. Rosenm., Kuin.) to mean a principal city of that region of Macedonia. The term πρώτη (primaria) was assigned as a title to cities of Asia;

as may be seen on coins.

(4) It is said by others (e.g. Meyer) that κολωνία is to be joined with πόλιs, and that St. Luke intends to say that Philippi was the principal colonial-city of that part or district of Macedonia. It was planted with Roman Colonists by Octavian, after

"Ημεν δε εν ταύτη τη πόλει διατρίβοντες ήμέρας τινάς. 13 τη τε ήμέρα των σαββάτων έξήλθομεν της πύλης παρὰ ποταμὸν, ιοῦ ἐνομίζετο προσευχὴ εἶναι, ι ch. 21. 5. καὶ καθίσαντες έλαλοῦμεν ταῖς συνελθούσαις γυναιξί. 14 Καί τις γυνη ὀνόματι Λυδία, πορφυρόπωλις πόλεως Θυατείρων, σεβομένη τὸν Θεὸν, ἤκουεν ἡς ὁ g Gen. 19. 3. the victory of Actium, and admitted to the Jus Italicum. See Dio Cass. li. p. 445. Plin. Nat. Hist. iv. 11. A somewhat similar explanation had been proposed by Casaubon. See Valck.

None of these explanations appear satisfactory. They all rest on the supposition, which is at least doubtful (see Baumg. ii. 115), that της μερίδος is equivalent to ἐκείνης της μ., i. e. "of that part of Macedonia."

(5) The true solution is probably to be found in the Hellenistic sense of the word $\mu \epsilon \rho ls$, viz. a frontier, or strip of border-land, that by which it is divided ($\mu \epsilon \rho l \zeta \epsilon \tau a\iota$) from some other adjacent territory. See Ezek. xlv. 7. Here then $\mu \epsilon \rho ls$, so explained, would be the border-land, by which Macedonia is divided or parted off from Thrace. And Philippi was the chief City of this uepls or confinium. It was colonized by the Romans as a border-city, to defend the frontier against Thrace. As Col. Leake says (Northern Greece, iii. 487), "From B.C. 146, to the reign of Augustus, the Romans had the troublesome duty of defending Macedonia against the people of Illyria and Thrace, and during that time they established the colonies at Philippi, Pella, Stobi, and Dium."

In the New Testament the words τὰ μέρη often occur in this sense, as equivalent to μεθόρια or confines. Matt. xv. 21; xvi. 13. Mark viii. 10. And in the Acts (ii. 10) we have τὰ μέρη τῆs Λιβύης, the confines of Libya, towards Cyrene. So in the LXX the word μερls is used for ΤζΕ, an extremity.

The Vulg. here has "prima partis (not partis istius) Macedoniæ;" which seems to lead to the right sense. And this interpretation is confirmed by the Arabic and Æthiopic versions, which render $\mu \in \rho!\delta os$ by confines or neighbourhood of Macedonia.

St. Paul had been called to Greece by the man of Macedonia, and that call had been recognized and obeyed as the command of the Lord (xvi. 9, 10). He is now in Macedonia; and as soon as he has crossed the frontier, he begins his career, as a soldier of Christ, warring against Satan, at Philippi the principal city, on the border land of Macedonia, and a military colony of Rome.

These particulars concerning Philippi seem to be specified by

St. Luke for various reasons;

He has brought us now to the first city on Greek ground, in which the Gospel was preached by St. Paul.

The name Philippi, derived from Philip (Strabo, vii. p. 5) the ἀνηρ Μακεδών (Demosth. i. p. 43), who subdued Greece, and the father of Alexander, who overran and conquered a great part of the known world, and founded the Third Great Monarchy (Dan. viii. 21), suggests to the reader the contrast between the subjugation of Nations of this world, of which Philip and Alexander were the Conquerors, and the triumphs now to be achieved by Christ in the peaceful march of St. Paul.

The words Μακεδονίας and κολωνία, a colony, call attention to the triumphs of the Gospel at Philippi, a principal city of Macedonia, or Northern Greece (called by the Romans 'Macedonia'), and also as representing in those parts the main element of the Gentile world, by its connexion as a military Colony with Rome, the Fourth Monarchy (Dan. vii. 7. 19), the Mistress of the world at that time.

Hence St. Paul's acts at Philippi are dwelt on by St. Luke as a specimen and rehearsal of his preaching in Greece and Italy, and of the future achievements of the Gospel in the Roman Empire and in the World.

— κολωνία] a Roman Colony—a miniature of Rome. "Coloniæ Populi Romani quasi effigies parvæ simulacraque'" (Aul. Gell. xvi. 13). See preceding note.

Coins of Philippi of the date of St. Paul's visit have the inscription "Col. (i.e. Colonia) Aug(usta) Jul(ia) Philip (pensis)." See Akermann, p. 45. Kitto, p. 337. Compare Howson, i. 345, on the rights of Roman Colonies.

 13. πόλης] gate. So A, B, C, D. Elz. πόλεως.
 — ποταμόν] river. Not the Strymon (as has been supposed by some) which was some miles distant, but a smaller stream, the Gangites, or, as Herodotus calls it, Angitas; which flows into the Zygactes, and gives its name to the united streams. See Leake, iii. p. 225. Howson, i. p. 346.

The name Krenides, or fountains,-formerly borne by Philippi, -- was derived from this stream.

The battle-field of Philippi, in which Brutus and Cassius were defeated by Mark Antony and Octavius, was between the Gangites and the Strymon.

- οδ ενομίζετο προσευχή είναι] where a meeting for prayer was wont to be held. See v. 16.

Perhaps there was a Proseucha, or enclosed place for prayer there. See Epiphanius (Hær. lxxx.), who describes the Proseuchæ as places of a semicircular form (θεατροειδείς), without roofs, and outside the cities. Cp. Mede's Essay, Book i. Discourse 18, p. 67.

Such proseuchæ were commonly near the sea or rivers, as bere, for the sake of the lustrations and ablutions of the Levitical Law (see Joseph. Ant. xiv. 10. 23. Cp. Juvenal, iii. 11—13).

The difficult words, "jura, verpe, per Anchialum," in Martial, xi. 94, have been explained from this practice. See Valck.

Hence also they afforded a convenient preparation for the Gospel, as supplying water for baptizing the converts made by the preaching of the Gospel there.

It seems that at Philippi, a Roman Colony, where the Jews were hated and despised (see v. 13), they had no Synagogue within the walls of the City, and were only authorized to have a Proseucha, and that outside the city gate. Cp. Ammonius, in Caten., who says, μη ούσης έκει συναγωγής διά το σπάνιον, παρά τον ποταμον έξω της πόλεως λάθρα συνήγοντο.

Here, at Philippi, St. Paul, in accordance with his uniformly charitable spirit toward the Jews, his bitter enemies, went out of the city to their proseucha on the Sabbath Day, and preached there, though he had only a few women to hear him. Cp. below, note on xvii. 1.

14. Θυατείρων] Thyatira, in Lydia. As Alford observes, "Though they had been forbidden to preach the word in Asia (xvi. 6), and sent by the Spirit to Greece, their first convert in Greece is an Asiatic.

— σεβομένη τὸν Θεόν] a Proselyte. See xiii. 50.

– ἤκουεν] was listening.

15. καὶ ὁ οἶκος αὐτῆς] and her house. An argument for Baptism of Infants. See xvi. 33; xviii. 8. 1 Cor. i. 16.

"Quis credat (says Bengel) in tot families nullum fuisse infantem, et Judæos circumcidendis, Gentiles lustrandis illis, assuetos, non etiam obtulisse illos baptismo?"

The Church of England (Art. XXVII.) affirms that "the Baptism of Infants is most agreeable with the Institution of Christ." And in her Baptismal office she grounds this assertion And in her Baptismal office she grounds this assertion on our Lord's declarations (see on John iii. 3. 5) and on His gracious invitation (Mark x. 14) to Infants, βρέφη. See on Luke xviii. 15.

In this she follows the exposition of the Primitive Church, who, as Origen says (in Epist. ad Rom. lib. v.), "received the Baptism of Infants from the Apostles." See also Justin Martyr (Apol. i. 15) speaking of disciples of Christ from their childhood, and Irenœus (ii. 22), who mentions infants as born again, and the Synodical Epistle of the Third Council of Carthage under Cyprian, A.D. 253. Routh, R. S. iii. p. 74, or in Cyprian's Epistles, lix. or lxiv., where the Sixty-six Bishops there assembled say in answer to Fidus, "As to the case of Infants, who, you allege, ought not to be baptized within the second or third day after their birth, and that the law of circumcision should be regarded, which led you to imagine that none should be baptized before the eighth day after his birth-this Synod was of a very different opinion. Not one of us agreed with you, but we resolved unanimously that the grace of God should be denied to none. For since the Lord says (Luke ix. 56), 'The Son of Man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them,' we must take care, as far as in us lies, that no soul be lost. All persons, whether adults or infants, are equally objects of divine grace, as Scripture declares."

More has been said by the Editor, on this point, in Letter viii. on the Church of Rome, and in Occasional Sermons (Serm. iii. pp. 51-66), where objections to the above statements are considered; and cp. Professor Blunt on the Early Fathers, p. 548.

On the allegation of some Expositors here, that the Children of Heathens could not have been baptized by the Apostles, because their parents were not holy (cp. 1 Cer. vii. 14), see the answer of S. Augustine to Boniface, Epist. 98, vol. ii. p. 394, and Hooker, III. i. 12; V. lxiv. 5; and the present Editor's Letter to a friend on the XXIXth Canon of 1603, Lond. 1860. πιστήν τῷ Κυρίῳ είναι, εἰσελθόντες εἰς τὸν οἶκόν μου μένετε καὶ παρεβιάσατο

16. πνεῦμα Πύθωνος] a spirit of Python. A, B, C*, D have $\Pi b \theta \omega r a$ —which may perhaps be the true reading: α and os (OC) are often confused in MSS. See Porson, ad Hecub. 788.

A remarkable expression. This damsel was possessed with an evil Spirit (see vv. 18, 19). Why then does not the Evangelist St. Luke call it by the names used in the Gospel, viz. δαιμόνιον, or πνεθμα ακάθαρτον, but πνεθμα Πύθωνος, a spirit of Python, or πνεθμα Πύθωνα, or Python spirit, a word never occurring in the Gospels?

Probably for the following reasons-

St. Paul was now on new ground-in Greece (see above, v. 13). He was in a Greek city, a Roman colony. A new scene now opens before him; a new era in the History of the Church. He has not only to war with Jewish prejudice. He has to en-He has not only to war with Jewish prejudice. He has to encounter Satan in other forms. He has now to confront him in the idolatries and superstitions of the West.

One of the greatest difficulties which the Gospel had to contend with there, arose from the power exercised over the Greek and Roman mind by Oracles, Enchantments, Divination, Soothsaying, and Sorcery. That Power showed itself in the νυμφόληπτοι, εὐρύκλεις, ἐγγαστρίμυθοι, θεοφόρητοι, φοιβόληπτοι, cerrifi, larvati, lymphatici, &c. of Ĥeathenism. See Aug. de Civ. Dei, ii. 23, where he refers to this passage "in Actibus Apostolorum ventriloqua femina." Euseb. Præp. Ev. iv. 5; and other numerous authorities cited in Wetst. p. 555. Biscoe, pp. 283-5.

Here St. Paul meets that Power face to face in the streets of Philippi. How was it to be described? By the word Python. This word would sound a note clear and strong on the Greek and Roman ear. Πύθων, Πύθιος, Πυθία, Πυθώνισσα, Pytho, Pythius, Pythia, Pythonissa. How much was contained in those words!

ΠΥΘΩΝ, Python, was the prophetic Serpent at Delphi-the ομφαλὸς τῆς γῆς, the centre and focus of Gentile Divination. See Callim. H. ad Apoll. 100. Ovid, Met. i. 438. Apollodor. i. p. 44, Heyne. Hygin. fab. 140. Plutarch, de Orac. Defect. ii. p. 417, and others, cited by Kuin., and concerning the Pythia herself, see Virgil, Æn. vi. 46.

The Python or Serpent gave his name and place to the prophetic Deity of the Gentile world; the successor of the Serpent at Delphi was the Pythian Phoebus or Apollo.

And from him all who claimed the powers of divination received their title, and were called Pythons. Hence Hesychius, Πύθων δαιμόνιον μαντικόν. Alherti Glossar. Gr. p. 75, Πύθωνος δαιμονίου μαντικού, ούτω λεγομένου. "Translatum est hoc nomen ad homines ipsos, qui dei cujusdam afflatu futura prædicere posse credebantur, nominatim ita dicti sunt ἐγγαστρίμυθοι, Plutarch. de oraculorum defectu p. 414, τους ἐγγαστριμύθους Εὐρυκλέας πάλαι, νυνὶ Πύθωνας προσαγορευόμενοι, ventriloguos Eurycleas (ab Eurycle inventore hujus divinationis) olim, nunc Pythonas vocant. Hesychius: Πύθων, ὁ έγγαστρίμυθος ή έγγαστρίμαντις. Id. Εὐρυκλης, ὁ ἐγγαστρίμυθος, ην δὲ γένος μαντέων, ους δμωνύμως Ευρυκλείς έλεγον. Suidas: έγγαστρίμυθος, έγγαστρίμαντις, δυ νύν τινες Πόθωνα, Σοφοκλής δε στερνόμαντιν, Πλάτων δ φιλόσοφος, Εὐρυκλέα ἀπὸ Εὐρυκλέους, τοιούτου μάντεως." (Kuin.)

Therefore this damsel at Philippi, with her Pythonistic

possession, was, according to her degree, a representative of the Pythia who sat on the tripod at Delphi, and who delivered the responses in the name of the Pythian Apollo, the successor of the Serpent, and brought much gain and renown to her masters at that place, and deceived the World by her sorceries. Hence St. Luke calls this Spirit at Philippi, Python. And thus the Holy Spirit by St. Luke's mouth taught certain solemn truths to the Gentile world. He warned them, that the Spirit with which they dealt so fondly and familiarly in their Oracles and Witchcrafts was an unclean Spirit. It is denounced and ejected as such by St. Paul. The Python, which they themselves said was a serpent, was indeed a minister of "the old Serpent" (2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2), an agent of Satan; and in (2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2), an agent of Satan; and in dealing with him, in these Oracles, they "worshipped devils instead of God" (1 Cor. x. 20). As Chrys. says here, δρậs δ τι 'Απόλλων δαίμων ἐστίν. Indeed Apollo, and all his diviners, were ministers of Apollyon himself (Rev. ix. 11).

In these Oracles and Divinations of the Gentile world there were many frauds and cheats. But counterfeits prove the reality; and the phenomena of Witchcraft in the Heathen World are too numerous to be explained away. As Dr. Barrow says (Serm. ix. vol. iv. p. 213), "Concerning power of Enchantments implying the co-operation of Invisible Powers, all sorts of intercourse and confederacy, formal or virtual, with bad Spirits, he that shall affirm them to be mere fiction and delusion, must with exceeding immodesty and rudeness charge the World with vanity," &c. See also Cicero, de Div. i. 5, and 82-88. Van Dale, de Orac., and others, cited by Biscoe, p. 299.

(1) It is worthy of remark, that the Hebrew word which describes a "familiar spirit" is zin (Obh). This is used in the Old Testament, in Lev. xx. 6. 27. Deut. xviii. 11. Isa. xix. 3. And it is also employed I Sam. xxviii. 7, 8, to describe the Spirit with whom the Witch of Endor had commerce, who is called by the LXX an εγγαστρίμυθος. May it not be, that this word Obh has some connexion with the Greek δφις, or serpent,—the word used by St. Paul and St. John to describe the Old Serpent, the Devil? (2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2.) This conjecture may be confirmed by the following consideration;

(2) It is allowed that the Greek and Latin words πύθιος, πυθώνισσα, πυυθάνομαι, πευστήριος, are traceable to πύθων or Python, the Prophetic Serpent of the Great Gentile Oracle. (Strabo, ix. p. 422. Macrob. Sat. i. 17.) Serpent-worship seems to have extended itself over a great part of the World.

May not that word Python be carried up higher to the Hebrew pre (pethen), or Serpent? Ps. lviii. 4, and Isa. xi. 8.

Ps. xci. 13.

It is remarkable, that this last-named passage contains a prophecy concerning the Victory to be achieved by Christ over the Great Python, or old boss, or Serpent, the Devil. The casting out of the Python-spirit by the Apostle St. Paul at Philippi, acting by the power of Christ, may be regarded as a visible exhibition of the operation of Christ in the Gospel, bruising the serpent's head (Gen. iii. 15), and treading the Dragon, Satan, the Old Serpent, beneath His feet; healing, by His death, the wounds inflicted on them by the fiery Serpent, and delivering the World from the grasp in which he then held it by means of Oracles and Incarnations, and all the sorceries of Divination. It may be considered as a specimen of the fulfilment of the prophecies, which attribute such powers to Christ; and of Christ's promise to His disciples that He would enable them to overcome "all the power of the enemy" (Luke x. 19; cp. Rom. xvi. 20); and as a presage of His full and final triumph over Satan, that Old Serpent, which deceiveth the world. (Rev. xii. 9; xx. 10.)

— οὖτοι οἱ ἄ. δοῦλοι τοῦ Θεοῦ] these men are servants of the most High God, who are declaring to us the way of salvation. This utterance of the Python-spirit at Philippi gives much probability to the assertion of ancient Christian writers, that the Evil Spirit who deceived the Gentile world by Oracles, gave testimony in them to Christ. See Euseb., Dem. Evang. iii. 6, and ix. 10.

August., de Civ. Dei, xix. 23. De Consensu Evang. i. 18; and others quoted by Dr. Jenkin on Christianity, i. p. 354, and Mede's interesting Essay, Works, p. 194, bk. i. disc. xxxvi.

Satan sometimes speaks the truth, in order that he may propagate lies with greater success. See on Mark i. 25, where it will be seen, that in repudiating the homage of the Father of Lies, even when he spoke the truth, St. Paul imitated the example of Christ,

Praise is not seemly in the mouth of a sinner, for it was not sent him of the Lord (Ecclus. xv. 9. Prov. xxvi. 7). Much less is it seemly in the mouth of the Evil One, say Chrys. and Didy-mus here (in Caten.). The Apostle shows, that testimony from Satan to the preachers of the truth is not to be received; for it is to be feared, that Evil Spirits, having gained men's confidence by what they speak truly, may overreach the simple by an admixture of falsehood, and so cause their ruin. It is well said by Arator here (ii. 386),-

The hope of their profits went out with the going out of the Evil Spirit, -a proof of the reality of the possession. Indeed, it seems that the Holy Spirit has taken special care that no reasonable person should call in question the fact, that the damsel was possessed by the Evil Spirit, and that the Evil Spirit was permitted by God to exercise certain powers by her instru-

 a clue to a powerful motive of Persecutions against Christianity. Both the Persecutions from Heathenism mentioned in the Acts are from this source. In the account of both, the word ἐργασία occurs. See here, and xix. 24, 25. Cp. Pliny's Letter to Trajan, x. 97, 98; and Lardner's Remarks, iv. 11—30, and the excellent observations in Blunt's Lectures, pp. 149-153: "The Priesthood in all its branches, Flamens, Augurs, Haruspices, contemplated the advance of Christianity with dismay. It emptied their Temples, curtailed their sacrifices, reduced their profits, exposed their frauds."

How great were the difficulties it had to encounter in these respects, and how noble the triumphs it achieved! And how much yet remains for it to perform even in Christendom itself, where the corruptions of Christianity are deeply rooted in Covetousness, and Superstition is propagated by Love of Lucre! Cp. on 2 Cor.

20. στρατηγοίs] the Prætors, or Duumviri, of the Roman colony (Cicero, de Leg. Agrar. 34),—a title still surviving (A.D. 1750) in the Italian word Stradigo. (Wetstein.) peal in v. 21 to the rights and privileges of the Citizens of Philippi as a colonial city of Rome.

See further on xvii. 6, and Howson, i. 345.

The Roman character of Philippi is brought forward in this narrative, which is a prelude to the History of the struggle of the Gospel with the military and imperial power of the Heathen Mistress of the World.

— Ἰουδαΐοι] Jews. A specimen of the difficulties and dangers which the Gospel had often to encounter from the heathen, by being confounded with Judaism, and by being exposed to all the obloquy with which the Jews were regarded by the Romans.

Christianity was hated as Judaism by the heathen, and as VOL. I .- PART II.

worse than heathenism by the Jews. It had to contend against Judaism and Heathenism, and it triumphed over both.

This charge against Paul and Silas as Jews, would be more effective at this time at Philippi, a Roman colony, because the Jews had lately caused disturbances at Rome, and had therefore been expelled from it by an imperial edict of Claudius (xviii. 2).

21. ξθη, λ οὐκ ἔξεστιν κ.τ.λ.] customs which it is not lawful for us to receive, being Romans. By the Roman Laws, Judaism was a "religio licita" for Jews; but they were not allowed to make proselytes among the Romans, who were forbidden by the Laws, under penalties, to receive circumcision; though in this and other religious matters the Laws often lay in abeyance. See Neander, Church Hist. i. 89.

22. ραβδίζειν] to beat with the lictors' rods: a Roman punishment. St. Paul himself distinctly asserts that he was beaten with rods no less than three several times (2 Cor. xi. 25), a punishment, which he might have escaped, if he had asserted his Roman citizenship, as he did at Jerusalem (xxii. 25). Here, it is alleged, is a difficulty. If he asserted his citizenship in one place, why not also in others? St. Paul, by asserting his citizenship at Jerusalem, and by obtaining exemption thereby (xxii. 25), showed that his sufferings at Philippi were voluntary, and that he had divine direction advising him how to suffer as well as to do, in full faith that his sufferings would, under God's providence, conduce to the furtherance of the Gospel.

In that case the assertion of his Roman Citizenship led, by a providential series of events, to the manifestation of the divine glory, by his preaching of the Gospel to the people and San-hedrim at Jerusalem,—to Felix and Festus and Agrippa at Cæsarea, and finally to the imperial court and tribunal at Rome.

But if St. Paul had pleaded at Philippi his Roman citizenship, he would not have been beaten, and cast into prison. And we should not have had the beautiful and instructive history of his Christian faith and joy, uttering itself in psalmody at mid-night; the jailor and prisoners, and other inhabitants of Philippi, would not have had the evidence to the truth of the Gospel in the Earthquake which shook the prison, and opened its doors, and made the chains to fall from the hands of the prisoners. The jailor and his household might not have become citizens of the kingdom of heaven.

May we not therefore say, that the same Divine Spirit Who had recently restrained St. Paul from preaching the word in Asia and Bithynia, withheld him from asserting his Roman citizenship at Philippi? And may not the good effects which we see ensuing from the restraint in the latter case, be designed to remind and assure us that no less beneficial results arose, though not known by us, from the preventive operations of the Holy Ghost in the former? Cp. note below on 1 Thess. ii. 2.

Yet—such is the treatment which this divine history has received in modern times—it has been alleged by many (e. g. De Wette) that St. Paul was hindered by the tunult from pleading his citizenship; and others (Baur and Zeller) have advanced a step further, and perverted his forbearance into an argument that she did not really possess the right which he afterwards claimed!

25. Throws they were singing. St. Peter sleeps in prison between the two soldiers (Acts xii. 6); St. Paul and Silas sing in the stocks. They cannot raise their hands or bend their knees in prayer, but they can lift up their heart and voice to heaven. Such is the power of joy in the Holy Ghost. "Nihil crus sentit in nervo, quum animus in coelo est. Essi corpus detinetur, omnia spiritui patent." (Tertullian, ad Mart. 2, cited by Neander.) Such is the joy shed by the Holy Ghost into the heart of the Christian. Observe also προσευχόμενοι υμνουν; i. e. praying they were singing: their prayer was a hymn: perhaps they were singing one of the Psalms which are entitled 'a Prayer of David,' e. g. the xvii. or lxxxvi.

- ἐπηκροῶντο] more than "heard;" they were listening to their music as an ηδιστον ἀκρόαμα. The Prison became an Odeum.
26. πάντων τὰ δεσμὰ ἀνέθη] the chains of all were loosed.

All the prisoners were witnesses of the Miracle.

27. éaurdo àvapeûr] to kill himself, as Brutus and others had done here (Plutarch, Brut. 52), and a great number of the proscribed Romans, after the battle of Philippi, followed his example. Self-murder was approved by the Stoics (Senec. Epist. 12. 17. 24. 58, 59. Plin. Ep. 1. 12. Biscoe, p. 349), and was then a common resort in perplexity and trouble. This incident is suggestive of what the Gospel has done to prevent it. The jailor was about to put himself to death; St. Paul tells him to "do himself no harm," and opens to him the way of everlasting life.

On the sin of suicide, see Jerome on Amos v., and Augustine, ii. p. 918, de Civ. Dei. i. 20, and contra Gaudentium, vol. ix.

 29. φῶτα] lights—neuter plural; cp. James i. 17. So that all were witnesses of the miracle.

31. τὸν Κύριον] the Lord of all. He had addressed them as

31. τον Κόριον i the Lorid of as. He had addressed the Korol, Christ. 33. έλουσεν—ἐβαπτίσθη Ελουσεν, καὶ ἐλούθη (Chrys.). A remarkable instance of divine reward for human love. The Jailor washed the blood from their wounds, and was by their ministry freed from a spiritual prison, and was washed from his sins by Baptism, made efficacious by the blood of Christ and by faith in Him.

35. ραβδούχους] the lictors (properly rod-bearers), who attended the Magistrates of the Colony.

- λέγοντες] This sudden change was perhaps occasioned by what they had heard of the Earthquake in the preceding night.

37. 'Pωμαίουs' Romans by birth; cp. Acts xxii. 25—29. Some of his ancestors had obtained the "jus civitatis," by purchase, as Maximin. says on Acts xxiii. 29, παρέχοντες δόσεις ἀπεγράφοντο "Pωμαῖοι, καὶ ἔτρεχεν εἰς τὸ γόνοις τὸ δνομα. "Unde colligas ex opulentâ familià fuisse Paulum." (Rosenm.)

— οὐ γάρ] "non, utique." On γάρ (= γε ἄρα) thus used, see Winer, § 53, p. 396, note. Klotz ad Devar. de particulis, ii. p. 242. (Hackett.) The ἄρα serves to sum up the premises on which the assertion is made; the γε strengthens the assertion. Cp. on Luke xviii. 14, ἡ γὰρ ἐκεῦνος.

CH. XVII. 1. διοδεύσαντες] The road on which they travelled from Philippi to Thessalonica, was the Via Egnatia, the Greek continuation of the Via Appia, on which St. Paul afterwards travelled in his way from Puteoli to Rome. It is said by some to have been called Egnatia, from the town "Gnatia lymphis

It is more likely that both the town and the road derived their names from some person or persons of the Gens Egnatia, who were mainly instrumental in their construction. So the Via Appia-named from Appius Cæcus.

- Θεσσαλονίκην] Thessalonica; called the mother-city of all Macedonia in an Ancient Inscription in Valck., p. 541; now Saloniki. Cp. Howson, i. 380, and note below on 1 Thess. i. 1.

— ή συναγωγή] The Article ή is not in A, B, D, and has been omitted by Lachmann, Bornemann. Bloomfield, Alford, and Tischendorf, in his last edition (p. 96), retain the article, which is in G, H, and the majority of cursive MSS.; and, it seems, rightly.

There appears to have been only a proseucha, and this outside the gate (xvi. 13), at Philippi, a Roman Colony, where the Jews were an object of scorn and detestation. See on xvi. 20.

But here at Thessalonica was a Synagogue; and it appears to have been the Synagogue of the district.

Perhaps St. Paul passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, because there was no Synagogue there. In all cases he took care to offer the Gospel in the first instance to the Jews. See v. 2. 2. κατὰ τὸ εἰωθός] as his custom was,—he went into the Synagogue. Thus St. Luke speaks of St. Paul. The Apostle imitated the love of Christ, who,—as the same Evangelist says,—as His custom was, went into the Synagogue on the Sabbath day, Luke iv. 16.

3. παρατιθέμετος] alleging, 'allegans'—in the sense of adducing or citing passages and authorities (here, from Holy Scripducing or citing passages and automates (lease, notal 1803) scape ture) in proof of an argument. See Valck.

4. σεβομένων Έλλήνων] Proselytes. A, D, and some Cursives insert κal before Έλλήνων, and so Vulg. 'gentilibusque.' And this reading, approved by Paley and received by Lachmann, has much to commend it.

The σεβόμενοι are Proselytes (see xiii. 43. 50; xvi. 14; xvii. 17), a distinct class from the Heathens and Jews. And it appears that many Gentile idolaters, Ελληνες, were converted at Thessalonica. See 1 Thess. i. 9. 5. ζηλώσαντες—προσλαβόμενοι] So A, B, E, and many Cursive MSS. and Versions.—D, G, H have not ζηλώσαντες. Elz. inserts ἀπειθοῦντες before Ἰουδαῖοι, with D, and ἀπειθοῦντες is in Paul's account of the conduct of the Jews at Thessalonica.

— ἀγοραίων] "sub-rostranorum;" loiterers in the agora.

6. πολιτάρχαs] Politarchs. See also v. 8, τὸν ὅχλον, καὶ τοὺς πολιτάρχας. Another instance of St. Luke's accuracy. political condition of the two neighbouring cities, Thessalonica and Philippi, was very different. Philippi was a Roman Colony; Thessalonica a Greek free city, 'urbs libera.' There the Roman element was dominant; here the Greek prevails.

Philippi was like a miniature of Rome in Greece. Its magistrates and laws were Roman; and it was proud of its Roman

At Philippi, therefore, we hear of στρατηγοί, Prætors (xvi. 20. 22. 35, 36. 38), and βαβδοῦχοι, lictors (xvi. 35. 38). There Roman privileges are invoked (xvi. 21), and an attempt is made to excite the Roman hatred against Paul and Silas as Jews. See on xvi. 20.

But at Thessalonica the scene is changed. Here we have a specimen of Greek liberty allowed to survive amid the conquered cities of Macedonia, now under the Roman yoke: an image of ancient Greek Independence. Every thing here is Greek. St. Luke marks the change by his language; αὐτοὺς ἀγαγεῖν els τον δημον (v. 5), αὐτοὺς ἔσυρον els τοὺς πολιτάρχας, an uncommon word, but happily we may still read it (in substance) on an ancient inscription at Philippi; a proof of the writer's exactness. See Leake, p. 236, who observes, "The Magistrates are styled Politarchæ, as when St. Paul visited Thessalonica ninety-three years after the battle of Philippi."

The Inscription, which seems to be of the age of Vespasian, may be also seen in Boeckh (Sylloge Pars x. p. 53, No. 1967); who cites another from Philippi, ΠΟΛΙΤΑΡΧΟΥ ΜΑΡΚΟΥ, and who ches another from Philipps, Montrapya septem, ex quibus hoc loco princeps quasi separatim scriptus est." Cp. Howson, i. 394—6.

7. Kaiσαροs] of Cæsar; an intimation of what the Church would have to suffer from enemies charging her with disaffection and disloyalty to the ruling powers. See the replies to this accusation in the Christian Apologies; especially Tertullian's eloquent vindication, Apol. § 29—35, and de Idol. § 13—15, and Theophil. ad Autol. i. 11.

 τό liκανόν] the surety; 'satisdatio' (Gloss). Cp. LXX, Lev. xxv. 26, ἐὰν εὐρέθη τὸ liκανόν, λύτρα aὐτοῦ (Grinfield).
 Σίλαν] This mention of the connexion of Silas with the Church of Thessalonsica is confirmed by his association with St. Paul in the beginning of both the Epistles to the Thessalonians. From the similar association of Timotheus in those two Epistles, it is probable that he also was with St. Paul at Thessalonians.

k Col. 2, 8,

It seems that Timothy was left behind at Thessalonica for a time, and joined Paul and Silas at Beræa.

- Βέροιαν] Beræa; spelt thus (Βέροια) with a single ρ in the ancient coins of this period. Like Βερονίκη (Bernice), which is a Macedonian form of the word φερενίκη (bearing or gaining victory), so Bepoia was called from the name of its founder $\Phi \epsilon \rho \eta s$. Steph. Byz. and Etymol. Wetst. p. 561. It was intersected by the river Astræus, and still retains its name.

11. εὐγενέστεροι] more noble. The obscure Berceans are declared by the Holy Spirit here to be more noble than the wealthy Thessalonians. True nobility consists in being born of God, and in imitating His example and doing His will. The Heathen had some sense of this. Juvenal asks (Sat. viii. 1), "Stemmata quid faciunt?" and (viii. 20), "Nobilitas sola est atque unica Virtus."
And St. Luke here intimates that genuine Nobility is seen in studying the pedigree of our heavenly lineage, and the records of our spiritual inheritance, in the Word of God. This truth is introduced by the pronoun of tives, which signifies "quippe qui." See on 1 Pet. ii. 11.

It appears that these Bercean Christians were mainly of Jewish origin (see v. 10). Hence the contrast with those of Thessalonica is more striking; and this is one of the few in-stances where St. Paul was well received by his own people.

- τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν] daily. See Luke xix. 47.

14. ωs ἐπί] even to the sea.

There does not seem much reason in the interpretations adopted by some here, either that the Bercean brethren sent St. Paul forth-

(1) with a feint only, or pretence, of going to the sea: for he did go by sea to Athens, in all probability; as no place is mentioned by St. Luke between Berœa and Athens. Or,

(2) with a design to go to the sea; or in the direction of the (Winer, § 66, p. 544.)
It is not probable that the Bercean Christians sent Paul forth alone, and exposed him to the malice of the Jews from Thessalonica (v. 13). What St. Luke intends to say seems to be this: that, in their care for the Apostle, the Bercean brethren sent him forth on his journey even as far as to the sea; and so Valck. interprets it; that is, they conveyed him in safety, with an escort, to the coast. Thus they protected him, with some trouble and risk to them-And afterwards, some who conducted him from Berœa, brought him in safety even as far as (εωs) Athens.

All this is mentioned as a fruit of the Christian spirit of the Church at Bercea; a happy result of their study of the Scriptures.

Either, then, the true reading is that adopted by Lachmann, was (the reading of A, B, E, and several cursives), or, what comes to the same thing, ws end is to be rendered usque ad, 'even to;' and so it has been understood by the Syriac, Arabic, Æthiopic, and Latin Versions. So Pausan. ii. 25, καταβάντων δε ως επί and Latin versions. So Pausan. 11. 20, καταβαντών ος ως επι θάλασσαν. Χεπ. Cyr. viii. 3. 11, έδειξε τέρμα ώς έπι πέντε σταδίων. Zosim. i. 67, ώς έπι τον 'Ρῆνον. Laërt. viii. 69, ώδευκέναι ώς έπι την Αίτνην. Diod. Sic. p. 423, λ, τον ναδαρχον μετὰ δέκα τριήρων ἀπέστειλε, κελεύσας κατὰ τάχος λάθρα πλεῖν ώς έπι Συρακουσίους. See Wetstein, Valck., Kuin. If this is the true interpretation, then έξαπέστειλαν is to be joined with ώς έπι την θάλασσαν, they sent him forth, or escorted him, even down to the sea. him, even down to the sea.

16. κατείδωλον] full of idols (Syriac), as a place full of trees is called κατάδενδρος, so as to be overgrown by them. Athens was πόλις θεων, a city of gods, as appears from the description of its temples, altars, &c., in the Attica of Pausanias, who visited it in the age of the Antonines. See Leake's Athens, pp. 1-35, and the present Editor's Athens and Attica, ch. xi.

Athens, the most intelligent and literary city of Greece, was "given to idolatry." Idolatry, therefore, may flourish side by side with Literature and Science. They have not delivered the world from creature-worship; that could only be done by Christianity.

17. ἐν τῆ συναγωγῆ] in the Synagogue. St. Paul still continues to offer the Gospel in the first instance to the Jews, although they had endeavoured to kill him at Thessalonica, and had persecuted him to Bercea. No evil treatment from them was able to exhaust his patience, or abate his love to them, or to weary him in his efforts for their salvation. See above, xvii. 1. A salutary lesson of charity toward those who dissent from the truth.

 $\ell = \ell \nu \tau \hat{\eta} \hat{\alpha} \gamma o \rho \hat{q}$ in the Agora. On the South of the Acropolis, and to the South-east of the Areopagus. See "Athens and Attica," ch. xxii. As he was disputing in the Agora, he was led up to the Areopagus (v. 19), a low limestone hill, a little above it.

18. τινès δè καl τῶν Ἐπικουρείων καl τῶν Στωϊκῶν] but certain of both the Epicureans and the Stoics. For a summary of the points, physical, ethical, and theological, in which St. Paul's teaching would come in contact with the tenets of these sects, see S. Aug. Serm. 150, and c. Academ. iii. 10, and two Treatises S. Aug. Serial 150, and S. Athanas, de Incara. 2, p. 39; and Bentley's Second Boyle Lecture, Works, iii. pp. 27—34, where St. Paul's speech before the Areopagus (vv. 22—32) is illustrated and explained by reference to their opinions. See also, particularly, Bp. Pearson's recently-discovered Concio on this subject (ed. Churton, ii. pp. 56-63) who observes:

"As to the Epicureans, they allowed that the World was made (i.e. had not existed from eternity); but maintained that it came together by chance, and that the Deity took no part in its administration;" and so, as Tertullian says (Apol. 47), "Deum nobis exhibent otiosum et inexercitum, et, ut ita dixerim, neminem humanis rebus."

Besides, they subverted the foundations on which Christianity rests, by denying the Immortality of the Soul. Thus Epicurus says, "death is nothing to us" (Cicero, de Finibus, ii. 31); and "nihil esse post mortem, Epicuri schola est" (Tertullian, de Resurr. Carnis, in initio).

They undermined the groundwork of the Gospel also, by affirming that man is capable of no felicity but of health of body and tranquillity of mind.

As to the Stoics; their name was from the Στοὰ ποικίλη, the "braccatis illita Medis Porticus" (Persius, iii. 53), the arcade or corridor painted $(\pi o \iota \kappa (\lambda \eta))$ with frescoes of the battle of Marathon, in which Zeno taught. They were Pantheists. As Tertullian expresses it (adv. Hermog. 44, ad Nationes, ii. 4), they taught that the Deity pervades the matter of the world, as honey fills the comb of a hive. To them the world was God. Thus they undermined the doctrine of Providence, of personal Responsibility, and of a Judgment to come. In their system of Ethics all sins

Their "wise man," who was all-sufficient in himself (αὐταρκής), Their "wise man," who was all-sufficient in himself (αυταρκής), and equal to the Jove of the people, had no passions; which, as S. Jerome observes (Ep. ad Ctesiph. 133), is "hominem ex homine tollere." Cp. Bp. Pearson, l. c.

Tertullian (de Animâ 3) sums up the Ethical system of both in two words, "Zenonis vigor (ought not we to read rigor?) et Epicuri stupor."

S. Aug. says (Serm. 150), "Dic, Epicuree, quæ res faciat beatum? Responde. Voluptas corporis. Dic, Stoice. Virtus Animi. Dic, Christiane. Donum Dei."

"Hæc est doctrina Christianorum, incomparabiliter præ-ferenda immunditiæ Epicureorum, et superbiæ Stoicorum."

It is observable, that no mention is here made of the Peripatetics, Academics, or Platonists, whose doctrines were not so much opposed to Christianity as those of the Stoics and Epicureans. Indeed, they may be said to have in some degree prepared the better part of the world for the reception of the

(Kuin.)

S. Augustine, Sermon. 150, gives another interpretation of σπερμολόγος (quasi σπείρων λόγους), 'seminator verborum.' And so Vulg. 'seminiverbius.' "Ille (sc. Paulus) reverâ," says Aug., " seminator verborum, sed messor morum; et nos tantuli in agro Dei seminamus, et uberem messem de vestris moribus expectamus."

The inquisitive Athenians (v. 21) restlessly roving about, and picking up news in the agora, and described as such even by their own Orator in a better age (Demosth. Phil. i. p. 43), might well be called σπερμολόγοι; and yet they call the Apostle St. Paul a σπερμολόγος. Such in their eyes was the Apostle who was sowing the Divine Seed of the Word in the furrows of the Field of the World, and who will stand foremost at the Great Day of Harvest, and "bring his sheaves with him." So different are the opinions of men and the judgment of God!

19. ἐπὶ τὸν ᾿Αρειον πάγον δίγαγον] they lead him to the Areopagus. A fulfilment of Christ's prophecy, "They will deliver you up to Councils." Matt. x. 17. Mark xiii. 9. Luke xxi. 12. S. Chrysostom and others say, that they brought St. Paul up to 3. Congression and contests any natural training the Areopagus, in order that they might terrify him (είs Αρειον πάγον αὐτὸν είλκον ώς καταπλήξοντες), because there was the Judicial Tribunal of capital offences, φονικαί δίκαι, especially in suits for bringing in strange deities, ξένων δαιμονίων είσαγωγή, and other causes of Religion.

This opinion has been controverted; and it has been said, that St. Paul was not brought before the Areopagus for any such forensic purpose. There seems, however, to be good ground for S. Chrysostom's remark, which is adopted, among others, by Bengel, "Paulum eò tanquam reum duxere."

The Areopagus-a low hill raised above the bustle of the Agora—was a favourable spot for hearing a reply to the questions put to him by the Athenians. But there seems to be something more implied by St. Luke in the words (v. 19), $\ell\pi\iota\lambda\alpha\beta\delta\mu\epsilon\nu$ οι αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸν Αρειον πάγον ήγαγον.

It has, indeed, been said (by Grotius and Meyer), that emiλαβόμενοι means only a gentle act of leading aside; and so it sometimes does, as in ix. 27. But in other places it intimates something more; see xvi. 19; xviii. 17; xxi. 30.

The Athenians are called δεισιδαιμονέστεροι (v. 22); their Citŷ was given up to idolatry (v. 16). It is therefore not improbable that St. Paul was brought to the Areopagus, as a setter forth of strange gods, by some of that large number of persons in that city whose livelihood depended on the maintenance of See the operation of this cause at Ephesus, xix. 24-28, and at Philippi, xvi. 19, where the same word is used, ₹πιλαβόμενοι είλκυσαν έπι τους άρχοντας. Cp. note there.

It is true that St. Luke does not expressly say that he was put on his trial there. The process may have been only a preparatory inquiry, an avakpiois. They who laid hands on him, may have intended to frighten the Apostle (as Chrysostom supposes) by the judicial associations of the place, and to drive him out of the city. Something of this kind seems to have been designed by his delation to the Areopagus, whose name was expressive of judicial inquisition in religious matters, as was exemplified in the history of Socrates (Xenophon, Mem. i. 1). And the words σταθείς δ Παῦλος ἐν μέσφ τοῦ ᾿Αρείου πάγου ἔφη, Ἅνδρες ᾿Αθηναίοι denote a public Apology rather than a private discussion. The mention also of St. Paul's convert Dionysius, in v. 34, by his official title, the Areopagite, seems to corroborate this opinion. And, lastly, the noble peroration concerning a future Universal Judgment (v. 31), would come with special force, if uttered before the highest Judicial Tribunal, in the most philosophical City of the Ancient World. See also v. 32.

It is perfectly true-nor is it inconsistent with the opinion just stated in reference to some of his hearers-that in the treatment St. Paul received at Athens, there is also a tone of sceptical indifference and supercilious irony, rather than of violence. Philosophers were not earnest in the search of truth. With them Religion was a matter for disputation in the Schools, rather than for moral practice in daily life.

20. ξενίζοντα] surprising, strange. See 1 Pet. iv. 4.
21. εὐκαίρουν] 'vacabant;' had leisure for. An Hellenistic word, not Attic. "Moeris p. 145, εὐκαιρεῖν οὐδεὶς εἴρηκε τῶν παλαιῶν. Phrynichus p. 50, εὐκαιρεῖν οὐ λεκτέον, ἀλλ' εὖ σχολῆς ἔχειν. Τhom. — καινότερον] more new than the last news. "Nova statim sordebant, noviora quærebantur." (Bengel.) The comparative expresses an appetite never satisfied, but ever craving something more, even when it has just been fed. Cp. Theophrast. Char. viii. μὴ λέγεται τι καινότερον: The news-loving temper of the Athenians is noted by Demosth. Phil. i. 43, βούλεσθε, εἰπέ μοι, περιϊόντες αὐτῶν πυνθάνεσθαι κατά τὴν άγορὰν, λέγεται τι καινόν;

22. σταθεὶς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος] And Paul being stationed in the midst of the Areopagus said. He was standing in the midst of the Areopagus, and in the heart of the city of Athens. Cp. "Athens and Attica," ch. xi.

Sixteen stone steps cut in the rock, at its south-east angle, lead up to the hill of the Areopagus from the valley of the Agora, which lies between it and the Pnyx. Immediately above the steps, on the level of the hill, is a bench of stone excavated in the limestone rock, forming three sides of a quadrangle. There the Areopagites sat as judges, on a rocky hill in the open air. On this hill are now the ruins of a small church dedicated to κατὰ πάντα ώς δεισιδαιμονεστέρους ύμᾶς θεωρῶ· 23 διερχόμενος γὰρ καὶ άναθεωρών τὰ σεβάσματα ύμων εύρον καὶ βωμὸν ἐν ῷ ἐπεγέγραπτο, ᾿ΑΓΝΩ-ΣΤΩι ΘΕΩι. Ο οὖν ἀγνοοῦντες εὐσεβεῖτε τοῦτο ἐγὼ καταγγέλλω ὑμῖν.

S. Dionysius the Areopagite, and commemorating his conversion by St. Paul. The Apostle was brought, perhaps, by these steps of rock, which are the natural access to the summit, from the Agora below, in which he had been conversing, to give an account of the doctrines which he preached. Here, placed as he was in the centre of this platform in the very heart of Athens, with its statues and altars, and temples of deities around him, he might well say that the city was crowded with idols.

The Temple of Eumenides was immediately below him: behind him, if he looked eastward, was the Temple of Theseus; and he beheld the Propylsea of the Acropolis facing him, and the Parthenon upon the Acropolis fronting him from above. The Temple of Victory was on his right, and a countless multitude of temples and altars in the Agora and Ceramicus below him. Above him, towering over the City from its pedestal on the rock of the Acropolis, -as the Borromean Colossus, which at this day with outstretched hand gives its benediction to the low village of Arona, or as the brazen statue of the armed Angel, which from the summit of the Castel S. Angelo spreads its wings over the city of Rome,-was the bronze Colossus of Minerva, armed with spear, shield, and helmet, the Champion of Athens. Standing almost beneath its shade, the courageous Apostle pronounced, that the Deity is not to be likened to that, the work of Phidias, or to other forms in "gold, silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device," which peopled the scene before him, and that in temples made with hands the Deity doth not dwell.

The remark which has been made by Dr. Bentley, on the skilful adaptation of St. Paul's oration to the audience which he was addressing, is equally applicable to the place in which he was addressing them. Nothing could present a grander, and, if we may so speak, a more picturesque illustration of his subject, than the temples, statues, altars, and other objects by which he was surrounded.

This Speech contains a statement of the Unity of the Godhead (v. 23), against Polytheism; of the creation of all things by Him, against the Epicurean theory of a fortuitous concourse of atoms; of its Government by Him, against the Stoical doctrine of Fate, and the Epicurean notion of Indifference (vv. 23, 24); of the divine Omnipresence, and of the αὐτάρκεια of the One Great First Cause (v. 25), in opposition to the popular theology; of the origin of all Nations from one blood, against the Athenian conceit of their own dignity as αὐτόχθονες; of the spirituality of the Godhead, in opposition to Idolatry (v. 29); of the witness to God's existence, and other attributes, in Man's Conscience and in Human Nature, and in the Visible World (v. 29). It concludes with a reply to the objection that these are new doctrines (v. 30), and with a statement of the doctrine of human accountability and Universal Judgment to come, by One whom God has appointed; of which He has given a pledge by His Resurrection from the Dead.

He does not once mention Jesus Christ by name. Compare St. Stephen's conduct in this respect before the Jewish Sanhedrim (see the commencement of note on ch. vii. and on vii. 45). In both cases there is the reverence of silence; they would not provoke blasphemy against that Holy Name.

St. Paul's Speech at Athens—both in what he does say, and in what he does not say—is a Model and Pattern to all Christian Missionaries for their Addresses to the Heathen World. Cp.

— ώς δεισιδαιμονεστέρους] as more fearful of the gods; not said in censure: οὐδὲν βαρὺ λέγων (Chrys.). Cp. the words of Edipus in Sophocles (Œd. C. 260), τὰς ᾿Αθήνας φασὶ θεοσε-Beordras elvai.

The sense is, —I for my part regard you as more fearful of the gods than the rest of the world. Cp. Winer, § 35, p. 218, and Baumg. ii. p. 157.

The word θεωρῶ appears to be studiously repeated (see vv. 16. 22). This is the light in which I regard you. This is my theory You charge me with introducing new Deities concerning you. You charge me with introducing new Deities (v. 18). I will show that you yourselves are not satisfied with what you have, and that you are affected with a mysterious craving for something more.

He represents their feeling toward their deities as one of servile fear; and he will deliver them from its vague alarms, and teach them a religion of filial love.

The sense in which the Athenians, to whom he spoke, used the word δεισιδαίμων, timidus Deorum, is evident from the Chapter of Theophrastus (Charact. Eth. xvi.) on that subject. The character of Nicias, as drawn by Thucydides (vii. 50. 77. 86), presents a striking specimen of Athenian δεισιδαιμονία. And the verses of the great Poet of one of the Sects, the Epicurean, with which St. Paul had to contend at Athens, display a graphic view of his position at Athens in taking up arms against the Heathen Theology, and an appropriate comment on his words:

> " Humana ante oculos fœdè cùm vita jaceret In terris, oppressa gravi sub Religione, Quæ caput à cœli regionibus ostendebat, Horribili super aspectu mortalibus instans."

And again,

- " Sæpius illa Religio peperit scelerosa atque impia facta." Lucret. i. 64-102.

The victory over this awful Religio-a victory which Lucretius claims for his "Graius homo," Epicurus, is indeed specially due to St. Paul. Cp. Aug. de Civ. Dei iv. 30, "Agamus Deo gratias, qui has superstitiones per altissimam Christi humilitatem, per Apostolorum prædicationem, libera suorum servitute sub-vertit."

23. τὰ σεβάσματα] your objects of worship, temples, altars, &c., used in this sense in the Greek Version in Wisd. xiv. 20; xv. 17. Bel and the Dragon 27. (Kuin.) Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 4.

- εδρον καί] I met with an altar also, inscribed to the Unknown God.

- βωμόν] an altar. An example to Christian Preachers and Missionaries, that they should adapt their addresses to the circumstances of their audience, and commence with things in which they agree with them, and endeavour to persuade their hearers by means of things which they acknowledge; and so lead them on to accept the truth as it is in Christ.

In the Jewish Synagogues, the Apostle always preached from the Law and the Prophets there read. But in the heathen City, he takes his text from their Altar, and confirms it from their Poets. To those who were under the Levitical Law, "he was as under the Law, that he might gain them that were under the Law; and to them that were without the Law, he became as without the Law, that he might gain them that were without the Law;" and, so far as was consistent with his obedience to Christ, he became "all things to all men, that he might by all means save some." See 1 Cor. ix. 20. 22.

He thus brought every thing into subjection to Christ; and often, as here, he overcame Satan by his own weapons: and των δπλων των πολεμίων αὐτοὺς έχειρώσατο. See Ammonius in Caten. p. 352. Cp. Chrys. here, and Jerome, Epist. ad Magnum, " Ductor Christiani exercitûs, Paulus, et orator invictus, pro Christo causam agens, ipsam inscriptionem fortuitam arte (aræ?) torquet in argumentum fidei."

- 'AFNOSTO: OEO:] to the unknown God. In short public formulas, like Inscriptions on altars, &c., the definite article is often omitted. Cp. Ζηνὸς 'Ολυμπίου, — 'Απόλλωνι Πυθίφ, — 'Αθηνά Πολιάδι κ.τ.λ. And therefore 'Αγνώστφ Θεφ is not to be rendered to an unknown God, but "to the unknown God."

It would seem that the same Divine Power which had guided Pilate's hand when he wrote the inscription on the Cross, "Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews," directed those, unconscious though they were, who traced this title on the Altar. It is not though they were, who traced this thie on the Altar. It is not to be supposed, that St. Paul alludes only to the more general inscription 'Αγνώστοις Θεοῖς, engraven on some altars in the harbour and city of Athens (Pausan. Attic. i. 1. Philost. Vit. Apollon. vi. 3. Col. Leake's Athens, p. 306).

The title 'Αγνώστοις Θεοῖς, to unknown Gods (in the plural), was indeed of some use to his argument, as it implied a confession from Athenians themselves that there were Baines, and fession from Athenians themselves that there were Beings-and therefore a Being-unknown to them, and yet entitled to divine

But to suppose that he argued from such an inscription as that, and from nothing more, would be tantamount to a supposition that in preaching the One God, he argued from a profession of Polytheism.

No one-least of all, St. Paul-would have hazarded an illgrounded assertion before an assembly of critical Athenians. And the conversion of Dionysius, a Judge of the Court of the Areopagus, by St. Paul's pleading, is a sufficient proof that the allegations, on which it was grounded, were true.

Hence Clem. Alex. (Strom. i. 9) and S. Aug. (c. Crescon.

i. 29) affirm that the Athenians worshipped one God, although

There was doubtless an altar at Athens declaratory of the Unity of the Godhead. There was an altar inscribed ᾿Αγνώστφ Θεῷ, to the unknown God. Such an inscription would have been suggested by the natural cravings of the heart for something more pure and rational than the unholy and unsatisfying vanities of Gentile Polytheism.

This craving had been expressed by heathen Poets, e. g. by Aratus, whom St. Paul quotes (v. 28).

And (as Chrys. and Œcumenius, and others state) the occurrence of public calamities, such as the great Plague at Athens in the 40th Olympiad, suggested to the Athenians that there might be some other god whom they had offended, and who could and would give them that aid which they had sought in vain from their many gods of wood and stone. As Col. Leake has observed (p. 306), "Diogenes Laertius (in Epimenid. lib. i. sect. 10) informs us that Epimenides himself came to Athens to establish this worship, and that he sacrificed upon the Areo-

Laertius does not indeed speak of the "Ayvwotos Oeds, but he says τῷ προσήκοντι Θεῷ, in the singular number; and his name would have been specified, if it had been known. "It is name would have been specified, if it had been known. "It is probable, therefore (says Leake), that an altar 'Αγνώστω Θεῷ continued to stand upon the Areopagus from that time until it became the occasion of St. Paul's address to the Athenians." If the altar was visible, as perhaps it was, the appeal would have been much more cogent and striking.

The words of the interlocutor in the dialogue of Philopatris, ascribed by some to Lucian (iii. 708, but see Gieseler, § 40), νη τον άγνωστον εν 'Αθήναις, and τον εν 'Αθήναις άγνωστον έφευρόντες . . . τούτφ εὐχαριστήσωμεν, though designed perhaps as a sneer on St. Paul's speech at Athens, and so proving its dissemination in the Gentile world, are far from casting any doubt on the Apostle's assertion; they rather confirm his statement of the fact: though they do not concede his inference from it.

— δ ἀγνοοῦντες εὐσεβεῖτε] "nomen quod ignorantes benè colitis, ego declaro vobis; Deus Qui" &c. The reading δ and τοῦτο restored from the oldest MSS. by recent Editors, is more consistent with the argument than δν and τοῦτον. Cp. John iv. 22, δμεῖς προσκυνεῖτε δ οὐκ σἴδατε.

There seems a contrast between εὐσεβεῖτε here and δεισιδαι-

24. οὐ-κατοικεί] doth not dwell; is not locally confined to them as to a dwelling-place (Acts vii. 48), even though it be as magnificent as the Parthenon and the Temple of Theseus.

This assertion, and others like it, of God's Omnipresence, was abused by the adversaries of Christianity into a charge against the Christians that they had no Temples. Celsus, ap. Origen, c. Cels. viii. p. 389. Minuc. Felix, 10, "nullas aras habent, templa nulla." But this was an erroneous allegation. See

28. τινὲς—ποιητῶν] certain of your poets. Aratus, of Cilicia, St. Paul's own country (Grotius), and perhaps of Tarsus, St. Paul's own city. (Fabric. Bibl. Gr. iv. p. 87.) The same words are also in Cleanthes, of Lycia. Hymn. Jov. 5.

St. Paul connects all Greek poetry with Athens, "the eye of

32. ἀνάστασιν] resurrection, i. e. of the body. See Bentley, Serm. ii. p. 32.

Here St. Paul opposes all schools of Gentile Ethics. "Ut carnis restitutio negetur, de una omnium philosophorum schola sumitur." (Tertullian, Præscr. 7.)

33. και ούτως δ Παῦλος ἐξῆλθεν] And so Paul went away from them. They deferred the re-hearing of the cause to a more convenient season, and so he departed. He departed from Athens, never, as far as we know, to revisit it. "Nusquam Paulus minore cum fructu quam Athenis docuit." (Bullinger.)

A solemn warning to all, who, gifted with intellectual advantages, spend their time in speculation, and prefer novelty to truth. Specially a warning to all such persons as seek for novelties in Religion, and in the Exposition of Scripture. The Spirit who dwelt in St. Paul may visit them for a time; but, if He be not reverently entertained, He will depart from them-perhaps for ever.

Howson, i. 454. Gieseler, § 28. It is probable that the Jews of Rome, as at Thessalonica and other great cities, had been stirred up against the Christians.

A happy exile for Aquila. Banishment by Cæsar from Rome brought him to Christ and the Church. He is afterwards at Ephesus (v. 19. 1 Cor. xvi. 19), and returns to Rome (Rom. xvi. 3), and at Ephesus again (2 Tim. iv. 19). His wife Prisca, or Priscilla, is always mentioned with him (see on v. 18); and probably they carried with them, wherever they went, the spiritual benefits they derived from their fellowship with St. Paul. Thus evil may be overruled for good; and exile from an earthly city may be the means of bringing many to heaven.

3. σκηνοποιοί] tent-makers. To which St. Paul himself refers, Acts xx. 34. 1 Cor. iv. 12. 2 Cor. xi. 9; xii. 13. 1 Thess. ii. 9. 2 Thess. iii. 8. The word σκηνοποιοί is best rendered "opifices tentoriorum ex corio, in usum vistorum." As Chrys. explains it, έπι σκηνοβραφείου έστως δέρματα έβραπτε, and as Arator says (p. 206),

- "tentoria quippe Fortia mobilibus fabricabat in aggere tectis; Longiùs hæc abiens peregrinus ubique viator Erigit, atque hiemes solesque his pellibus arcet."

Some have supposed that St. Paul had learnt the art of tentmaking in his own country Cilicia, celebrated for its cilicium, or goats'-hair, of which tents were made; and others, that he had practised it among the σκηνίται in Arabia (Gal. i. 17)

The supposition that these tents were made from the cilicium, or goats'-hair, of St. Paul's native country Cilicia, does not seem to rest on any good foundation (cp. Meyer)

There was nothing discreditable, in the eyes of a Jew, in manual labour. "Mos erat etiam doctissimis Judæorum opincium aliquod discere." See Schoettgen. p. 472, and Rosenm. here, and Biscoe, p. 273.

Hence St. Paul is called "pellium sutor" by Origen (hom.

17 in Num.).

May we not add, in reference to Christ Himself, that Ipse Orbis terrarum Opifex, sacrosanctis Suis manibus fabri artem exercebat (Matt. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3). Sic et Apostolorum primarius, qui in Ecclesiæ tabernaculo pangendo plus omnibus laborabat (1 Cor. xv. 10), tentoriis factitandis victum quæritabat: et a terrenorum tentoriorum suturâ (cp. Origen, hom. 17 in Num.) ad æterna habitanda vocatus est? Hence Arator says (p. 207),

> - habitacula Paulus Dum terrena levat, docet ut cœlestia condat, Factaque sæpe manu nunc construit atria verbo."

This was indeed a consecration of human labour. As Chrys. observes here, "St. Paul, after working miracles, stood in his workshop at Corinth, and stitched hides of leather together with his hands; and the Angels regarded him with love, and the Devils

St. Paul, it would seem, from his free-birth at Tarsus (cp. xvi. 37), and from his education under Gamaliel at Jerusalem (see xxii. 3), was of an opulent family; and it is probable that at his conversion he incurred a loss of estate, as well as of friends, so that he was obliged to provide for his necessities by the work of his own hands. Acts xx. 34.

But he thought all things σκύβαλα that he might win Christ, for whom he suffered the loss of all things (Phil. iii. 8).

It was not honourable to the Corinthians, that the Apostle was obliged to provide a maintenance for himself by manual labour. And their "lack of service" to him is contrasted (see v. 5) with the thoughtful liberality of the Macedonian Churches.

But that lack of service on their part gave him an occasion for showing that he did not preach for an earthly reward; and also for stating the claim of Christ's Ministers to a competent maintenance with greater force, because no one could allege that in so doing he was pleading for himself. See 1 Cor. ix. 7. 11, 12.

Here Hellenes are attendants on the synagogue-worship (as in xiv. 1; xvii. 4). Dr. Paley observes, St. Paul had sent for them to come to him from Macedonia to Athens (xvii. 15, 16). And St. Paul says (1 Thess. iii. 1), "We thought good to be left at Athens alone, and sent Timotheus our brother to establish you." Thus the Epiatle implies what is said in the History, and supplies what is not said; and vice versa.

from Macedonia. See 2 Cor. xi. 9, "When I was present with you and wanted, I was chargeable to no man; for that which was lacking to me (at Corinth), the brethren which came from Macedonia (i. e. Silas and Timotheus) supplied." See also what he says to the Philippians of Macedonia (Phil. iv. 14-18).

Therefore, after the arrival of his friends from Macedonia he gave himself up to preaching; he left off making earthly tents, to build up the heavenly Tabernacle of the Church of God.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts xx. 35). A double blessing was, therefore, on the Macedonian Churches. The Corinthians lacked in service to the Apostle in their own city; the Christians of Macedonia sent supplies to St. Paul at Corinth, and so edified the Church in Achaia.

7. ἐκείθεν] thence, i. e. from the Synagogue. Cp. xix. 9, where St. Paul separates himself from the Synagogue at Ephesus, and transfers his disciples to the "school of Tyrannus."

- 'loborov] Justus. Some Versions and a few MSS., E, B, D, insert Τίτου before Ἰούστου; which is defended by Bornemann. It is remarkable, that Titus is never mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles. Cp. Bp. Pearson, O. P. ii. 328; and see note below on 2 Cor. viii. 18.

 Cor. i. 14. Cp. Paley, H. P. p. 39.
 — δ ἀρχισυνάγωγος] chief of the Synagogue. Mark v. 22.

There were several ἀρχισυμάγωγοι to one Synagogue, see Acts xiii. 15. And therefore the article is used here to distinguish Crispus from others who had not the same function, as the words in xvii. 34, Διονύσιος δ 'Αρεοπαγίτης, distinguish him from others who were not Areopagites. See on John xviii. 10.

Hence, it cannot be concluded with some, that Sosthenes

(v. 17) succeeded Crispus.

10. λαός μοι πολύς έν τῆ πόλει ταύτη] I have much people in this city. Not so at Athens, xvii. 33, 34. The commercial Corinth was more favourable to the Gospel than Athens, with its love of novelty and empirical Intelligence.

12. Γαλλίωνος ἀνθυπατεύοντος τῆς 'Αχαίας] When Gallio was proconsul of Achaia. These words, placed at the beginning of the sentence, with something of the style of an official document, are designed to call the reader's attention to the influence of the Imperial Authority of Rome in relation to Christianity. The incident now to be recorded is significant; it is φωνάν συνετοΐσι; an epitome of history. Almighty God interferes here to protect St. Paul against the malice of the Jews; and the instrument which He uses for this purpose on this and other occasions is the imperial power of Rome (cp. Baumg. ii. 213). Thus He foreshadows what He will do hereafter, in a more signal manner, by making all the Powers of this world, indifferent or hostile though they be, subservient to the Triumph of Christ.

- Γαλλίωνος] Gallio. M. Annæus Novatus, the younger brother of the celebrated Stoic, L. his brother Seneca (Præf. lib. iv. Nat. Quæst.), who dedicates to him his books "De Irá" and "De Vita Beata." He had been adopted by Gallio the Rhetorician, from whom he derived his name. He is called dominus by Seneca (Ep. 104)-his elder brother-on account of his official dignity.

- ἀνθυπατεύοντος] proconsul. Another proof of St. Luke's accuracy. Achaia had been an Imperial Province under Tiberius (Tacit. i. 76), but was restored to the Senate by Claudius (Sueton. Claud. 25). How much more St. Luke knew of the history of Rome, than the Roman Historians did of Christ! Cp. Lardner, Cred. i. 1. 12.

- 'Axatas] of Achaia. See xvi. 9.

13. ἀναπείθει] Primam persuasionem novis rationibus labefactatam evellit. Wetst.

15. ὀνομάτων] of names; i. e. whether Jesus was rightly called Christ. This question is dismissed by the Gallios of this world as of no moment; but it is considered as all in all by God. See Matt. xvi. 13-18.

— νόμου τοῦ καθ' ὑμῶs] the law, that is received by you —you Jews; you who pretend to have a better law than we have who are Romans !

17. πάντες] all, i. e. the Jews. The words of Ελληνες are added by Elz. with D, E, and probably G, H, and the great majority of cursives. But A, B omit these words, and they are not in Vulg. and some other Versions, nor in Chrys., who says ούτως Ιταμοί ήσαν οί Ἰουδαίοι: and they have been rejected by Lachm., Tisch., and Alford.
Why did St. Luke mention the circumstance, whatever it

The answer seems to be supplied by the close of the verse, οὐδὲν τούτων τῷ Γαλλίωνι ἔμελεν. He intends to mark the indifference of the Roman Power, as represented by the Proconsul of Achaia. It was not so bitter in its hostility to Christianity as the Jews were, who called themselves the people of God. It did not persecute, but it would not befriend the Gospel.

It would not interfere to protect the cause of truth; and in its philosophic professions of toleration and non-interference, it allowed the laws of morality to be infringed and outraged in its presence. It seems therefore probable, that maures refers to the Jews. Gallio professed to be unwilling to adjudicate between the Jews and St. Paul, on the plea that the matter was not within his cognizance, and he drove the Jews from the judgment-seat; and it seems, that they, disappointed of their expectation, were so reckless as to seize on Sosthenes, the chief of the Synagogue, and to beat him in the presence of Gallio. Cp. Paley, Horæ Paulinæ, p. 40, who takes this view.

But why did the Jews beat the chief of their own Synagogue?

The answer seems to be supplied by the passage where Sosthenes is associated with St. Paul, as "Sosthenes our brother," in the beginning of the First Epistle to the Corinthians.

It may be, that the Sosthenes here is not the same as there.

τον ἀρχισυνάγωγον ἔτυπτον ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ βήματος καὶ οὐδὲν τούτων τῷ Γαλλίωνι ἔμελεν.

But Holy Scripture loves clearness, and not confusion, and seems to suggest their identity. See also next note.

— Σωσθένην] Sosthenes. The Jews, being disappointed in their expectations of injuring Paul, turned their rage against Sost Probably Sosthenes was favourable to St. Paul, and restrained them from destroying him, and was therefore obnoxious to the Jews. (Chrys., Amnon., Œcum.) Perhaps the injury inflicted on him by them attached him more closely to St. Paul, and hastened his conversion to Christianity, after the example of his brother ἀρχισυνάγωγος, Crispus (v. 8).

— καὶ οὐδὲν—ἔμελεν] and Gallio cared nothing for these things. Οὐδὲν is to be construed with ξμελεν, not with τούτων.

See the examples in Welstein.

Gallio was perfectly indifferent to these things, although this outrage in his presence was an insult to himself and to his office (Chrys.), and as if this was no αδίκημα! And yet Gallio was called "dulcis" (see above on v. 12),—and had professed, that if there had been any act of personal wrong (v. 14), he would do justice to the injured party. But the favourite of this world does not always make a good Judge. See further above, xiii. 7. And professions of toleration and non-interference are often only specious disguises for love of ease, or thin veils for cowardice and desire of popular applause. It is not surprising, that Gallio is afterwards heard of as ministering to Nero at Rome in his frivolity and sensuality, and as stage-manager in the scenes described by Dio, lxi. 20, which caused so much grief to the honest Burrhus (Tac. Ann. xiv. 15), and to Gallio's brother Seneca. At length Gallio, the favourite, as well as his brother Seneca, the instructor of Nero, were killed by him.

18. Πρίσκιλλα] Priscilla. Why is she named before her husband Aquila?

"The head of the woman is the man" (1 Cor. xi. 3); and she is commanded to be in subjection to her husband as the Church to Christ (Eph. v. 22-24)

Yet here the wife is placed before her husband. And this order is adopted in some places by St. Paul also, Rom. xvi. 3. 2 Tim. iv. 19. There must be some reason for this. It is observable also, that both St. Luke and St. Paul in other places put Aquila the husband before Priscilla the wife. See Acts xviii. 2. 1 Cor. xvi. 19.

But why is Priscilla ever put first?

Bengel says, "Viro præponitur uxor spectatior;" but he does not say in what she was 'spectatior' or more honourable.

Aquila was a Jew when he came to Corinth; and he was known as such in the first instance to the Church. (See xviii. 2.) But perhaps his wife Priscilla was a Christian, and was instrumental in his conversion (for he was converted) to Christianity

She is associated with him in xviii. 26, where some MSS. and Editors place her name first, in bringing the celebrated Jew

Apollos to a more perfect knowledge of the Gospel.

It seems not improbable, that Priscilla was distinguished by her zeal and ability in disseminating the truth, and that she had an authorized position and official function in the Church.

This conjecture is confirmed by what we read in 1 Cor. xvi. 19, where St. Paul, writing from Ephesus, says, "Aquila and Priscilla salute you; with the Church that is in their house.'

And, what is more remarkable, St. Paul, in writing from Corinth to Rome, after his mention of Phabe, the deaconess of Cenchreæ (the port of Corinth), proceeds immediately to send his salutation to the Roman Christians; and after the name of Phabe, and at the head of that long list of names, he places first in order the name of Priscilla.

The position she here occupies, and the terms in which she is mentioned there (Rom. xvi. 3, where her name stands before her husband's), show that she had been of signal use to St. Paul and to the Church.

"Salute Priscilla and Aquila, my helpers in Christ Jesus, who for my life laid down their own necks (probably at Ephesus), unto whom not only I give thanks, but all the Churches of the Gentiles; and salute the Church that is in their house.

From the position of her name immediately after Phabe the Deaconess, and before her husband and all the other Roman Christians, it may be inferred, that Priscilla also was appointed by St. Paul to do some special work, like that of a Deaconess, in the men of mature age, or widows, were alone admitted to that office. (See Bingham, ii. 22.) But not enough is known of its constitution, to authorize a confident assertion on this point.

Indeed, it may rather be inferred from St. Paul's own directions concerning Deaconesses, that married women sometimes held that office. See on 1 Tim. iii. 11, and v. 12; and there are many very good reasons, why some deaconesses, having especial charge of women, should have been married.

Priscilla, by her marriage with Aquila, who was connected with the Jews by origin, and appears to have been led by his mercantile pursuits to travel from one populous city to another (for we hear of him at Rome, at Corinth, at Ephesus, and again at Rome), would have had many favourable opportunities for serving the cause of Christianity; and from the terms in which she is mentioned in Scripture, she appears to have availed herself of them.

It is therefore submitted for the reader's consideration, whether she was not appointed by St. Paul to such an office in the Church as a holy and pious matron could hold in primitive times; and whether it may not be on account of the official dignity annexed to that office, that her name, which, if she were regarded solely as a woman and a wife, would follow after that of her husband, is sometimes placed before it both by St. Luke and St. Paul.

This incident-trivial as at first it may seem-is also of value as showing the truth of the history, and the connexion of St. Luke with St. Paul.

The coincidence between the narrative of St. Luke, in the Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistles of St. Paul, does not consist merely in this, that they both mention the names of Aquila and Priscilla, or that they both mention that of Aquila first or that of Priscilla first, but that each sometimes places Priscilla first, and sometimes Aquila; i. e. they both seem to have regarded Priscilla as holding a peculiar position in the Church, —a position nowhere fully explained, but only implied,—and as having precedence before Aquila in that official respect, though bound to submit to him, and therefore sometimes named after him, as her husband.

— κειράμενος την κεφαλην εν Κεγχρεαις, είχε γαρ ευχήν] having polled his head at Cenchreæ; for he had a Vow. The context shows that this is not said of Aquila, but of St. Paul.

So it was understood by Didymus, the Master of S. Jerome. See Caten. p. 307, where he says, " Paul the Apostle of the Gentiles became a Jew to the Jews, in order that they might not be estranged from him as one who revolted from the Lord; and therefore, according to the custom of his country, he polled his head at Cenchrere, being under a vow; and further, when he arrived at Jerusalem, he joined himself to the four men who had such a vow as this upon them." See xxi. 23.

As Bede observes here (p. 73), and in Retract. (p. 148), both Jerome and Augustine apply the words to St. Paul. Jerome says (Ep. ii.), "Fratribus valedicens navigabat Syriam, et cum eo Priscilla et Aquila; et totondit sibi in Cenchreis caput;" and Augustine (Ep. 80), "Timotheum circumcidit, et Cenchreis votum absolvit."

This would seem to intimate that the present reading of the Vulgate, "qui sibi totonderat caput," is not so ancient as the fifth century.

Some have asserted that Chrysostom applies it to Aquila;

but this is an error.

It is also said by some (e. g. Meyer, p. 333) that Theophylact understands it of Aquila, and not of St. Paul. But Theophylact says (iii. p. 140), "because he seemed to some to teach men to abandon the Law (of Moses), and they were offended with him on that account, and would not receive his preaching, therefore he does this here, and in the Temple at Jerusalem (xxi. 24. 26), in compliance with their scruples. And this is what he says of himself, 'I became as under the Law to them who were under the Law'" (1 Cor. ix. 20). Therefore Theophylact applies it to St. Paul, and Bede observes, "hee fecit Paulus ut Judeos lucrifaceret."

It is true that in the Editions of this author (Theophylact), there is also a scholium connecting it with Aquila; but this seems to be a more recent interpolation.

Modern Expositors are divided. Erasm.. Luther, Beza,

19 Κατήντησε δὲ εἰς Εφεσον, κἀκείνους κατέλιπεν αὐτοῦ αὐτὸς δὲ εἰσελθών είς την συναγωγην διελέχθη " τοις 'Ιουδαίοις. n ch. 17. 2.

Calvin, Bengel, Whitby, Rosenm., Olsh., Neander, De Wette, Baumy. (ii. p. 224), Hackett (p. 261), Alford, and others, refer it to St. Paul.

Hammond, Grotius, Valck., Kuin., Wieseler, Meyer, to Aquila.

The argument used by some, that if St. Luke had not intended that 'Ακύλας should be construed with κειράμενος, he would not have put Priscilla first, is refuted by the passages cited in the preceding note. The verbs and participles of this verse and the next refer to St. Paul; and Aquila is only introduced parenthetically.

The words εἶχεν εὐχὴν are best illustrated by Acts xxi. 23, είσιν ήμιν ανδρες τέσσαρες εύχην έχοντες έφ' έαυτών. εύχη is the Hebrew נֵרֵר (nedher), a vow, and when thus placed by itself, can hardly be understood to mean any thing else but what was called $\epsilon i \chi \gamma h$ by the Jewish Hellenists (i. e. Philo, i. p. 357, $\epsilon i \chi \gamma h \mu \epsilon \gamma d \lambda \eta$), i. e. the vow of a Nazarite, concerning which see Numb. vi., and the Talmudistic traditions in the Mishna, Tract. Nazir, iii. pp. 146-178, ed. Surenhus. Amst. 1700.

This then appears certain, that when St. Paul ἐκείρατο at Cenchreæ, the eastern port of Corinth, he had the vow of a Nazarite upon him. As Bede says, "Navim ascensurus caput ex voto totondit," and he explains the 'votum' as that of a

But what is the meaning of the word κειράμενος?

The action here is supposed by some Expositors to be similar to that in Acts xxi. 24, where we read of the "four men having a vow," and "shaving their heads."

But it ought to be noticed, that St. Luke does not use the same word in the two places. Here he says κειράμενος, there

(xxi. 24) ξυρήσωνται.

The word used by St. Luke in the present passage (κειράμενος) is never applied by the LXX to describe the final Nazaritic shaving of the head on the expiration of the vow.

The word κείρεσθαι is used to describe the more ordinary act, that of cutting the hair short, or cropping it, -as, for instance, the polling of his head by Absalom, who, as the Rabbis say, was a perpetual Nazarite. Lightfoot, i. p. 1092; ii. p. 774. See 2 Sam. xiv. 26, ἐν τῷ κείρεσθαι αὐτὸν τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐγένετο ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ἡμερῶν εἰς ἡμέρας ὡς ἀν ἐκείρετο, ὅτι κατεβαρύνετο ἐπ' αὐτὸν, καὶ κειρόμενος ἔστησε τὴν τρίχα τῆς κεφαλης αὐτοῦ κ.τ.λ.

Absalom let his hair grow by reason of a vow of Nazaritism, perhaps taken in a spirit of personal vanity. We do not hear that he ever έξυρήσατο κεφαλήν, shaved his head. But he periodically ἐκείρατο κεφαλήν, polled his head on account of the weight of his hair. A temporary Nazarite might poll his head (κείρασθαι) in foreign lands. See Mishna, l. c. vol. iii. p. And some of the Rabbis say, that in this case his hair was to be taken to Jerusalem and burnt at the door of the Sanctuary (Lightfoot, i. p. 1092), who says, "If he polled his head in the country (i. e. out of Palestine), as Paul did at Cenchreæ, he was to bring his hair and burn it," in the room for the Nazarites at the Temple.

The word used by the LXX to describe the shaving of the head by the temporary Nazarite is ξυρήσασθαι. This word is used to signify both the process of shaving the head after a Levitical pollution (when the days already past were counted as nothing, see Numb. vi. 12, and the term of the vow began again), and also to describe the final process of shaving the head when the term of the vow had expired. See Numb. vi. 9, day TIS ἀποθάνη ἐπ' αὐτῷ (and so he incur a pollution by nearness to a dead body) παραχρημα μιανθήσεται ή κεφαλή εύχης αὐτοῦ, καὶ

And again, as to the final shaving, on the expiration of the term of the εὐχή, or vow, it is said, Numb. vi. 18, ξυρήσεται δ ηὐγμένος παρά τὰς θύρας τῆς σκηνῆς τοῦ μαρτυρίου τὴν κεφαλήν της εύχης αθτοῦ, καὶ ἐπιθήσει τὰς τρίχας ἐπὶ τὸ πῦρ, ὅ ἐστιν ὑπὸ τὴν θυσίαν τοῦ σωτηρίου.

The head of the Nazarite could not be shaved finally except at a particular place, i. e. at the door of the Sanctuary, which in St. Paul's time was at Jerusalem (Numb. vi. 18). Cp. Joseph. Β. J. ii. 15. 1, ἐπεδήμει δὲ Βερνίκη ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις, εὐχὴν ἐκτελοῦσα τῷ Θεῷ. Josephus adds, that it was a custom for persons in sickness or other distress, to make a vow for thirty days before that on which they were about to offer sacrifices, and to vow to abstain from wine and to shave their heads. And in doing this at Jerusalem they went barefoot.

Therefore St. Paul's act at Cenchreæ was not such a shaving of the head.

St. Paul himself marks the distinction between κείρεσθαι and ξυρήσασθαι. 1 Cor. xi. 6, αἰσχρὸν γυναικὶ τὸ κείρασθαι, ἡ ξυρᾶσθαι, where see Valck. The Vulgate well distinguishes between the two words here and in xxi. 21 and 1 Cor. xi. 6, rendering κείρεσθαι by tondere, and ξυρᾶσθαι by radi and decalvari. Cp. the Mishna as cited above.

The word κείρεσθαι signifies to poll the hair, or crop it by scissors or shears. But ξυρήσασθαι is to shave the hair off, at least in part, with a ξυρόν or razor, so that the skull appears.

Hence it may be inferred,-

That the word here used, κειράμενος, does not describe the shaving of the head on the expiration of the term of a Nazarite's vow;

That it is here used to describe the act of cutting the hair short by a temporary Nazarite;

That the addition of the words "for he had a vow," intimates that St. Paul would not have cut his hair short, if he had not made a vow of Nazaritism.

Having taken such a vow, he would be allowed κείρεσθαι, to poll his head, because according to the Law he could not shave his head before he came to Jerusalem (Jahn, Archæol. § 394. Winer, R. W. B. p. 141, Art. 'Nasiräer'), and his hair might therefore otherwise become too long for comfort or for decency.

It seems that St. Paul did not choose to cut his hair short (κείρεσθαι) at Corinth, where he remained more than a year and a half (vv. 11. 18), but deferred it till he came to Cenchrea, the sea-port of Corinth, when he was just about to set sail for the East; where he would come into contact with many Jews and Jewish Christians. Indeed, in the next verse it is said that he entered into the Synagogue at Ephesus and disputed with the Jews (v. 19). And soon after he came to Jerusalem for the Feast.

And perhaps the reason why he said (xviii. 21) that he must by all means (πάντως) be at Jerusalem at the next approaching feast (for he did not attend all the feasts, nor nearly so), was that he had this vow upon him; and that he must take the hair he had cut short at Cenchreæ, to be burnt at the temple at Jerusalem, and accomplish his vow by a final shaving, and by votive offerings at the Temple. As is said in the Mishna (de Naziræis, vol. iii. p. 156), "Si quis vovisset Naziræatum extra Terram (i. e. out of the Holy Land), proficisci debuit in Terram, et illic votum implere." Cp. Lardner, i. p. 115.

The knowledge that he was under such a vow would have been of much use to him in his dealings with the Jewish Christians at Ephesus and elsewhere. It would be a visible and practical refutation of the charge that he despised the Levitical Law, and condemned those who continued to observe it.

Another reason, probably, why he did not choose to poll his hair or cut it short at Corinth, but waited till he came to Cenchreæ (when he left Greece for a time), was because with the Greeks it was usual only for slaves to wear the hair cropped short, ἔπειτα δήτα δοῦλος Εν κόμην ἔχεις; (Aristoph.)

To have appeared with his hair cut short in the Churches at Corinth among the Greek Christians, would have exposed him to ridicule and his preaching to contempt. He acted with prudence in reference to the Gentile Christians in not cutting his hair off at Corinth, nor till he was on the point of quitting Greece. And if the Greek Christians heard, as they probably would from some one at Cenchreæ, that the Apostle had cut his hair short there, they would learn also that he did it "because he had a vow," and would thus be taught a lesson of forbearance towards the Jewish Christians from the example of the Apostle, who they knew did not enforce the Levitical Law, and yet, as they heard, did not despise it, but in his charity to the Jewish Christians, and to the Jews, sometimes complied with it in his own person.

The grounds of St. Paul's compliance, in this and other respects, with the Levitical Law, are well stated by S. Augustine in one of his Letters to S. Jerome (Epist. 82).

After a considerable interval, St. Paul arrived a second time at Jerusalem (xxi. 17). He had been charged with contempt of the Levitical Law, as St. James tells him (xxi. 21); and he is advised by the Bishop of Jerusalem to associate with himself four other persons under a vow of temporary Nazaritism, and to be at charges with them (that is, to pay the expenses of the sacrifices to be offered in the Temple at the expiration of their vow), that they might shave their heads. And so St. Paul on the next day entered the Temple with them, announcing the fulfilment of the days of their purification, until the sacrifice was offered for each 8 2

It is probable also, that he was acquainted with the facts of the Crucifixion, Resurrection, and Ascension; but the only Baptism that he knew was that of John; i. e. he had not been baptized into Christ. some suppose) that the baptism of John was all that he knew; for he was a Christian Catechumen, κατηχημένος την όδον τοῦ Κυρίου, v. 25, and Aquila and Priscilla took him and expounded to him more exactly than he had known it hitherto, the way of God; i.e. the divine plan of salvation by Baptism into Christ; and he was baptized with the Baptism of Christ, as may be concluded from the case of the twelve men in the next chapter, xix. 3—5.
26. παβδησιά(εσθαι] to speak boldly. This example affords no sanction (as has been supposed) for preaching the Gospel without a due call or mission. Any one might expound in the Synagogue, if invited to do so; and no one could do so without invitation. And as to his teaching in the first instance out of the synagogue, there is no evidence to show that it was approved, but rather the contrary; nor is it said that afterwards he had no call or mission.

The contrary is implied in 1 Cor. iii. 5. 22.

not hear whether the prophecy which John the Baptist himself had delivered, that Jesus would baptize with the Holy Ghost and fire (Matt. iii. 11. Luke iii. 16), had yet been fulfilled by the outpouring of the Holy Ghost on those who had been baptized.

If these disciples were Jews, as they seem to have been, because they were baptized with the baptism of John, these words do not mean, that they never heard of the Spirit of God, but that they had not heard of the giving of it which the Apostle mentioned, as we read elsewhere that the Holy Ghost was not yet (John vii. 39); not denying the existence, but the plentiful effu-

6. καὶ ἐπιθέντος κ.τ.λ.] On this act of laying on of hands, see above on viii. 14-18, and on x. 47.

St. Paul is seen here, at Ephesus, exercising the same Apostolic functions which the "very chiefest Apostles," Peter and John, are described in this book as exercising at Samaria (see viii. 17).

Thus, he who was not one of the original Twelve, and who had not seen Christ upon earth, and had been a persecutor of the Church-and was therefore disparaged by some in comparison with them—is placed by divine authority on a par with them in the eye of the Church. Thus also it is proved, that the collation of the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying of hands on haptized persons, was not restricted to those who were appointed to the Apostolic office by Christ Himself when upon earth. And the gift of the Holy Ghost by the hands of St. Paul, is, as it were, a link of connexion between the first administration of Confirmation by the original members of the Apostolic College, Peter and John, at Samaria, and the subsequent exercise of the same authority by persons afterward appointed, such as Timothy and Titus, to be successors of the Apostles, and to discharge the ordinary functions of the Apostolic office, -particularly in the laying on of hands and prayer,—for the perpetual edification of the Christian Church. See Heb. vi. 2.

fulfilment of Christ's saying (Matt. xi. 10).

- καθ' ἡμέραν - τινός] he could not dispute daily in the Synagogues, for they were open only thrice a week, and the Jews blasphemed "that Way." Therefore, as he had done at Corinth (xviii. 7), he collected the disciples in another place; either a pri-(xviii. 7), he collected the disciples in another place; either a private rabbinical seminary (Hammond) or a school of grammar and rhetoric—where they could meet daily. So the Church grew by persecution, and the word was preached to both Jews and Greeks.
10. τὴν 'Ασίαν] Asia. See ii. 9. 1 Cor. xvi. 8, 9. 11, 12.
11. οὐ τὰς τυχούσας] extraordinary. See Acts xxviii. 2.

Here is another proof of the divine sanction, given to St. Paul's office and mission, and putting him on a level with St. Peter Paul's office and mission, and putting him on a level with St. Peter and the other Apostles. Cp. Acts v. 15.

12. ἐπιφέρεσθαι] A, B, E, and some cursives have ἀποφέρεσθαι, which has been received by some Editors.

— σουδάρια] napkins. See Luke xix. 20.

— σιμικίνθια] 'semi-cinctia.' Some translate this word by handkerchiefs; so Ammonius and Theophylact. See Wetst. Others render it by aprons. Aprons used by workmen, perhaps by St. Paul in his $\sigma\kappa\eta\nu \rho\pi\eta\gamma ia$. See Martial xiv. 153, who distinguishes them from tunics thus: "Det tunicam dives (locuples?); ego te præcingere possum." Rendered Cordpia by Suidas.

Some have censured the acts of these persons resorting to St. Paul, as well as to St. Peter (Acts v. 15), as superstitious. But it is to be remembered that in both cases the application was in behalf of sick people, who could not come in person to the Apostles. The fact is related without censure by the Holy Ghost; and the Apostles do not seem to have blamed them.
It is also here added that "they were healed," and that "evil spirits were thus ejected." This testimony for these miraculous cures is more remarkable as coming from Luke the physician.

The healing power was not in the shadow of St. Peter, or in the handkerchiefs of St. Paul; but in Christ responding to the touch of faith, and operating by the shadow or vestments of His Apostles on earth, as He had done when present in His human person by the fringes of His garment, touched by the hand of faith. See Matt. ix. 20, 21; xiv. 36. Mark v. 27. Luke viii. 44.

Was there any superstition in this? Was there any credulity in supposing, that at a time when, for wise reasons, Christ wrought extraordinary miracles by His Apostles (and these miracles are called here expressly extraordinary, οὐχ al τυχοῦσαι, that we may not look for them now), He could and would work by their shadow or their handkerchiefs on those poor helpless folk, who could not come to their hands, and who had faith in His Divine Power acting by them?

If so, then there would also be credulity in supposing that the Divine Physician of body and soul can give health by medicines to the one, and grace by Sacraments to the other.

Perhaps the working of Christ by means of the shadow of Peter and of the handkerchiefs of St. Paul, was designed to repulse the accretisism of these who will not helione that Grace in rebuke the scepticism of those who will not believe that Grace is given by means of Water, and of Bread and Wine, dispensed by Christ's Ministers; and in order to comfort and strengthen the hearts of those who believe that it may there be apprehended by the touch of Faith.

Thus Christ's power is magnified in the working of His grace; and the devout soul is assured of the reality of His operation on itself, by means of such instruments, as, in human calculation, seem inadequate for the merciful purposes, which they are designed by Him to perform.

In order to prepare us for this blessed assurance, our Lord had said, that after His Ascension greater works would be done by those who believed in Him than He Himself had wrought (John That is, when He was glorified in heaven, and had received the gift of the Holy Ghost to bestow upon men, He would work by their instrumentality greater miracles than He had wrought in person on earth; and thus prove that He was glorified, and that by virtue of the Holy Ghost, given after His Ascension to the Church, He, though not corporeally present, works greater things in His Church than He had wrought when wisible among men. See note on John xiv. 12.

Here, then, we see a fulfilment of Christ's prophecy and promise, a proof of His Ascension, and an assurance of His perpetual presence and operation in the Church.

It may also be remarked, that by the shadow of Peter passing by, Christ Himself works, and by handkerchiefs taken from the body of Paul. Is it not, therefore, suggested, that the bodies of the saints of God, which are Temples of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. iii. 16; vi. 19), are regarded by Christ as chosen vessels for the indwelling of His Grace; and that thus a lesson of reverence for the body is inculcated (1 Thess. iv. 4)? and motives to holiness and purity are supplied, and a hope of greater glory and blessedness reserved for it, when it shall be made "like unto Christ's glorious body, according to the mighty working whereby He is able to subdue all things unto Himself?"

We may remark, also, that there was a special reason for the operation of these miracles at Ephesus;

The population of that city was then subject to the influence of Satan, exercised upon them by means of magical arts (Εφέσια γράμματα), witchcraft and sorcery, practised both by Gentiles and Jews. Almighty God showed in Egypt, by the rod of Moses, that His power is greater than that of Satan working by Magicians; He proved by the words of Daniel at Babylon, that He is more excellent in might and wisdom than the Evil Spirit who operated by the Chaldman Astrologers; so now at Ephesus, He shows by the handkerchiefs of Paul that the Gospel is opposed to all the practices of magic and sorcery by which Satan deceived the Gentile World; and is able, even by the feeblest instruments, and beggarly elements, to destroy the works of the Devil.

Hence in v. 15 we read the confession of the Evil Spirit, that he owned the power of Jesus; and in vv. 18, 19 we see the surrender and conflagration of the Books of Magic as a consequence of the manifestation of the power "of the Lord Jesus"

(v. 17) by these miracles of Paul.

Since also Christ, glorified in heaven, could and did work these miracles of healing, and of casting out Evil Spirits, by means of the shadow of the body of St. Peter, and of handkerchiefs and aprons from the body of St. Paul, the faithful Christian may defy the power of the Evil one acting upon his body by physical disease, or on his mind by spiritual agency.

But Satan does not cast out Satan; and (as Didymus observes) wherever the Gospel grew, πασα γοητεία κατελύετο.

— τὰs βίβλουs] the books. "Vana religio tollit malos libros," says Bengel, who observes, that as if in recompense for this sacrifice of bad Books, Ephesus became afterwards rich in good Books. It received an Epistle from St. Paul, and the Gospel and Apocalypse from St. John. They had τὰ ἰερὰ γράμματα instead of τὰ Ἐφέσια γράμματα It received also an Epistle from S. Ignatius. There were ample amends for its lost books on 'Curious Arts.'

- apyuplov] silver; drachmas, about 81d. each in value.

21. διελθών τ. Μακεδονίαν] having passed through Macedonia and Achaia. See xx. 1, 2.

- δεί με και 'Ρώμην ἰδείν] I must also see Rome. Cp. Paul's declarations in the Epistle to the Romans (i. 13; xv. 23), of his desire and intention to visit them. See also on Acts xxiii. 11; xxv. 21, and Paley, Hor. Paul. p. 19.

22. Τιμόθεον] Timothy, sent by St. Paul from Ephesus to Corinth by way of Macedonia a little before the writing of his first Epistle to the Corinthians. See 1 Cor. iv. 7; xvi. 10.

He had returned to St. Paul when in Macedonia (2 Cor. i. 1), and is associated with him in writing the second Epistle to the Corinthians, and was with him at Corinth in his visit to that city soon after the second Epistle was written (see below, xx. 5, and also Rom. xvi. 21), and probably was with him at Jerusalem, and also in his first imprisonment at Rome. Heb. xiii. 23.

— Έρραστου] Erastus, being a financier (οἰκονόμος τ. πόλεως, of Corinth, Rom. xvi. 23; xv. 25, and notes), was a fit person to be employed by St. Paul in the collection of alms to be gathered in Achaia and Macedonia, for the poor saints of Jerusalem. He had rejoined St. Paul at Corinth when the Apostle wrote his Epistle to the Romans, xvi. 23.

 - ἐπέσχε εἰs] implying an adhesion to his work in Asia.
 24. Δημήτριος - ἀργυροκόπος - ναοὺς ἀργυροῦς] Demetrius, a silversmith, making silver shrines of Artemis - Diana. The Gospel of Christ, in its various conflicts with the Evil Spirit in the various forms he had assumed in the heathen world, had often to contend with worldly traffic and the love of gain. of the Pythoness at Philippi (Acts xvi. 16-19), that of the Magicians, &c. here (vv. 19, 20), and now Demetrius and the members of his guild, or fellow-craftsmen (vv. 24, 25).

The feelings expressed by Demetrius in his speech (vv. 25—28), still obstruct the progress of the Gospel in the World. Cp.

Bentley's Sermon on the power of the Spirit of καπηλεία (on 2 Cor. ii. 17) in the corruption of truth. Works, iii. pp. 241—262, and above on xvi. 16—19.

These vaol or shrines of silver were small portable models of the statue and vads (ædiculæ portabiles, argenteæ) of the Ephesian Artemis, or Diana, like Παλλάδια περιαυτόφορα (Athens and Attica, ch. xvi., note), and were carried on journeys and voyages, and placed in private houses for protection. See Mede's Works, i. p. 299. Howson, ii. 89.
 Medallions of Ephesus still survive, representing the πρόναος and statue of the Ephesian Artemis. One of the former may be seen in Kitto, p. 398, and of the latter in Akermann, p. 49.

A learned commentator of the Church of Rome (Corn. A Lapide) says here,—and the traveller who visits Loretto at this day can testify to the truth of what he says,—"eas imagines gestabant, sicut nostri peregrini gestant imagines B. Virginis Lauretanne (our lady of Loretto), aut domi in larariis et oratoriis eas reponebant."

— 'Αρτέμιδοs] The Artemis of Ephesus was not like the Diana of Greece and Rome, figured as a fair archer and huntress, but resembled rather an Indian Deity. See Jerome, præf. Epist. ad Ephes., "Scribebat Paulus ad Ephesios Dianam colentes non hanc venatricem, quæ arcum tenet atque succincta est, sed illam multimammiam, quam Græci πολύμαστον vocant." Cp. Mr. Long's article in Dr. Smith's Dict. of Ancient Geography, v. 'Ephesus,' p. 837.

- ἐργασίαν] gain. See xvi. 16.
27. τοῦτο τὸ μέρος] this branch or department. A polite euphemism for 'idol-manufactory.' Cp. Isa. v. 20.
- ἀπελεγμόν] contempt; from ἀπελέγχεσθαι, explodi. Cp. Symmach. Ps. cxviii. 118, ἀπήλεγξας πάντας, where LXX have έξουδένωσας.

- οἰκουμένη] the world. "Diana Ephesia, cujus nomen unicum multiformi specie ritu vario nomine multijugo totus veneratur orbis." Apuleius (lib. ii.). "Templum Dianæ Ephesiæ" is called orois." Aputetus (no. n.). "Templum Diane Epinesne" is caned "Orbis terrarum miraculum" by Plin. N. H. xxxvi. 14, and it is described as "factum à totâ Asiâ;" and therefore in contending against idolatry at Ephesus, the Apostle was contending against the religious superstitions of the Gentile World. Its history is given by Howson, ii. 85.

29. τὸ θέατρον] the theatre; a place often used by the Greeks and Asiatics not only for dramatic exhibitions, but also for popular assemblies. See Diod. Sic. xvi. 84. Val. Max. ii. 2, "Legati in theatrum, ut est consuetudo Græciæ, introducti."

Justin, xxii. 2.

Even at Athens the Pnyx was deserted for it; probably because the Theatre could be protected from rain and sun, which the Pnyx could not. Cp. above, xii. 21, Herod's Oration, which was delivered in a Theatre. "Joseph. B. J. vii. 3. 3, τοῦ δήμου τῶν ᾿Αντιοχέων ἐκκλησιάζοντος εἰς τὸ θέατρον, τόν τε πατέρα τῶν ἀντιοχέων ἐκκλησιάζοντος εις το θεατρον, τον τε πατερα τὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐνεδεἰκνυτο κατηγορῶν. Corn. Nep. Vit. Timol. 4, 'veniebat autem in theatrum (Syracusis) cũm ibi concilium populi haberetur.' Tacit. Hist. ii. 80, 6, de Vespasiano: 'tum Antiochensium theatrum ingressus, ubi illis consultare mos est.''' Juvenal (x. 128) describes Demosthenes as "pleni moderantem frena theatri.'' Wetst. p. 585.

"plem moderantem fræna theatri." Wetst. p. 585.

The remains of the Theatre at Ephesus, which was one of the largest in the world, were seen by Dr. Chandler, and the site is still distinguishable. Cp. Fellowes, Asia Minor, p. 274.

— Pátor] Caius. It would appear that four different persons, bearing this common name, are mentioned in the New Testament.

Caius of Macedonia, here; Caius of Derbe (xx. 4); Caius of Corinth, whom Paul baptized, and who is called his févos (I Cor. i. 14. Rom. xvi. 23); Caius, the beloved, to whom St. John adi. 14. Rom. xvi. 23); Caius, the beloved, to whom St. John addresses his third Epistle.

— 'Aρίσταρχον' Aristarchus. See Acts xx. 4; xxvii. 2, afterwards imprisoned with St. Paul, Col. iv. 10. Cp. Philem. 24.

— συνεκδήμους] companions in travel. συνοδοιπόρους, Hesych.

31. 'Ασιαρχών] Asiarchs; the Presidents of the heathen games chosen from the principal citizens of Asia, the "Commune Asia," i. e. of the region of which Ephesus was the head. The following is from Kuin., "Horum munus erat, in honorem deorum et imπέμψαντες πρὸς αὐτὸν παρεκάλουν μὴ δοῦναι έαυτὸν εἰς τὸ θέατρον. 32 *Αλλοι μεν οὖν ἄλλο τι ἔκραζον, ἦν γὰρ ἡ ἐκκλησία συγκεχυμένη, καὶ οἱ πλείους οὐκ ηδεισαν τίνος ένεκεν συνεληλύθεισαν. 33 " Εκ δὲ τοῦ ὅχλου προεβίβασαν Αλέξανδρον, προβαλόντων αὐτὸν τῶν Ἰουδαίων ὁ δὲ ᾿Αλέξανδρος κατασείσας την χείρα ήθελεν ἀπολογείσθαι τῷ δήμω. 34 Ἐπιγνόντες δὲ ὅτι Ἰουδαίός ἐστι, φωνὴ ἐγένετο μία ἐκ πάντων ὡς ἐπὶ ὥρας δύο κραζόντων, Μεγάλη ἡ *Αρτεμις Έφεσίων.

35 Καταστείλας δὲ ὁ γραμματεὺς τὸν ὄχλον φησίν, "Ανδρες Ἐφέσιοι, τίς γάρ έστιν ἄνθρωπος ὃς οὐ γινώσκει τὴν Ἐφεσίων πόλιν νεωκόρον οὖσαν τῆς μεγάλης 'Αρτέμιδος καὶ τοῦ Διοπετοῦς; ³⁶ 'Αναντιρρήτων οὖν ὄντων τούτων, δέον ἐστὶν ύμας κατεσταλμένους ύπάρχειν, καὶ *μηδεν προπετές πράττειν. 37 'Ηγάγετε γὰρ τοὺς ἄνδρας τούτους, οὖτε ε ἱεροσύλους οὖτε βλασφημοῦντας τὴν θεὸν ὑμῶν.

x Prov. 14. 29. y ch. 25. 8.

peratoris Romani, quotannis ludos theatrales, suis sumptibus (ut Romæ ædilium) edere, unde nonnisi opulentiores hanc provinciam subire poterant. Munus Asiarchæ annuum erat. Eligebantur hoc modo; initio cujusque anni, i.e. sub æquinoctium autumnale, singulæ urbes Asiæ concionem habebant, in quâ uni ex suis civibus 'Ασιαρχίαs honorem deferebant. Tum unaquæque civitas legatum in certam urbem mittebat Asiæ proconsularis primariam, quales erant Ephesus, Smyrna, Sardes, ad 70 κοινον, commune gentis concilium, qui nomen ejus, qui domi electus erat, publicè renuntiaret. Ex his quos singulæ urbes Asiæ Asiarchas nominaverant, synedri nonnisi decem Asiarchas designabant, et ex horum numero Proconsul Romanus summum sacrorum præfectum eligebat." Some of these statements are questionable. Strabo (xv. 42) says that some of the Asiarchs were always from Tralles; and they are often mentioned in connexion with the public games; and some of them were Priests, and had the care of the Temples; see Professor C. Babington's Essay, in Trans. of Numismatic Soc., Lond. 1866.

Compare the account of S. Polycarp's martyrdom at Smyrna, c. 12 (in Patres Apostol. ed. Jacobson, and the notes, vol. ii. pp. 614, 615, ed. 2). There an Asiarch Philip, as President of the games, is requested to let loose the lion against Polycarp, but declines to do so. And now the Asiarchs are desirous to save Paul from the violence of the people. Perhaps he alludes to this circumstance, when he says, κατ' ἄνθρωπον ἐν Ἐφέσφ ἐθηριομάχησα (1 Cor. xv. 32), i. e. as far as I myself was concerned, I fought with beasts at Ephesus, but God delivered me.

See Chrys. in Caten. here, p. 323.

The mention of the Asiarchs as present here, may perhaps intimate that this uproar took place at the time of the public religious games; when Demetrius could reckon on a more than ordinary manifestation of religious zeal in behalf of the patron goddess of Ephesus.

— ὅντες αὐτῷ φίλοι] being friends to him. A remarkable circumstance. The Apostle of the Gentiles has friends among the Presidents of the religious games in honour of Artemis. He converts an Areopagite at Athens (xvii. 34), baptizes an 'Αρχισυνάγωγος at Corinth (xviii. 8. 17. 1 Cor. i. 14), and has made a favourable impression on some of the Asiarchs at Ephesus; and has friends in Cæsar's household at Rome (Phil. iv. 22), - a proof of his courage and charity, and of the truth of his cause; and of the power with which it penetrated into, and leavened, all classes of society.

An evidence this (as Paley has remarked) of St. Luke's veracity. He says that some of the Asiarchs were friendly to St. Paul. He does not spend any time in accounting for this singular fact. He is at no pains to make it seem probable, but he states it simply and boldly, because it is true.

This incident is also to be noticed as a proof of Providential dispensation, and pre-arrangement for the diffusion of the Gospel by the spread of the Roman arms. Ephesus was under Roman sway. The ancient gods of the nations were now vassals of Rome. Diana had been conquered by Caesar. Thus the influence of the Pagan Mythology on the minds of the upper classes was impaired, and they were more ready to receive a purer faith. See Bp. Pearson, O. P. ii. 35; and above, Introduction, p. 9.

33. 'Αλέξανδρον] Alexander, of whom as yet nothing had been said; but perhaps he is the same as the Alexander mentioned by St. Paul in his Epistle to the Bishop of Ephesus (1 Tim. i. 19, 20, where see note, and 2 Tim. iv. 14).

If so, he had apostatized from Christianity. Perhaps from the mention of his trade, χαλκεύs, it may be inferred that he was connected by ἐργασία with the ἀργυροκόποι of v. 24; and thus we have a view suggested to us of the combination of the artificers and workers in metal, and all the large family of Tubal Cam (Gen. iv. 22), who supplied idols to Heathenism, against the pure faith of the Gospel.

35. δ γραμματεύς the Recorder, the Custos Rotulorum, keeper of the archives of the city.

See the Ephesian Coin in Akermann, p. 55, and below on v. 38.

— νεωκόρον] The word νεωκόρον = (1) δ τὸν νεὼν κορῶν, η σαρῶν. (2) δ τὸν νεὼν κοσμῶν, η καλλωπίζων. (3) a marguillier, or warden of a temple. (4) a votary and worshipper of a particular deity, as the patron of the city, &c. This is the meaning of the word here.

St. Luke's report of this speech is happily illustrated by the coins of Ephesus, in which we see representations of Artemis, circumscribed with the words Έφεσίων Νεωκόρων. See Akermann, p. 54, and note v. 38.

This practice of Gentile superstition has also found its imitators in Christian times, where particular countries, cities, and individuals, derive a title from a local or personal object of Devotion;

Thus Hungary is described as follows by a Roman-catholic divine: "Regnum hoc Hungariæ, propter vetustissimam constantemque Deiparæ venerationem, Mariani regni epitheton promeritum" (Abbé Jordanszky de Hæresi abjurandå, 1822, p. 122). Cp. Bishop Bull, Serm. iv., "Such is the worship given to the Blessed Virgin by many, that they deserve to be called Mariani rather than Christiani.

It is remarkable that one of the spring months, corresponding to our May, was sacred to Artemis, at Ephesus, and called Artemision. See the ancient Ephesian inscription (in Boeckh, Corpus, 2954), δλον τον μήνα ἀνακείσθαι τῆ θεῷ, ἄγεσθαι δὲ τὰς ἐορτὰς, καὶ τὴν τῶν ᾿Αρτεμισίων πανήγυριν. And the month of May is now called, in a large part of Christendom, the " Mois de Marie."

— της μεγάλης] the great. Elz. adds θεῶς, which is not in A, B, D, E. This popular ellipsis is found in the romance of an Ephesian writer of the fifth century, Xenophon Ephesius, 1 (not Xenophon's Ephesiaca, as cited by some), δμνύω την πάτριον τημών θε ν (see v. 37) την μεγάλην Έφεσ (ων Αρτεμιν. This passage (quoted by Rosenm. p. 263) is also of interest as showing the continuance of the worship of Artemis for some centuries after St. Paul's visit.

— τοῦ Διοπετοῦς] that fell from Jupiter. ἀγάλματος, ὅπερ ἄνωθεν ἐκ τοῦ Διὸς διαθήλασθαι (read καθάλασθαι, desiluisse) φόντο. (Ammon.) So the παλαιόν βρέταs of Minerra Polias at Athens, called ἀρχαΐον καl διοπετές. See Pausan. i. 26, φήμη έστι πεσείν έκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. Cp. Eurip. Iph. Taur. 977, οὐρανοῦ

How great was the triumph achieved and the change afterward wrought by Apostolic preaching in this great heathen and idolatrous City! They who boasted themselves votaries of the Goddess whom Asia and the World worshippeth; they who cried out for two hours "Great is Diana of the Ephesians," and who adored the Image that fell down from Jupiter, the Father of the gods of heathenism, became worshippers of the Father of Lights, and of Jesus Christ, the express Image of His Person, Who came down from heaven for our salvation. And the City of Ephesus, which was the votary of the heathen goddess, was the residence of St. Paul for two years and a half, and the Episcopal See of his son in the faith, Timothy, and changed its name for that of the Christian Apostle, St. John, who wrote his Gospel there, and died and was buried there, and it bears that name to this day, Aio-sol-iik, so called from him, the $\delta\gamma\iota\sigma$ $\theta\epsilon\delta\lambda\sigma\gamma\sigma$, who wrote of the Everlasting Word becoming Flesh and dwelling among us.

37. leροσύλουs] (1) spoilers or profaners of temples. (2) sacrilegious persons, as here.

38 Εἰ μὲν οὖν Δημήτριος καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ τεχνῖται ἔχουσι πρός τινα λόγον, άγόραιοι ἄγονται, καὶ ἀνθύπατοι εἰσίν· ἐγκαλείτωσαν ἀλλήλοις. 39 Εἰ δέ τι περὶ ἐτέρων ἐπιζητεῖτε, ἐν τῆ ἐννόμω ἐκκλησία ἐπιλυθήσεται. 40 Καὶ γὰρ κινδυνεύομεν έγκαλεισθαι στάσεως περί της σήμερον, μηδενός αἰτίου ὑπάρχοντος περὶ οὖ δυνησόμεθα ἀποδοῦναι λόγον τῆς συστροφῆς ταύτης.

— θεόν] So A, B, D, E*, and others; and this is confirmed by Xenophon, Ephes. i. See v. 35.—Είz. θεάν.
38. ἀγόραιοι ἄγονται] sc. ἡμέραι, court-days. Bos Ellips. v. ἡμέρα: ἀγόραιος μέν ἐστιν ἡ ἡμέρα, ἀγοραῖος δὲ ὁ Ἑρμῆς ὁ ἐπὶ τῆς ἀγοραῖος. (Ammon. p. 4. Winer, § 6, p. 51.)
Cp. Luke xxiv. 21, τρίτην ταύτην ἡμέραν ἄγει σήμερον. Assize-days, or court-days, come round, and Proconsuls attend, before whom the cause may be tried. It does not follow from these words that it was then the time of the sessions or assizes. these words that it was then the time of the sessions or assizes.

The expression is a general one, and therefore the plural ἀνθύπατοι (Proconsuls) is used: "Uno tempore, unus erat Proconsul, sed Scriba dicit in plurali, de eo quod nunquam non esse soleat.

(Bengel.) ανθύπατοι] The following ancient Inscription, of the age of Trajan, from an aqueduct at Ephesus (in Boeckh's Corpus, No. 2966, vol. ii. p. 606, and quoted by Howson, ii. 91), happily illustrates the accuracy of St. Luke's language in speaking of Ephesus, ή φιλοσέβαστος Ἐφεσίων βουλή, καὶ ὁ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΟΣ ΔΗΜΟΣ (see here, vv. 30. 33. 35), καθιέρωσαν, ἐπὶ ΑΝΘΤΠΑΤΟΥ (υ. 38) Πεδουκαίου Πρεισκείνου, ψηφισαμένου Τιβ. Κλ. 'Ιταλικοῦ, τοῦ ΓΡΑΜΜΑΤΕΩΣ (υ. 35) τοῦ ΔΗΜΟΥ.

There is an Ephesian coin extant of the age of Nero with the inscription, Ἐφ(εσίων) Αἰμόκλη ᾿Αουιόλα ΑΝΘΥΠΑΤΩι ΝΕΩ-KOPΩN. (Akermann, p. 55.)

CH. XX. 2. διελθών τὰ μέρη ἐκεῖνα] having gone through those parts. Probably as far as Illyricum. See the Epistle to the Romans, xv. 19, written from Hellas after the journey to Macedonia, to which he had come from Ephesus by Troas (see 2 Cor. ii. 13), and to which Titus came to him from Corinth. Cp. Paley, Hor. Paul. Ep. Rom. iv. p. 21. Howson, ii. 154.

— Έλλάδο] Hellas. Southern Greece distinguished from the Northern, or Macedonia, which contained Macedonia Proper, Illyricum, Epirus, and Thessaly. See xvi. 9, 10. 12.

This is the only place where the word Έλλάς occurs in the standard section of the section o

New Testament ;—a memorial of its grandeur before it was merged in the Roman province of Achaia. Perhaps in this wider circuit St. Paul visited the countries on the west of the mountain-chain of Pindus in his descent southward from Illyricum.

3. ἐπιβουλῆs] lying-in-wait; from malice, and perhaps, also, on account of the collection of money which he carried with him. 4. Σώπατρος] Sopater; probably the same as Sosipater, Rom.

- Πύββου] Not in Elz., but in A, B, D, E, and in many Cursives, and received by Lachm., Tisch., Born., Alford.

— Τιμόθεος] Timotheus of Lystra, xvi. 1.

— Τόχικος] Tychicus, mentioned therefore by St. Paul in writing to the 'Ασιανοί. See Eph. vi. 21. Col. iv. 7. 2 Tim.

Elz. and most editions have Τυχικός. But in proper names the accent is thrown back, which would have been otherwise on the last syllable. Thus in the New Testament we have $E\pi aire au \sigma s$, not -τδs, Φίλητοs, not -τδs, Εραστος, not -τδs. Cf. Winer, § 6,

The word XPINTON forms a signal and almost unique exception to this rule; as if it was the desire of those who used it, to remind themselves and others of its etymology.

- Τρόφιωοs] Trophimus, of Ephesus,—with St. Paul at Jeru-Vol. I.—Paut II.

salem, xxi. 29; and left by him at Miletus on his last visit to Rome. 2 Tim. iv. 20.

5. οὖτοι] Therefore none of these persons, here specified, can have been the author of the Acts.

- ἡμᾶs] us. St. Luke alone therefore, it seems, was in the company of St. Paul, between Corinth and Troas.

For an important deduction from this circumstance see 2 Cor. viii. 18.

Almost imperceptibly does the blessed Evangelist glide into St. Paul's company, and how unobtrusively does he intimate his own fellowship in labour and suffering with him! See above, Contrast with this modest silence the eulogistic declaration of St. Paul concerning his faithful companion St. Luke, Aovkas o laτρόs, δ ἀγαπητόs (Col. iv. 14); and Λουκᾶs ἐστι μόνος μετ' ἐμοῦ (2 Tim. iv. 11), "Let another praise thee, and not thine own lips" (Prov. xxvii. 2).

If there be a code of gentle demeanour, good breeding, courteous manners, and refined delicacy in the world, surely it is the New Testament.

έν Τρωάδι] at Troas. It is observable, that they waited for St. Paul and St. Luke at Troas, the place where he seems to have joined St. Paul in the first instance. See xvi. 8. 11.

Henceforth St. Luke seems to have remained with St. Paul till the end of the time comprehended in the Acts of the Apostles.

St. Luke appears to have been left by St. Paul at Philippi (see xvi. 16. 40; xvii. 1), and to have rejoined the Apostle in that neighbourhood.

It was St. Paul's practice, after he had planted the Gospel, ave some persons behind him to water it. Thus he left Silas to leave some persons behind him to water it. and Timotheus at Berœa, xvii. 14, and Aquila and Priscilla at Ephesus, xviii. 19, and Titus in Crete, Titus i. 5; cp. 1 Tim. i. 3. And perhaps this is what is implied of Erastus, 2 Tim. iv. 20, Εραστος εμεινεν εν Κορίνθω, he abode there to watch over the Church, and to endure patiently what he might be required to suffer for it.

Probably St. Luke was entrusted with similar duties at Philippi, and in its neighbourhood. From Macedonia, it seems, St. Luke was sent together with Titus by St. Paul, with the Second Epistle to the Corinthians; and he waited at Corinth for St. Paul; and thence accompanied him with the collection of alms for the poor Christians at Jerusalem, and from Jerusalem went with him to Cæsarea, and thence eventually to Rome. See note on 2 Cor. viii. 18.

6. μετά τὰς ἡμέρας τῶν ἀζύμων] after the days of unleavened bread. Observe the minute specification of days in this journey from Philippi to Jerusalem. There are two limits marked,—the days of Unleavened Bread at Philippi (xx. 6), and the Feast of Pentecost at Jerusalem (xx. 16; xxi. 15), with an interval of about seven weeks between them. It seems that it is intended to be inferred from the mention of his stay at Philippi at the Passover, that St. Paul did not feel himself obliged to attend the great fee. tivals of the Levitical Ritual at Jerusalem. And yet he was desirous of doing so on certain occasions, to show that he did not, under existing circumstances, disparage the observance of the Ceremonial Law. Cp. xviii. 21.

The days of Unleavened Bread had now been changed into the Christian Easter; and perhaps he stayed at Philippi in order to celebrate there the annual Festival of Christ's Resurrection with the Philippian Church. We find also here a mention of the celebration of the weekly Festival of the Resurrection, at Troas (see v. 7).

There are also two notices of a stay of seven days in this journey (see xx. 6, and xxi. 4), which may perhaps have a reference to the observance of the Christian Sunday. Cp. note below, — ἄχρις ἡ, π.] at the end of five days.—" Insolens forma loquendi pro Græcorum more πεμπταῖοι." (Valck.)

- ἡμέρας ἐπτά] seven days; a term thrice mentioned in the Acts as the period of St. Paul's stay (xxi. 4; xxviii. 14). See last note but one.

7. συνηγμένων ήμῶν] when we had been gathered together. For ἡμῶν Elz. has τῶν μαθητῶν; but ἡμῶν is found in A, B, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions, and has been received by Lachm., Tisch., Born., and Alf.—Elz. has also τοῦ before κλάσαι, but τοῦ is not in A, B, E, G, and numerous Cursives.

It may be added here, that in v. 8, for ἡμεν Elz. has ἡσαν, but ἡμεν is in A, B, D, E, G, H. This reading, and ἡμῶν in the thing is the thing the state of the things of the thi v. 7, are deserving of notice, as showing that St. Luke was present at what he describes; that he joined in the Holy Communion administered on that Lord's Day, and heard the Sermon of St. Paul, and saw Eutychus raised from the dead.

Observe the word συνηγμένων. They were not summoned, but came together, met for a stated religious purpose. Hence the word Συναξις. Cp. ἐπισυναγωγή, for Public Worship, Heb. x. 25, a word connected with the Συναγωγή of the Elder Church of the Jews-a word christianized by the Apostles. See note on James ii. 2.

Some learned writers have supposed (see Augustine, Epist. 36, p. 117, and Howson, ch. xx. vol. ii. p. 256) that the μία σαββάτων here mentioned is the evening which succeeded the Jewish Sabbath, and that St. Paul set forth on his journey early on the Sunday morning (pp. 256-259)

But it appears to be more probable, that this meeting for breaking of bread took place on the evening of Sunday: Kvριακή ήν (says Chrys.), και μέχρι μεσονυκτίου την διδασκαλίαν έκτείνει, και συνετάραζε την έορτην ό διάβολος, by the death of Eutychus; but this was overruled for the glory of God and the diffusion of the Gospel, by his restoration to life by St. Paul. Cp. Lewin's remarks, pp. 589-592.

It appears, then, that this was a stated Day and Hour for Christian assemblies, not perhaps without some reference to the fact mentioned by St. John (xx. 19), concerning the first Lord's Day of the Christian Church; "The same day at evening, being the first day of the week, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you!"

The Holy Supper was instituted on an evening; and it was "toward evening" when our Lord took bread and blessed it, and gave it to the two disciples at Emmaus (Luke xxiv. 29, 30).

It is not likely that St. Luke, writing for the use of Gentile Christians in all ages, should reckon his days from sunset, in the Jewish manner, especially when speaking of a Christian Festival. Even St. Matthew, writing more particularly for Jewish Christians, says (xxviii. 1), δψε σαββάτων, τῆ ἐπιφωσκούση εἰς μίαν σαββάτων.

On the time of receiving the Holy Communion, which varied in different Churches in ancient times, see Bingham, xiii. 9, and

These things were done on the Lord's Day (Chrys.). Observe the intimation here given, that the primitive Christians assembled specially on the Lord's Day for the reception of the Holy Eucharist (see ii. 46), and for hearing of the Word. Cp. Routh, R. S. i. 113. 120. 137. 180. 188. 224; ii. 4. 45. 240; iii. 100. 147. 157.

Justin Martyr, in the second century (Apol. i. 85, p. 143, ed. Ashton, = § 67, p. 269, ed. Otto) says, "On the day called Sunday, our common assembly of all who are in the cities and the country is held; and we read the Writings of the Apostles, and the Books of the Prophets." Then he describes the Sermon: and then the Administration of the Lord's Supper by the προεστώς and οἱ διάκονοι; and the collection of alms for the Poor. He adds, "We all assemble together in common on the day called Sunday, because it is the day on which God created the world out of darkness and δλη, and on which Jesus Christ our Saviour arose from the dead; for on the day before Saturday they crucified Him, and on the day after Saturday He arose from the grave, and taught His Apostles and disciples those things which we have delivered to you, for your consideration."

In the two preceding Chapters, Justin M. speaks distinctly of the two Sacraments, Baptism and the Lord's Supper. And beginning with this description in the Acts of the Apostles, we may trace through his Apology, written less than fifty years after St. John's death, a clear stream of teaching concerning primitive Christian Worship and Ritual.

On the institution and obligation of the Lord's DAY, see also above on Matt. xxviii. 1. Luke xxiii. 56; xxiv. 1. John xx. 26. Heb. iv. 9.

8. λαμπάδες] lamps. See Matt. xxv. 1. The miracle here related was wrought at night, but the mention of the lamps shows that those who were present could see it done. They could see Eutychus fall, and perhaps they took some of the lamps down with St. Paul, and saw the dead restored to life.

9. καθεζόμενος] So A, B, D, E, and several Cursives. Elz.

- τριστέγου] the third story : "tabulata tertia," Juvenal

10. ἐπέπεσεν] he fell upon him. "Hoc gestu non est usus Christus: est autem co usus Elias, Eliasus, Paulua." (Bengel.)

11. τον ἄρτον] Observe the article—' the bread,' or loaf, i.e. of the Holy Eucharist. Elz. has not the article, but it is in A, B, C, D*, and has been received by Lachm., Tisch., Bornemann, Alford.

The disciples had met to break bread (v. 7). St. Paul preaches till midnight. Eutychus falls from the window of the third story. Paul descends from the υπερφον, and revives him, and returns to break the bread; and after the breaking of the bread he has a repast (γεύεται, see x. 10), and converses till dawn, and departs on the morrow, i. e. on Monday morning.

See on v. 7.
13. 'Aσσον] Assos, in Mysia, twenty-four Roman miles south of Troas. Pausan. Eliac. ii. 4.

It was a difficult place of access; in allusion to which circumstance Nicostratus, a κιθαριστής, applied to it the line of Homer, -with a play upon the double meaning of the words door and άσσον, - Ασσον ίθ', ως κεν θασσον δλέθρου πείραθ' Ίκηαι (Iliad, (c. 143). By a singular error, the Vulgate has confounded the meaning of the word accor (nearer) in cap. xxvii. 13 with the name of this place, Assos, rendering that verse, "cum sustu-lissent de Asson;" and so Luther and others.

— ἢν διατεταγμένος] he had arranged. "Significatio media.

16. κεκρίκει] So A, B, C, D, E.—Elz. εκρινε. 17—36.] This Book,—the Acts of the Apostles,—is like a Divine Pandect of sacred specimens of Ecclesiastical Offices.

We have had an Apostolic specimen of Confirmation (above, viii. 14—17; xix. 6), and of the Administration of the Holy Communion, and of Preaching on the Lord's Day in a stated place of religious assembly (xx. 7), and we have evidence of many Presbyters settled in a City to feed the Church of God, and we see in this Address of St. Paul at Miletus an Apostolic pattern of an Episcopal Charge to the Clergy, at Visitations, or Diocesan

17. τους πρεσβυτέρους] the Presbyters, from Ephesus, which, as a large City, had many Presbyters (see xiv. 23); but they were subject, if not now, yet soon after, to one head, Timothy (1 Tim. i. 3), who had oversight of their doctrine (i. 3, 4. 1 Tim. V. 17—19), and performed the office of ordaining Presbyters and Deacons (1 Tim. iii. 1—10. 15; v. 22). Cp. Rev. ii. 1. Ignat. ad Ephes. § 1, where Ephesus has an ἐπίσκοπος, and also, § 5, a πρεσβυτέριον, δ συνήρμοσται τῷ ἐπισκόπφ, ὡς χορδαὶ κιθάρα, and διάκονοι, § 2.

18. ἐπίστασθε] ye know. A modest word—underrating the

19. δουλεύων τῷ Κυρίῳ] serving the Lord. Cp. Rom. xii. 11.

— μετὰ πάσης ταπ.] He uses the same words in his Epistle to the Ephesians, iv. 2.

- δακρύων] Elz. has πολλών before δακρύων; but it is not in A, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions.

20. οὐδὲν ὑπεστειλάμην] The metaphor, reintroduced v. 27, is taken from Navigation; and was therefore appropriate at a seaport, Miletus, and in the mouth of one now on a voyage, and addressing persons who had come from the great commercial city Ephesus. An internal evidence of truth. The Apostle St. Paul, by this metaphor, compares the Church to a Ship, and himself to Mariner or Cartain of it and the decreives of the Carach to it. a Mariner or Captain of it, and the doctrines of the Gospel to its sails; and he says that he οὐδἐν ὑπεστείλατο, lowered or reefed none of its canvas, but spread it all out boldly to the sun and wind, so as to conceal nothing, but to display the whole, and to give his hearers a perfect $\pi\lambda\eta\rho\rho\phi\rho\rho la$ of faith (see on Luke i. 1. Col. ii. 2; iv. 12), in their course over the sea of this world to the haven of life everlasting.

For this nautical use of δποστέλλομαι, -- δποστέλλεσθαι τὰ For this natureal use of υποστελλομαι, —υποστελλεσθαι τα iστία, see Pindar, in Passow, Lexic.; and compare the Apostle's use of the natical word στελλόμενοι in his Epistle to the maritime cities Thessalonica (2 Thess. iii. 6) and Corinth (2 Cor. viii. 20). See also 2 Thess. ii. 2.

22. δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι] Some (e.g. Meyer) interpret this 'constrained by my own spirit.' Others (Howson, ii. 269),

'a prisoner in spirit, not in body.' The more ancient interpreters (see Chrys., Theophyl., Clem.) explain it, bound by the Holy Spirit. As Didymus says (in Caten. p. 333), "He that is united to the Holy Ghost is bound in Him; he is the prisoner of Christ; in these shairs he wrighters there are more than the prisoner of the prisoner of Christ; in these chains he rejoices, he wears them as ornaments" ματικούς μαργαρίτας. Ignatius, Eph. § 11). They are bands of love. He bears in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus (Gal. vi. 17), and dies daily (1 Cor. xv. 31). Paul was now going up to Jerusalem to the Anniversary of the Descent of the Holy Ghost (v. 16). And as if his mind was dwelling on that event, he refers to the operations of the Holy Spirit in his speech, vv. 23. 28.

The Vulgate well renders it, alligatus Spiritu, constrained and carried by the Holy Ghost. Perhaps it is a metaphor derived from the practice of chaining prisoners to their keepers (see xii. 6; vvi 33), who carried them to a particular place. Thus Ignat. ad xxi. 33), who carried them to a particular place. Thus Ignat. ad Rom. 5, ἀπό Συρίας μέχρι 'Ρώμης θηρισμαχῶ δεδεμένος δέπα λεοπάρδοις. So St. Paul was now carried as a prisoner to Jerusalem,—but it was by the Holy Ghost. This explains his conduct in reference to the revelations described in xxi. 4.

It also shows that St. Paul did not run into hazards with-th also shows that St. Paul did not run into hazards without Divine guidance. As Chrys. says, οὐκ ἐπὶ τοὺς κινδύνους δίπτων ἑαυτὸν, ἀλλὶ ἡγούμενος τοῦ πνεύματος εἶναι τὸ πρόσταγμα See further on this verse, the note on xxi. 4.

23. μοι] to me. So A, B, C, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions. Elz. omits μοι. The pronoun is important, as showing that this prophecy met St. Paul on his arrival at different Cities in succession.

— λέγον] D, E, G, and many Cursives, have λέγων, mascuine,—a reading which deserves consideration.

— δεσμά με—μένουσιν] bonds await me. It has been said by some, that this is a mere figure of speech, expressing what might have been expected by the Apostle on probable grounds; and that it is not an utterance of a divinely-inspired prophecy. But, on the contrary, it was not likely that St. Paul, being a Roman Citizen, should have been bound. See Acts xxiii. 29.

— θλίψεις] afflictions. Compare the Epistle to the Romans, xv. 30, where he asks their prayers that he may be delivered from them that the rest believe that the second that the second

xv. 30, where he asks their prayers that he may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judæa, and that he may come to Rome. See Paley, Hor. Paul. pp. 22-24.

24. μετὰ χαρᾶs] with joy. Omitted by A, B, D, and some Cursives and Versions; perhaps rightly.

25. ἐγὰ οἶδα ὅτι οὐκέτι ὅψεσθε κ.τ.λ.] I know that ye all will see my face no more. See v.38. It has been argued from 2 Tim. iv. 13-20, where St. Paul speaks of being at Miletus after this, that he was not here divinely inspired. but was mistaken in this that he was not here divinely inspired, but was mistaken in this anticipation; and this, it is said, is accounted for from vv. 22, 23,

His words are, οὐκέτι ὄψεσθε τὸ πρόσωπόν μου ὑμεῖς πάν-7 85, -and he might easily have touched again at Miletus without ever seeing all or any of the Presbyters of Ephesus. Besides, as Bengel observes, "Rediit Româ in Asiam compluribus post annis Apostolus, sed intereà defuncti aliòve delati sunt ferè omnes isti." It may indeed be inferred, that he never revisited Ephesus after this time, or only after a long interval. Cp. on 1 Tim. iii. 14.

την βασιλείαν] the kingdom. So A, B, C. Elz. adds τοῦ - την ρασιλείαν] της κικομούπ. So A, B, C. Επε. ασια του Θεού, D τοῦ Ἰησοῦ: ἡ βασιλεία, the Kingdom, is emphatic, as in Matt. viii. 12; xxiv. 14; and το δυομα, the name, Acts v. 41. So ἡ ὁδὸς, xix. 23, the way. All these are significant of the truth,—that there is no other Kingdom which will remain, but that of God; no other Name, by which men are to be saved, than that of Christ; no other Way which can lead us to heaven, but that of the Gospel. Cp. note below, 1 John ii. 6.

26. καθαρός έγώ] pure am I. So A, G, H, and most Cursives, and Tisch., reading έγω, and not είμι, which is in B, C, D, E.

27. ὑπεστειλάμην] On the nautical metaphor here, see v. 20.
— πᾶσαν τὴν βουλὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ] all the counsel of God; reasserted from v. 20. A strong passage against the "Doctrine of Development." St. Paul says that he would not have been pure from their blood, i.e. he would have been guilty of destroying their souls, if in the time he had been at Ephesus, less than three years (v. 31), he had not declared to them "the whole counsel of God." Cp. Eph. i. 11.

What would he say, if he heard, that now, after the Church has been in the world 1800 years, a new article of faith has been declared, and an addition been made by men to the "whole counsel of God?" Cp. Gal. i. 8.

28. προσέχετε οὖν—αΐματος] An exposition of this text, and an interesting application of it to the circumstances of the Church of England, may be seen in the Latin Concio of Bp. Andrewes, then a Presbyter, to the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury, in 1593. Latin Works, p. 29.

— το Πνεῦμα τὸ ἄγιον ἔθετο] the Holy Ghost made you over-Another assertion of the Divinity and Personality of the Holy Ghost (see v. 3; viii. 29; xiii. 2. 4), and of His Divine office in Ordinations. See above on xiii. 2—4.

- ἐπισκόπους] overseers. Every πρεσβύτερος is an ἐπίσκοπος τοῦ ποιμνίου, an overseer of the flock committed to his charge; but the ἐπίσκοπος is also an overseer of other Pastors; which a Presbyter is not. See below, the note before 1 Tim. iii.

S. Irenœus (iii. 14), indeed, supposes that some Bishops as well as Presbyters were present, and that St. Paul addresses them; "Paulus in Mileto convocatis Episcopis et Presbyteris qui erant ab Epheso et à reliquis proximis civitatibus," &c. So Ammonius here, who gives also the other exposition; and cp. Professor Blunt, who says, p. 51, "Paul sent for the Elders of the Church of Ephesus, or its Bishops, or rather both, to attend him at Miletus," and who observes that the authority of Irenœus is of more value here, from his connexion with Polycarp and the neighbourhood.

However, it is certain, that some of these ἐπίσκοποι, if not all, were presbyters.

On the subsequent restriction of the word Ἐπίσκοποι to the highest of the Three Orders of the Christian Ministry, see Dr. Bentley (upon Freethinking, Camb. 1743, pp. 136, 137), "They (the Bishops), with all Christian antiquity, never thought themselves and their order to succeed the Scripture Επίσκοποι, but the Scripture 'Απόστολοι: they were διάδοχοι τῶν 'Αποστόλων, the successors of the Apostles.

"The sum of the matter is this:-Though new institutions are formed, new words are not coined for them, but old ones borrowed and applied. Έπίσκοπος, whose general idea is overseer, was a word in use long before Christianity; a word of universal relation to occonomical, civil, military, naval, judicial, and religious matters.

"This word was assumed to denote the governing and presiding persons of the Church, as Διάκονος (another word of vulgar and diffused use) to denote the ministerial.

Timothy at Ephesus, and Titus at Crete, A.D. 64, four years before his death), what name were these successors to be called by? not 'Απόστολοι, Apostles; their modesty, as it seems, made them refuse it: they would keep that name proper and sacred to the first extraordinary messengers of Christ, though they really succeeded them in their office, in due part and measure, as the ordinary governors of the Churches. "It was agreed, therefore, over all Christendom at once, in the very next generation after the Apostles, to assign and appropriate to them the word Ἐπίσκοπος, or Bishop. From that time to this, that appellation, which before included a Presbyter, has been restrained to a superior order. And here's nothing in all this but what has happened in all languages and communities in the world. See the Notitia of the Roman and Greek Empires,

"The Presbyters, therefore, while the Apostles lived, were Επίσκοποι, overseers. But the Apostles, in foresight of their approaching martyrdom, having selected and appointed their successors in the several cities and communities (as St. Paul did course of time did not vary from its primitive signification."

— τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ] the Church of God, which He purchased with His own blood. On the purchase of the Church by the price of Christ's blood, see 1 Cor. vi. 20. 1 Pet. i. 18, 19.

and you'll scarce find one name of any state employment that in

Rev. v. 9.

As to the reading of this passage, it is to be observed, that B and many cursives, and Vulg., and the Syriac, and Chrys., and Basil, and Epiphanius, and Ambrose have Ocov; and this reading is received by Elz., Mill, Whitby, Bengel, Knapp, Rinck, Scholz, Alford, Bloomf. And so Bp. Pearson, Art. ii. p. 241.

Other MSS. have Kupiou (not Ocov), particularly A, C*, D, E, and the Coptic, Sahidic. Armenian Versions, and Irenœus and the Copic, Sahdic, Armenian versions, and Ireneus (iii. 14), Didymus (de Spir. § 2), Euseb. (in Esa. xxxv. 9), Cyril Alex. (Mai viii. pt. 2, pp. 125, 6), Jerome and Augustine; and this reading is preferred by Lachm., Tisch., Bornemann, Olshausen, Davidson, Meyer, Hackett, and Tregelles, p. 283.

Others, C, G, H, and more than 100 Cursive MSS. and Kυρίου και Θεοῦ, and this reading is preferred by Venema and

The choice seems to be between Kυρίου and Θεοῦ. The evidence for each is strong.

It may be remarked that St. Luke uses the word Κύριος in application to Christ, as appointing and ordaining the Ministers of His Church, as here. See on Luke x. 1.

And in support of $K\nu\rho lo\nu$, it may also be urged that the word $K\nu\rho los$ would mark His Lordship and Dominion over her, as His Household and Kingdom; and would be a happy preparation for the term by which the ἐκκλησία was to be described, i.e. Κυριακή, Church, the spouse and body of the Κύριοs, and purchased and purified by His blood. See above, ii. 25. 36.

There would also be a memento here to Bishops and Pastors that they are not to consider the ἐκκλησία as their own, but as Christ's, and that they are not κατακυριεύειν, dominari, over what is τοῦ Κυρίου, Domini. 1 Pet. v. 3.

On the other hand—in behalf of the other reading, τοῦ Θεοῦ,—it appears (as Whitby observes, p. 489), that St. Paul never uses the phrase ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Κυρίου, whereas he often employs the words ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Θεοῦ. See 1 Cor. i. 2; x. 32; xi. 16. 22; xv. 9. 2 Cor. i. 1. Gal. i. 13. 1 Thess. ii. 14. 2 Thess. i. 4. 1 Tim. iii. 5. 15.

The matter reduces itself to this question,

Is it more likely that Ocov should have been altered by Copyists into Kuplov, or Kuplov be altered into Ocov?

Perhaps the former may seem the more probable alternative. (1) No one would have been staggered by Kuplou, or have been inclined to change that reading.

(2) But many might have been perplexed by $\Theta\epsilon o \hat{v}$, with αίματος following it.

(3) Some orthodox persons might think that it seemed to give some countenance to the Noetian or Sabellian heresy, which confounded the two Persons of the Father and the Son; or to the Eutychian Heresy, which confounded the two Natures of Christ in One; or to the Apollinarian, Theopaschite, and Patripassian, which imputed suffering to God,—and to God the Father.

(4) It cannot, therefore, be concluded with some, that a change was made here from a theological bias.

(5) It is also observable that the word Kupios has been interpolated, in connexion with Ἐκκλησία, in Eph. v. 29, where

A, B, D*, F, G have Χριστός.

(6) It has been said that the testimony of Athanasius is opposed to the reading of Θεοῦ. But this allegation is groundless. His words are (contr. Apollinarium, ii. § 14, vol. i. p. 758), οὐδαμοῦ αῖμα Θεοῦ δίχα σαρκὸς παραδεδώκασιν al γραφαί, ἡ Θεὸν διὰ σαρκὸς παθόντα καὶ ἀναστάντα. ᾿Αρειανῶν τὰ τοιαῦτα τολμήματα, ἐπειδή μήτε Θεὸν ἀληθινον τον υίον τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁμολο-γοῦσιν, ai δὲ ἄγιαι γραφαὶ ἐν σαρκὶ Θεοῦ καὶ σαρκὸς Θεοῦ ἀνθρώπου γενομένου αίμα και πάθος και ανάστασιν κηρύττουσι.

Athanasius is controverting the Apollinarian error that the Godhead itself suffered, and he asserts that the Scriptures have no where predicated to us the blood of God without the flesh; or that God suffered in the flesh (some read δίχα σαρκός here, and it may be the true reading): the older editions have διὰ σαρκός for δίχα σαρκός in the preceding clause.

Athanasius might have written these words, and yet have read here ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ; for there is no representation, in the passage so read, of the αίμα Θεού δίχα σαρκός. St. Paul would thus say, "the Church of God, which He (Who is Man as well as God) purchased with His own Blood."

(7) The argument from St. Paul's use of Ἐκκλησία Θεοῦ, and his non-use of Εκκλησία Κυρίου, confirms the same conclusion.

(8) It is probable that this passage gave occasion to the subsequent use of the still bolder expression αἶμα Θεοῦ in other writers, particularly Ignatius, writing to the same Church,-the Ephesian,—as that whose presbyters were now addressed by St. Paul, Eph. i. So Tertullian, ad Uxor. ii. 3, "Sanguine Dei." Clem. Alex. " Quis dives," &c., c. 34, αίματι Θεοῦ παιδόs. Cp. Ignat. ad Rom. 6, ἄφετέ με μιμητὴν είναι τοῦ πάθους τοῦ Θεοῦ μου, where some copyists have inserted Χριστοῦ, to give ease to the phrase, as here. And cp. Jacobson in Clem. Rom. 2, p. 13. See also Wetstein here, p. 596, and the note in Catena, p. 338, where it is said, "Many of weak minds, or of perverse opinions, speak evil of those who use the terms σωμα και αίμα Θεού τδ σωτήριον, but they may hear what our Lord says; and then reference is made to John vi. 35. 48. 53, and the conclusion is, Do not scruple at the words αίμα και σώμα Θεοῦ τὸ σωτήριον, as the Jews do; for by it thou hast been redeemed and art become a son of God, and an heir of life everlasting." And as to the doctrine thus taught Bede says, "Non dubitat sanguinem Dei dicere propter unionem persone in duobus naturis Ejusdem Jesu Christi, propter quam etiam dictum, Filius Hominis Qui est in cœlo."

(John iii. 13.) "Christ our Saviour is 'Agnus Dei,' " says Bp. Sanderson, i. 195. "He is also 'Agnus Deus;' He is God, the Son of God, Very God of Very God; and it is this dignity of His Nature especially, and not His Innocency only, that setteth such a value upon His Blood that it is of an infinite price, of infinite merit, able to satisfy an infinite justice, and to appease an infinite wrath." See also Waterland on the Trinity, c. 2, p. 39, who approves $\Theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$; and likewise Blunt on the Early Fathers, p. 466. Cp. Titus ii. 13, 14.

32. $\tau \hat{\varphi} \lambda \delta \gamma \varphi \tau \hat{\eta} s \chi \delta \rho \iota \tau \sigma s$] To His Word, of which the essential quality and characteristic is Grace. On this use of the Genitive, see note on Matt. xxii. 11 and James i. 25.

It is to be remarked, that "the Word" here is understood by some ancient Expositors to be Christ, who is "full of Grace," and from Whom all Grace has come to man. John i. 14. 16.

Cp. 1 John i. 1, τοῦ Λόγου τῆς ζωῆς.

And there is much that is personal here ascribed to the Λόγος. How can what is not personal be said to give an Inheritance? So Ammonius, who, from the addition of the participle δυναμένφ in the singular, deduces an argument for the Unity of the Two Persons in one Godhead, as follows;

Δείκνυσιν, ότι ὁ Πατήρ και Θεός και ὁ τούτου υίὸς Ἰησοῦς, ὁ Θεοῦ Λόγος ἔνεισι (read ἔν εἰσιν, unum sunt)· οὐ γὰρ εἶπε, τοὶς δυναμένοις πληθυντικῶς, ἀλλ' ἐνικῷ ὀνόματι τὴν μοναδικὴν οὐσίαν ἐσήμανεν, εἰπὰν 'τῷ δυναμένο.'

It is indeed taken for granted by many modern writers, that the title δ $\Lambda \delta \gamma os$ is only applied by St. John to Christ. But this assertion may be questioned. See on Luke i. 2. Heb. iv. 12. James i. 18. 1 Pet. i. 23.

If St. John had been already at Ephesus, this mode of speech would have been very appropriate there, as a testimony to the unity of the doctrine of the two Apostles St. Paul and St. John. And even if St. John had not been there, yet, as St. Paul spoke under the guidance of the same Spirit as inspired St. John, he might and would very fitly bequeath this parting benediction to the Ephesian Presbyters, testifying his own adhesion to the great doctrines concerning the Logos, which were afterwards to be preached more fully at Ephesus by St. John.

4. aveuporres τους μαθητάς] having found out the disciples, —an intimation that they were either not very numerous, or were not publicly known. - διὰ τοῦ Πνεόματος] through the Spirit. Cp. δεδεμένος τῷ Πνεόματι (xx. 22). This is explained by v. 11. The Holy Spirit revealed to them that he would be bound there (see xx. 23); and they, acting on this intimation, dissuaded him from going to Jerusalem. But the Spirit had done more than this for St. Paul. The Holy Spirit had not only foreshown to him the future, but had also revealed to him how to act under the circumstances foreshown. The Holy Spirit had bound him to go to Jerusalem

(xx. 22, where see note), even though he was to be bound there; and therefore he went (see xx. 24, and below, xxi. 11-13). And at length those persons who had foretold his bonds, acquiesced in his resolution to go, as divinely inspired, and said, "the Lord's will (not ours) be done!" (v. 14.) The prophecy concerning his bonds was fulfilled. And the Lord assured St. Paul, in a vision at Jerusalem, that he had rightly understood and obeyed His will in going up to Jerusalem, xxiii. 11.

5. αἰγιαλόν] the sandy shore. Acts xxvii. 39. Cp. xx. 36.
The place of this holy and affecting farewell was shown many centuries afterwards; "Hodie monstratur in arenis locus, ubi pariter orabant." (Bede.)

6. ἀπησπασάμεθα] we gave a parting embrace to. Cp. the use of the preposition ἀπο in ἀποταξάμενος, Acts xviii. 18. 21. Elz. has προσηνξάμεθα και ἀσπασάμενοι. But the reading in the text is authorized by some of the best MSS.

7. Πτολεμαΐδα] Ptolemais. Accho (Judges i. 31); still so called by Arabs, and Acre, or St. Jean d'Acre, by Europeans. 8. εξελθόντες] Elz. adds of περί τον Παθλον, which is not in

A, B, C, E, and is probably a gloss.

— Φιλίππου τοῦ εὐαγγελιστοῦ] Philip the Evangelist, called here "one of the seven;" i. e. Philip the Deacon; see on Acts viii. 5, and the statements of Isidorus and S. Jerome, quoted by Tillemont, Mém. ii. 30. Hence Ammonius says here, "it was lawful for a Deacon to live as a married man." On Philip's connexion with Cæsarea, see viii. 40.

This was the third time Paul was at Cæsarea. See ix. 30;

xviii. 22. It is now prophesied at Casarea, that St. Paul would be bound; and with a special providence, for he was to be brought to Cæsarea a prisoner, and to remain there in custody for two years, xxiii. 33; xxiv. 27.

Εἰz. ἀποσκευασάμενοι. D has ἀποταξάμενοι. The sense is, 'having packed up,' 'having taken what was necessary for the journey.' (Chrys., Œcumen.) Vulg. renders it 'præparati,' and other Versions give a like meaning, and Hesych. interprets it by εὐτρεπισθέντες.

The word seems to be introduced, in order to show that, though St. Paul had full intimation of sufferings and imprisonment at Jerusalem, yet he proceeded thither with calmness, and in a sober and orderly manner, without neglecting any common duties, such as prudence might suggest. Compare his request for his "cloke and parchments" just before his martyrdom (2 Tim. iv. 13). There are no symptoms of a heated imagination, or of a fanatical enthusiasm, or a reckless excitement, in his character and demeanour, in the most trying circumstances.

 άγοντες παρ' ῷ ξενισθῶμεν] bringing with them a certain Mnason a Cyprian—with whom we should lodge, i. e. at Jerusalem. Objections have been made by several recent Expositors to this translation of the Vulgate, "adducentes [secum] apud quem hospitaremur Mnasonem," which is the sense adopted by the English Authorized Version;

It has been said, that the true meaning is,-" conducting us to the house of Mnason (at Jerusalem), with whom we should lodge." In this case the construction would either be αγοντες (ἡμᾶς) Μνάσων, which is Winer's opinion, § 31, p. 192, or by attraction, αγοντες ἡμᾶς παρὰ Μνάσωνα παρ' ῷ ξενισθῶμεν. See Meyer here, and Winer, § 24, p. 149, and others;

But perhaps in this case, as in many others, the older interpretation (which, as Winer allows, p. 192, is unexceptionable, grammatically) is the true one. St. Luke's design in mentioning this incident seems to be this. At first the Christians of Caesarea attempted to dissuade St. Paul from going to Jerusalem (v. 12); but on his earnest expostulation with them, they desisted from their entreaties, and said, "the Lord's will be done" (v. 14). And not only so, but some of these disciples of Cæsarea sped him on his journey to Jerusalem, and accompanied him, bringing with them a person with whom he and his companions would lodge at Jerusalem, Mnason of Cyprus. Thus they, who at first would have deterred him from going to Jerusalem, were prevailed upon by St. Paul (such was his courage and constancy, and such his influence over them) to provide facilities for his journey thither, and for his reception there;

It was also an honourable circumstance to Mnason of Cyprus, that though he had heard, no doubt, from the men of Casarea that the Spirit had revealed that St. Paul would be made a prisoner in Jerusalem, yet he was willing to accompany him thither (a distance of about eighty miles), and to afford him and his companions a lodging there.

These considerations seem to be lost sight of in the modern interpretation, which is also liable to the objection, that, according to it, St. Paul is said to be brought to Mnason to lodge, before his arrival at Jerusalem, which is not related till the following verse.

— ἀρχαίω μαθητῆ] an original disciple, i. e. from the first preaching of the Gospel. See on xv. 7, and xi. 15. Such a per-

The Bishop of Jerusalem is here presented to the view, surrounded by all his Presbyters, who are the "Concilium Episcopi," (see Hieron. in Esa. iii. It has, indeed, been said by some, that St. Paul only paid the charges of the four Nazarites (v. 23), but was not himself under the Vow of a Nazarite;

But the word άγνίσθητι here, and the other kindred words used in this narrative, prove that he associated himself with them in the vow itself.

The word ayul(w is the word used by the LXX for no (Nazar), in Numb. vi. 3, and άγνισμός for τις (Nezer), Nazi-The best explanation, therefore, of the word άγνίσθητι and άγνισθεις (v. 26), and άγνισμός (v. 26), is to be derived from the use of those words by the LXX in the chapter concerning the Nazaritic Vow, Numb. vi. 3, 4, από οἴνου άγνισθήσεται, he shall keep himself separate as a Nazarite from wine πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας της εὐχης αὐτοῦ, which is expressed in v. 5 by πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τοῦ ἀγνισμοῦ, and v. 8, πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς εὐχῆς ἄγιος ἔσται Κυρίφ.

It is probable that St. Paul was already under a vow of Nazariteship; and was advised to join himself as such with these four Nazarites. See xviii. 18, and below, v. 27.

The knowledge that he had not long since voluntarily taken on himself a Nazarite's vow (xviii. 18), was enough to suggest the recommendation here made to him by St. James, and the Presbyters of the Church of Jerusalem.

Origen (in Ep. ad Rom. lib. ii. 13) speaks of St. Paul as having offered 'sacrificia purificationis,' and S. Jerome (Epist. ad Augustin. Ep. 74) supposes St. Paul to have assumed the condiition of a Nazarite, "obtulisse sacrificia, et exercuisse nudipedalia;" and so Augustine, Ep. 82.

The reason of St. Paul's compliance is well stated by Augustine (Epist. ad Hieron. 82), who observes, that by his practice with regard to the ceremonies of the Levitical Law, St. Paul taught "nec Judæos tunc ab eis tanquam à nefariis prohibendos, nec Gentiles ad ea tanquam necessaria compellendos.

"Paul became (says Isidore in Caten. p. 352) a Jew to the Jews, when he made himself a Nazarite in the Temple, and offered oblations; and, on the same principle, he circumcised Timothy, and sent him to preach to the Jews, thus cancelling circumcision by means of circumcision itself." So also Œcumenius, who says that "Paul underwent the tonsure, and complied with the Law." See also below, note on 2 26

That he engaged in the vow of a Nazarite, has therefore, it seems, been rightly concluded by most later Expositors, e. g. Grotius, Rosenmüller, Olshausen, Meyer, Baumgarten, Hackett, Alford, and others.

There was a special reason, why St. Paul, a Christian Apostle, should engage in a vow of a Nazarite. That Vow pledged the person who took it to abstain from all strong drink. And he who was known to be under the vow of a Nazarite, was known to be living a life of abstinence. The sight of the Nazarite's locks would proclaim this.

St. Paul had been converted by a heavenly Vision. He had Revelations in Arabia, and a Trance in the temple at Jerusalem (Acts ix. 4; xxii. 6. 17; xxvi. 12. 1 Cor. xv. 8. 2 Cor.

He relied much on the arguments thence drawn, in his public addresses to the People of Jerusalem (xxii. 6. 17), and to Agrippa

Let it be recollected, that the Jews attempted to refute the evidence of the miracle of Pentecost, by a scornful insinuation, "These men are full of new wine" (Acts ii. 13). It was very expedient that St. Paul, whose conversion was miraculous, and who was favoured with an "abundance of Revelations" (2 Cor. xii. 7), should be able to meet the objection, which would in all probability be raised against him, that he was under a strong mental excitement, and that he was inflamed by enthusiasm and deluded by fanaticism.

One of the best refutations of such an insinuation, and one which would have most weight with the Jews, would be found in the voluntary assumption of the Vow of a Nazarite. This would show, that like the Baptist, whom the Jews contrasted with Christ, whom they dared to call a wine-bibber (Matt. xi. 18, 19), he was living an abstemious and austere life, that his judgment was cool, his mind calm, and, as he himself says, that the words which he spake when describing his own Conversion, were words of truth and soberness (xxvi. 25).

Consequently, though we hear it alleged by Festus against him, that "much learning made him mad" (xxvi. 24), we never hear it surmised, that he was labouring under physical or intellectual excitement.

Thus, in his Christian prudence, St. Paul made the cere-monial Vows of the Levitical Law subsidiary to the diffusion of the saving Doctrines of Evangelical Truth.

Such advice as that which is here proffered by St. James, came very appropriately from him, who is described by Hegesippus (cp. Euseb. ii. 23) as conforming in his own person to the usages of a Nazarite; ούτος έκ κοιλίας μητρός αὐτοῦ άγιος ην οίνον και σίκερα οὐκ ἔπιεν, ξυρὸν ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἀνέβη, -a passage which affords an interesting illustration and confirmation of the narrative of St. Luke.

Perhaps, also, these characteristics of St. James may have pointed him out as specially fit to occupy the Episcopal seat at Jerusalem, as a person most conciliatory to the Jews.

The following particulars concerning a Nazarite's Vow, are from Lightfoot (i. p. 1092. On the Temple, chap. xviii.). Referring to the Talmud (tract. Nazir, per. 1), he says, "Nazarism was most ordinarily for thirty days, though sometimes it was for years, and sometimes for term of life. He whose vow was expired was to bring three beasts, one for a burnt-offering, another for a sin-offering, and a third for a peace-offering (Nazir 6). If he polled his head in the country, as Paul did at Cenchreæ, he was to bring his hair and burn it under the caldron, where his peaceoffering was boiling, which was in this place of the Temple that we are speaking of (i. e. at the s.E. angle of the Temple).

"The Jews in the Treatise (of the Talmud) alleged in the Margin (i.e. the Treatise Nazir), speak of 'a Samson Nazarite' and 'an everlasting Nazarite,' not but that Samson was a Nazarite always, but they use this distinction in reference to the manner of the Vow-making. He that took on him to be a Nazarite like Samson was, saying, 'Behold, I will be a Nazarite like Samson,' or 'like the son of Manoah,' or 'like the husband of Delilah,' or 'like him that carried away the gates of Azzah,' or 'like him whose eyes the Philistines put out,' such an one might never cut his hair, but it must ever grow upon him; and such a Nazarite did Absalom take upon him to be, but he was forced to cut his hair once every year, it was so heavy. But he that was a Nazarite everlasting (that is, that took upon him Nazarism upon other terms, as he that said, 'I will be a Nazarite according to the number of the hairs of my head,' or ' the dust of the Earth,' or 'sand of the sea-shore'), he might poll his head once in thirty days.

"But he whose vow was expired, wheresoever he polled his hair, was to come to this place, and here to boil his Peace-offering, and to burn his hair; and the Priest took the shoulder as it boiled, and a cake, and a wafer of unleavened bread, and put all upon the hands of the Nazarite and waved them; and then was the Nazarite at liberty to drink wine, and to be defiled by the

- δαπάνησον επ' αυτοις] expend money upon them, -do an act of charity in helping them to perform their vow, and to shave their heads, by contributing to the necessary expenses of the sacrifices to be offered; on which see Numb. vi. 13.

Thus refute the calumnies against thee, not by word, but by deed; and do this here, not in a Gentile city, but at Jerusalem, where no scandal will be given to thy Gentile converts by this compliance with the Law. (Chrys., Theophyl.)

It was usual for wealthier Jews to assist their poorer brethren in this way. Thus Agrippa showed his liberality at Jerusalem, in his regard for the Levitical Law. Joseph. xix. 6. 1, els

The reason of this may appear from the specification of the sacrificial offerings required of a Nazarite, which were numerous and expensive. (See Numb. vi.)

— διαγγέλλων την έκπληρωσιν των ήμερων του άγνισμου, έως οδ προσηνέχθη ύπερ ένδς εκάστου αὐτῶν ἡ προσφορά] announcing the fulfilment of the days of their Nazarite vow, until the (legal) offering was offered for each one of them.

That the ἐκπλήρωσις τῶν ἡμερῶν means the fulfilment of the days of the Nazarite vow, is evident from the passages in the Book of Numbers, according to the LXX, which describe the vow. See Numb. vi. 5, concerning the Nazarite's vow, ξυρόν οὐκ ἐπελεύσεται ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ, ἕως ἃν πληρωθῶσιν αἰ ημέραι, δσας ηθξατο τῷ Κυρίφ: and vi. 13, ἢ αν ημέρα πληρώση ημέρας εὐχης αὐτοῦ, προσοίσει αὐτὸς... then the προσφοραί are specified; and then, v. 18, ξυρήσεται δ ηὐγμένος παρά τὰς θύρας της σκηνής του μαρτυρίου την κεφαλην της εύχης αὐτού. And then he shall burn his hair in the fire; and after he has shaven his head, the Priest shall take a part of the offering and place it in his hands, and offer it before the Lord. And so the ceremony was ended, and the vow was paid.

εως οδ προσηνέχθη is rendered by Vulg. 'donec offerretur,' and by Engl. Vers. 'until an offering should be offered;' and this seems to be the correct rendering. See the examples of this structure in De Wette, Alford, and Kühner, § 846.

The sense appears to be this: St. Paul undertook to be the spokesman and paymaster of the four Nazarites. As such he took them with him to the Temple, and presented them to the Priests, and gave to the Priests the official notification that the term of their vow was expired; and made himself responsible for the payment of the fees for sacrifices to be offered, and services to be performed in the behalf of his presentees, before their heads could be shaved and they be released from their vow.

It is probable that this release could not be consummated immediately, nor indeed till a term of seven days (see v. 27) had expired after this announcement and presentation were made. This was reasonable. It was necessary, that inquiries should be made by the Priests as to the identity of the persons presented for release, and as to the fact of their having complied with the terms of their vow (by abstinence from wine, by non-pollution, and the other conditions) before the sacrifice could be rightly offered for them, and they be emancipated from their vow.

Hence the phrase was ob. St. Paul was their representative, and solicitor of their cause; and he must continue to act in this capacity till the seven days were completed, and the Priests were satisfied that all the requisites of the vow had been duly ful-

This is confirmed by what he himself states (xxiv. 18), that they who arrested him, nearly seven days after (xxi. 27), "found him purified (as a Nazarite) in the Temple:" i. e. he was in attendance there, promoting the cause of the four poor Nazarites, as well as his own, with a view to their release from the vow.

27. al ἐπτὰ ἡμέραι] the seven days. Some Expositors interpret these seven days as "the feast week of Pentecost" (Wieseler, 109. Baumgarten, ii. 448). Vol. I.—Part II

But the Feast of Pentecost lasted only one day (Acts ii. 1), though later Jews extended it to two (Jahn, § 352. Winer,

The true interpretation seems to be, "the seven days," which were required to intervene between the notice given to the Priests of the expiration of the Vow, and the consummation of the Release from it.

This opinion is confirmed by Ammonius in Catena, p. 351, and Theophylact, p. 156, who says, έθος ην τους έχοντας εὐχην κείρεσθαι την κεφαλήν μετά το άγνισθηναι, και ούτως έπι έπτά ήμέρας ποιείν προσφοράν ύπερ έαυτων.

Some reasons for this interval have been suggested in the preceding note.

Why was it for seven days? Probably, because this was a stated period for purifications (Exod. xxix. 37. Levit. xii. 2; xiii. 5; xiv. 8; xv. 19. Numb. xii. 14; xix. 14. Ezek. xliii. 26).

And in the Law concerning Nazarites (Numb. vi. 9), if a person under a Nazarite Vow had incurred a ceremonial pollution, he could not shave his head immediately, and begin his term afresh, but he must wait seven days, till the offerings could be offered for him, and his head be shaved, and then he was restored to the Nazaritic state, and he began his vow anew. So at the close of the Vow, it appears to have been required by the Priests that he should wait seven days, till he could be released from this Nazaritic state, and be declared by them to have kept himself pure, ἀγνὸs, in it, and be allowed to have the requisite offerings made in his behalf.

St. Paul himself, as already observed, seems to have been under a Nazarite's vow when he came to Jerusalem.

"The seven days" here mentioned could not have been the term of his vow, as some have supposed. This was too short a time for such a Vow. In the whole Treatise in the Mishna, concerning Nazarites (tom. iii. 146-178, ed. Surenhusii), there is no mention of so short a term, nor of any period less than thirty

"Potuit videri Paulus antè dudum votum Nazaræi nuncupâsse," says Lorinus, p. 782. Cp. Lewin, 661-665.

On a former occasion, when he was under a Nazarite vow, he had said that "he must by all means keep the next feast (which was Pentecost) at Jerusalem" (xviii. 21).

The reason probably then was, because he was under that

Vow. And now it is said, in like manner, that he hastened to be at Jerusalem, if possible, on the day of Pentecost (xx. 16). Perhaps the reason in both cases was the same.

It was usual for persons αγνίζειν έαντους, to purify them-selves, before the great Festivals. See John xi. 55.

St. Paul was still under a Nazarite vow when he was arrested in the Temple, as he himself asserts, xxiv. 18, $\epsilon \tilde{v} \rho \delta \nu \ \mu \epsilon \ \tilde{\eta} \gamma \nu \iota \sigma - \mu \epsilon \nu \iota \nu \ \tau \hat{\varphi} \ l \epsilon \rho \hat{\varphi}$. This is also confirmed by what he states, xxiv. 17, that he had come to Jerusalem, bringing not only alms but offerings, προσφοράς, the same word as used above concerning the Nazarites, v. 26.

The "seven days" between the διαγγελία, or announcement to the Priests, and the προσφορά, were nearly completed, when he was arrested in the Temple; and they who charged him with breaking the Law, and dishonouring the Temple, were in fact guilty of preventing him from keeping the Law, and enabling others to do so; and thus they themselves did what they charged him with doing,—they violated the Temple and the Law.

— of ἀπὸ τῆs 'Ασίαs 'Ιουδαῖοι] the Jews from Asia. St. Paul's compliance with the Law appears to have satisfied the Jews of Jerusalem, but not those of Asia, who had come up for the Feast, and who had been disappointed by his escape from their hands at Ephesus. They assailed him while showing his charity and his respect for the Law, which they charged him with violating.

It was on the North-West side of the Temple-Area (Joseph. Ant. xv. 11. 4. B. J. i. 5. 4; v. 5. 8; vi. 2. 9), on a rocky hill; at each of its four corners was a lofty tower; it communicated by two flights of stairs with the northern and western arcades of the Temple-Area.

On one of these two flights St. Paul stood, when he addressed the people, who were in the Temple-Area below him.

37. Έλληνιστί γινώσκεις;] dost thou know Greek? A question of surprise, suggested by hearing St. Paul address him in Greek, εἰ ἔξεστί μοι εἰπεῦν; Probably the Chief Captain could not speak Hebrew, and St. Paul had spoken to him, a Gentile, in Greek; but he spoke in Hebrew to the Jews, which they did not expect, any more than the chiliarch expected him to speak Greek (v. 40).

38. οὐκ ἄρα σὰ εἶ:] Rendered by some learned Expositors, 'Thou art not therefore, as I imagined, art thou?' (Winer, § 57, p. 453.) But Chrys., and other ancient Greek interpreters, render it, 'Art not thou then that Egyptian?' Hence Vulg., 'Nonne to es?' and Engl. Vers., 'Art not thou?' Their authority is of great weight; and though the meaning they assign to the words would be rightly represented by ap' où in classical Greek, yet the Hellenistic usage may well have admitted such a natural combination as οὐκ ἄρα σὺ εἶ; 'Art not thou, therefore?' Cp. Hackett, p. 305.

The Egyptian had escaped; hence the supposition of the chief captain, which seems to have been confirmed by hearing the Apostle speak Greek. The Greek language had become common in Egypt, in consequence of the conquests of Alexander and the Ptolemies, as the LXX Version, there made, shows.

The chief captain had perhaps heard the charges of some of the Jews against St. Paul, that he had spoken against their Holy Place and the Law; and this reminded him of the language of the Egyptian, who had prophesied that the City would fall; and who had been opposed by the citizens of Jerusalem, as St. Paul now was; and he had at first imagined that the Egyptian was now captured by them.

Perhaps also the Jews themselves, in order to exasperate the Romans, had identified him with the Egyptian. (Burton.)

- πρό τούτων τῶν ἡμερῶν] before these days. On this use of τούτων with ἡμερῶν see i. 5.

It appears from Josephus, that this Egyptian was routed in the reign of Nero, probably in the first year of his reign, A.D. 55. The word τούτων indicates that this event (Wieseler, p. 76.) was still recent in the memory of the chief captain, and therefore

St. Paul's imprisonment was not long after that year.

The fanaticism and ferocity of these zealots came to a height, and vented itself in the most barbarous outrages afterwards, in the siege of Jerusalem. See on Matt. xxiv. 15.

CH. XXII. 1. ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, και πατέρες, ἀκούσατε] Men, brethren, and fathers hearken. A procemium designed, it would seem, to show his hearers that he had St. Stephen in his thoughts, and to remind them of him who had begun his speech in their presence with the same words, vii. 2. Cp. below, vv. 20. 23.

2. δτι τ. Έ. δ. προσεφώνει αὐτοῖς] that he was speaking to them in the Hebrew tongue-which they did not expect him to do: he had been speaking to the chief Captain in Greek; see xxi. 37.

3. παρά τους πόδας Γαμαλιήλ] at the feet of Gamaliel. The Hebrew Rabbis sat on an elevated seat, and their scholars at their feet. See above, iv. 35. Schoettgen, Hor. Hebr. p. 477. On Gamaliel see v. 34.

4. ταίτην τὴν ὁδόν] this way (see ix. 2), on which I myself am now going, and to which I would bring you,—a courageous profession of his Christianity. At the same time he addresses them as brethren, in order that they may not suppose that the Gospel is as brethren, in order that they may not suppose that the Gospan is at variance with the Law. On this use of the word δδδs see ix. 2.

— ἐδίωξα] I persecuted. St. Paul was then eager to bring them of "that way" bound to Jerusalem, to be put to death; he himself is now bound at Jerusalem for "that way." So God adapts sufferings to sins, and yet he greatly blesses the Apostle in suffering those evils as a Confessor and Martyr, which he had before inflicted on others as a Persecutor.

5. ωs και δ άρχιερευς μαρτυρεί μοι] as also the High Priest beareth me witness. Ananias (see xxiii. 2), probably then one of the Sanhedrim, which had sent Saul. If St. Paul was converted in or before A.D. 35, it was Caiaphas who gave him the commission, and who was removed by Vitellius A.D. 36.

He was succeeded by Jonathan son of Annas; and after one year he was removed to make way for his brother Theophilus. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 3; 5. 3.) In A.D. 42, Simon son of Boëthus was High Priest. (Joseph. xix. 6. 2.) In A.D. 43, Matthias son of Annas; and soon after him, Elionæus son of Cantheras. (Joseph. xix. 8. 1.) In A.D. 45, Joseph son of Kami (Joseph. xx. 1. 3); and soon after him, Ananias son of Nebedæus. (Joseph. xx. 5. 2.) See Chronological Table prefixed to this Volume, and below, xxiii. 2.

- πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφούς] to the brethren, the Jewish authorities. The words are equivalent to προς τας συναγωγάς, to the synagogues, in ix. 2. See also xxviii. 21, which shows that of ἀδελφοί was used by the Jews when speaking of their own people. St. Paul reminds the Jews that he, the Christian Apostle, regards them as his brethren; and therefore he had begun his address with the words άνδρες άδελφοί (xxii. 1; cp. xxviii. 17).

No evil treatment from them could ever provoke the Apostle to lay aside the feelings and language of affection to his brethren, his kinsmen according to the flesh. (Rom. ix. 3.) thus teach them that all men are brethren in Christ.

17. ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ] in the Temple. Thus (in reply to the charges against him, xxi. 28) he shows that he does not despise the Temple, and is approved by the God of the Temple, and that he received his Apostolic mission to the Gentiles in the Temple, from Christ, Whom he here proclaims as Lord of the Temple.

How fitly and forcibly does the Vision here described display the God of both Covenants as One; and the Christian Church as the true substance and consummation of the Levitical

The Jewish Temple is here seen to be the Vestibule, or πρόνασς, of the Christian Church; and the Waters of Life, which are to irrigate, fertilize, and purify the world, flow from the fountain-head in Jerusalem. (Isa. ii. 3. Micah iv. 2.)

- ἐκστάσει] ecstasy. Perhaps on the occasion mentioned xi. 30; xii. 25, and to prepare him for his first mission to the Gentiles, whence the words, v. 21, πορεύου, δτι έγω είς ξθνη μακράν έξαποστελώ σε.

The Vision is supposed by some to have been on the occasion of the visit in ix. 26. But to this the words πορεύου κ.τ.λ. seem to present an objection. St. Paul came again to Jerusalem after that visit, before he went to the Gentiles. See xi. 30; xii.

25; xiii. 4. 19. κάγω εἶπον, Κύριε, κ.τ.λ. and I said, Lord—. They ought to receive my testimony, for they cannot but know it to be true, as the result of conviction, from such evidence as has converted one, whom they saw once a most zealous Persecutor of the Church, into a witness of the truth of the Gospel. Nothing but such evidence could prevail on me to preach a religion, which shows me to myself and to others as having murdered the saints of God.

- δέρων κατά τ. συναγωγάς] See below on xxvi. 11.

20. δτε έξεχείτο το αίμα Στεφάνου τοῦ μάρτυρός σου] when the blood of Thy martyr Stephen was being shed. A noble endeavour to make public reparation for a public sin, by public confession in the same public place where the sin was committed.

As St. Paul did not speak Greek on this occasion (v. 2), he did not use the word martyr. The LXX often employ the word μάρτυρ for the Hebrew Ψ (edh), or witness. The application of this word to the first person who shed his blood for Christ, was enough to designate it as the fittest to be assigned to those who followed St. Stephen in his testimony to the truth, even unto

The same word seems to have been used by St. Paul in relating the divine message to himself in v. 15. St. Stephen was Thy witness, and He whose witness Stephen was, has commanded me to be His witness, not to the Jews only, but to all men.

- συνευδοκών] Elz. adds τη αναιρέσει αὐτοῦ, which is not found in A, B, D, E, and appears to be a scholium. As to the fact, cp. xxvi. 10.

22. οὐ καθῆκεν] it was not fit: he ought to have been slain already, instead of being rescued as he was by the Chief Captain.

So A, B, C, D, E, G.—Elz. has καθηκον.

23. βιπτούντων τὰ ἰμάτια, καὶ κονιορτὸν βαλλόντων] shaking their clothes, and casting dust, and crying, Away with him. Perhaps, a preparation for, or a menace of, throwing off their clothes, in order to cast stones, and kill him for blasphemy (Grotius, Whitby, Meyer),—as they had done to Stephen, when Saul himself "held the clothes of them that stoned him" (vii. 58; xxii. 20). Or it may have been only an impetuous move-ment of rage and execration. See Harmer, Obs. iv. p. 203, on the similar movement of the populace of Persia, when in a state of excitement.

The speech and scene are full of points of resemblance to what was said and done at St. Stephen's martyrdom; and St. Paul must have had St. Stephen often before him at this time.

They probably would have stoned him, if he had not had a retreat by the stairs into the $\pi\alpha\rho\epsilon\mu\beta\circ\lambda\eta$.

24. είς την παρεμβολήν] See xxi. 31. 34, to be brought up by the stairs into the barracks. - [να ἐπιγνῷ] that he might know clearly; for he had not understood the 'Hebrew dialect' of the Apostle's speech.

25. προέτειναν τοις ίμασιν] The best MSS. are divided between προέτεινον Α, Ε, προσέτειναν C, D, προέτειναν B, G. The last seems preferable. It appears that St. Paul was actually bound by the thongs. See v. 30, δτι αὐτὸν ἢν δεδεκώs. St. Paul put the question in the text to the soldiers, ώs προέτειναν, i. e. when they stretched him forward with the ludrres, or thongs, to the 'palus' or post, in order that when he had been so bound he might be scourged with μάστιγες.

The Authorized Version has, "as they bound him with thongs," a rendering which has been censured by some modern expositors; but which seems more accurate than that which has been substituted for it, viz. when they stretched him out for the thongs, i. e. to receive the lashes. The word lude is used in three other places of New Test. (Mark i. 7. Luke iii. 16. John i. 27), and always as something used for binding or tying, as here.

The rendering is also confirmed by v. 29, where it is said that the Captain was afraid when he heard that Paul was a Roman citizen, and because he had bound him. This, as Bittger and Hackett observe, could not refer to the command in xxi. 33; for he kept Paul bound with two chains, after he had heard that he was a Roman citizen (see v. 30, ἔλυσεν), and Felix left him so bound (xxiv. 27). Such a detention of a Roman citizen in safe custody, was not against the Law. But the fear of the Captain appears to have been caused by some other action of binding, which seems to be no other than that mentioned in this verse, i. e. a binding with thongs, in order that the person so bound might be scourged.

- el ἄνθροπον 'Ρωμαΐον] Is it lauful for you to scourge a man who is a Roman and uncondemned? Why did St. Paul now plead his Roman citizenship at Jerusalem, and so avoid scourging? and why should he not have pleaded it at Philippi, a Roman Colony, but have incurred beating with rods?

What he did in the one case, and did not do in the other, was for the glory of God. See note on Acts xvi. 22; and consider the providential results of this appeal to his Roman citizenship here, as detailed in the sequel of this History. See note, xxv. 23.

26. τί μέλ. π.;] Elz. prefixes δρα, which is not in A, B, C, E.
— 'Ρωμαΐοs] a Roman. See on Acts xvi. 37.

29. ἀνετά(ειν] to examine by torture; "examinare, per quæstionem probare," i. e. "tormento flagrorum adhibito."

30. έλυσεν αὐτόν] Elz. adds ἀπὸ τῶν δεσμῶν, which is not in

A, B, C, Is, H, and seems to be a gloss.

— καταγαγών] having brought him down from the Castle of Antonia overhanging the Temple, to the Temple-Area below it; and to the place in which the Sanhedrim were assembled—perhaps the same place in which he himself had taken part in their proceedings against St. Stephen, pleading before them (vi. 12. 15). They usually met in the hall Gazith. Concerning the conclave Gazith, "the seat of the great Sanhedrim," see Lightfoot (i. p. 1105. Temple, chap, xxii.). It was on the south side of A, B, C, E, H, and seems to be a gloss. (i. p. 1105. Temple, chap. xxii.). It was on the south side of the Temple.

CH. XXIII. 1. πάση συνειδήσει ἀγαθῆ] in all good conscience. The Apostle says that he had served God from his forefathers with a pure conscience (2 Tim. i. 3); that is, he had no private ends, but had been zealous towards God (Acts xxii. 3; xxvi. 4), and exceedingly zealous for the traditions of his fathers (Gal. i. 14); and he thought it his duty to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus Christ (xxvi. 9).

But yet he calls himself a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious (1 Tim. i. 13), and chief of sinners (1 Tim. i. 15).

Almighty God had given him a Conscience, and he was bound to obey its dictates. But first, it was his duty to take care that his Conscience was rightly informed. It was not enough that his Conscience was pure and good, i. e. without any admixture of sinister designs, of worldly aims and personal interests, and desirous only of God's glory; but it was also necessary, that his Conscience should be conformed to God's Will, and be regulated

As S. Augustine says (de Mendacio, 7), "It is indeed of great importance, with what intention, and for what end a thing is done; but that which is sinful, is never to be done, with any intention, or for any end, however good." It is not enough to run toward the goal of God's glory; it is also necessary to run in the way of God's commandments. See below on Rom. iii. 8, and on 1 Tim. i. 13.

Cp. Bp. Sanderson's Lectures, "De Conscientiâ;" especially Lecture ii. "On good Intention," Works iv. p. 23, in which it is Lecture II. "On good Intention, works IV. p. 23, in which it is shown that there is "no sufficient security in the consciousness of good intention," and Lecture iv. § 13, p. 72, where he considers this example of St. Paul, and says, "Hee verba ad anteriorem vitæ ejus partem, quum non dum factus est Christianus, extendenda esse mihi quidem videtur valdè probabile."

- πεπολίτευμαι τῷ Θεῷ] a Hebraism; in God's sight I have lived in all good conscience, and not only in the eyes of men. The fuller expression is ἐνώπιον Θεοῦ, or ἐναντίον Θεοῦ, Luke Acts iv. 19; viii. 21, and παρὰ Θεῷ, Luke ii. 52.
 δ ἀρχιερεὸς 'Ανανίας] the high priest Ananias, the son of Nebedæus; he succeeded Joseph son of Cami in the high priesthood, in the procuratorship of Tiberius Alexander, A.D. 48 (Joseph. Ant. xx. 5. 2), and held it under Cumanus; his cruelty and avarice are recorded by Josephus, Ant. xx. 5. 3; xx. 8. He was sent to Rome for trial, before the Emperor Claudius, A.D. 52, on the accusation of Quadratus, and (it is most probable) was acquitted, and held the office of the high Priesthood at this time, and continued in it till he was superseded by Ismael, son of Phabi, a little before the departure of Felix from Judæa (Joseph. xx. 8. 2. Cp. Biscoe, pp. 70—76. Winer, p. 57. Meyer, p. 397). He had himself been a prisoner, and yet he has no pity for St. Paul in his sufferings.

On the succession of High Priests at this period, see above on xxii. 5.

 σέ] thee; emphatic, and to be accented as such.
 τοῖχε κεκονιαμένε] O thou whited wall; whitewashed outwardly, and of a fair aspect, but inwardly unsound. Cp. on τάφοι κεκονιαμένοι, Matt. xxiii. 27.

St. Paul here spake "unadvisedly with his lips," yet this was a true prophecy; Ananias was guilty of many crimes, and his house was burnt in a sedition raised by his own son, and he himself was drawn out from a place of concealment by the sicarii, and slain. (Joseph. B. J. ii. 17. 2-9.) A remarkable retribution; he who connived at the conspiracy of assassins against St. Paul (xxiii. 14), died by the hands of an assassin.
 — καὶ σὸ κάθη] 'And art thou sitting there, &c.?' The καὶ connects the question with the command of Ananias, and brings out the inconsistency of his personal conduct with his judicial office. On this sense of kal, expressive of indignation, see James i. 4.

5. οὐκ ἥδειν] I wist not, brethren, that he is High Priest; for it is written, "Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people" (Exod. xxii. 28). St. Paul's apology shows, that he retracted what he had said, as language unfit to be addressed to any superior in the discharge of his duty;

Some have supposed that the words obn Hoew, I wist not, merely intimated defect of eye-sight; but this notion is inconsistent with these words. If St. Paul could not discern that Ananias was High Priest, how could be see that he sat there as his judge?

Or, if it be supposed that he could not distinguish him as the High Priest, then his apology amounts to no more than that he would not, indeed, call the High Priest by an opprobrious name, but that he saw no harm in addressing such language to any one else sitting there, as his Judge. Indeed, what is an apology, would in that sense be only a repetition of the reproach.

The same objection seems to lie against the interpretation

(suggested by Lorinus, Witsius, Schoettgen, Baumg., and others), which supposes that St. Paul means by our poer to say, that he did not own him to be a High Priest, for he had purchased the office by bribery, and had shown himself to be a Tyrant.

But St. Paul's self-correction is recorded here as a warning, not to "speak evil of dignities" (2 Pet. ii. 10. Jude 8), even though the office they hold is disgraced by them—even though a Tiberius or a Nero sits on the throne, still the throne on which he sits, and the officer sitting upon it, are not to be treated with disrespect. See Matt. xxiii. 2.

Conscience), "may be taken for the actual consideration of a thing that was known before; in which sense alone the words of St. Paul (in this passage of his speech, Acts xxiii. 5), that have so racked the Commentators, are to be understood; I wist not, Brethren (says he), that he was the High Priest; that is, I thought not, or I did not sufficiently consider it. As if he had said, 'Pardon, I pray, my Brethren, this just Resentment of mine; if my Heat and Passion have carried me into Expressions too free, I did not remember the Person I was speaking to, and forgot my own Duty. I confess my mistake; I ought not to revile the High Priest, though he has forfeited the Dignity of his Character, but my Passion blinded me so, that I did not sufficiently consider it.' A sense perfectly easy and agreeable." See also Bp. Sanderson's Serm. xiii. ad Aulam, § 11, i. p. 331.

On this sense of ήδειν, see Acts vii. 18. Rom. vii. 7. Eph. vi. 8. Col. iii. 24. It is also involved in the right and enlarged use of the word συν-είδησις, or Con-science.

S. Jerome, referring to this passage, and arguing from it against the Pelagians, says well, "A man who is alway on his guard may haply escape sin; as a lyre, of which the cords are always stretched, may avoid uttering a barsh sound. But if he ever relaxes his vigilance, he lapses whither he would not; and thus our human nature learns its own weakness. The Apostle was smitten by a minister of the High Priest, and he retorted on the High Priest thus, 'The Lord shall smite thee, thou whited wall! Where then was the patience of the Saviour, Who, when He was led as a lamb to the slaughter, opened not His mouth? We do not disparage the Apostle; but we celebrate the praise of Christ.' S. Jerome (c. Pelag. iii. 1). Wetst.
On the bearing of this avowal on the question of Inspiration,

6. γνούς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος] But when Paul perceived that the one part (of the Council) consisted of Sadducees, and the other of Pharisees. An example which has been much perverted in modern Thus a celebrated Roman-catholic expositor (Corn. A Lapide) builds on it the famous maxim, "bellum hæreticorum pax est Ecclesiæ;" and he adds, "id sapienter vidit et edixit Cardinalis Hosius," the great persecutor of the Protestants in Poland in the sixteenth century;

He calls this the only method of maintaining the Unity of the Church; seeking to give a colour to this Machiavellian principle, from God's act in dispersing the builders of Babel, and from the practice of heretics themselves, in burning the corn of the field of the Church, like Samson's foxes, with firebrands to their tails (Judges xv. 4, 5).

But St. Paul gives no sanction to this unhappy maxim "divide, et impera." His end is not division, but unity; and he does not seek to attain that end by any questionable means, but by a statement of the truth: "concerning the resurrection of the dead, I am this day called in question," Cp. xxvi. 23.

The confession so freely made by Romish Divines of the use they themselves make of this example, may serve to put others on their guard against their perversions of it; especially when it is remembered how they have applied their principles in practice, by personating Puritans, Anabaptists, and other sectaries, in order to sow dissensions among us, and so to weaken and subvert the English Church. See Ware's Foxes and Firebrands, pp. 31—47.

Abp. Bramhall's Works, i. p. xcvii. Wall on Infant Baptism, fi. p. 372, and the late Dr. Wordsworth's Eccles. Biog. iv. 64

The proofs there given of the evils of Schism, and of the occasions thence afforded to Romish adversaries, and eagerly caught at by them, of supplanting the principles of Christian doctrine, which we hold, and of propagating their own errors, may serve to remind all true friends of the English Reformation, that if they desire to promote, and not to damage, the holy cause vindicated by it, it is their primary duty to discountenance Schism, and to maintain Unity.

- Φαρισαίων] So A, B, C, and many Cursives and Vulg. St. Paul means that his family, for more than one generation, had been Pharisees .- Elz. Φαρισαίου.

8. Σαδδουκαΐοι-Φαρισαΐοι] for the Sadducees say that there is no Resurrection (of the body), nor Angel, nor Spirit, but the Pharisees confess both.

The Sadducees explained away the Angelic appearances in the Pentateuch, by supposing that what are there called angels were mere creations for the time, and of only a transitory and evanescent existence—like clouds. Cp. Lightfoot, ii. p. 702.

See the passages from Josephus and the Talmud in Biscoe, pp. 92-102, and cp. Dan. xii. 2, 3. 2 Macc. vii. 9-36. Matt. xxii. 28, and see note above on Acts xii. 15.

9. ἄγγελος] Elz. adds μη θεομαχῶμεν, which are not in the best MSS, A, B, C*, E, H, and many Versions; and were probably added, to fill up the Aposiopesis, by the copyists from v. 39. For examples of Aposiopesis in New Test., see Matt. xv. 5. Mark vii. 11; xi. 32. Winer, § 64, p. 529.

The Aposiopesis is very appropriate here; it seems to inti-mate that the conclusion of the sentence was drowned in the clamour of the Sadducees.

11. θάρσει] Elz. adds Παῦλε, which is not in A, B, C, E, H, and many Cursives and Versions.

- σε δεί και είς 'Ρώμην μαρτυρήσαι] it is necessary for thee to bear witness also at Rome,—εls 'Ράμην, at and to Rome. On this use of els see Mark i. 37; xiii. 9. St. Paul was Christ's μάρτυς in the two great Capitals of the world; first at Jerusalem, the spiritual Capital; then at Rome, the civil Metropolis. See on Acts xxv. 11. This prophecy was interpreted in a special manner by St. Paul's martyrdom at Rome. els here repeated with the accusatives Ίερουσαλημ and Ῥώμην, expresses more than at. 'Thou barest witness to Jerusalem; thou shalt bear witness to Rome.

12. ποιήσαντες συστ. of 'lov.] the Jews having made a combination. So A, B, C, E, and many Cursives.—Elz. has ποι. τινες τῶν 'Ιουδαίων συστ. But it is usual with the sacred writers to attribute to the Jews generally whatever is done by some of them, with the concurrence or connivance of others, especially of those in authority, as now.

- ανεθεμάτισαν έαυτούς] they subjected themselves to an ανάθεμα οτ της (kherem), imprecation. Gal. i. 8, 9. 1 Cor. xvi. 22. They were probably of the number of Anoral or Sicarii or factious insurgents and assassins, who, under pretence of zeal for the Law, perpetrated the worst crimes. Joseph. B. J. ii. 13. 3. Biscoe, pp. 278, 279, who observes, that "from their perverted oral traditions and the ill-adduced example of Phineas" (on which see Bp. Sanderson's admirable remarks, vol. ii. pp. 65. 67. 251; iv. 50), "it was made a rule among them that a private processor might bell one who had foresten the law of Macco. person might kill one who had forsaken the law of Moses. Of this there is the clearest proof in the Tulmud (Sanhedr. c. 9), Philo (de Sacrific. p. 855, de Monarchiã, i. p. 819), and Josephus 13 τ Ησαν δε πλείους τεσσαράκοντα οι ταύτην την συνωμοσίαν ποιησάμενοι 14 οἴτινες προσελθόντες τοις ἀρχιερεῦσι καὶ τοις πρεσβυτέροις εἶπον, 'Αναθέματι ανεθεματίσαμεν έαυτους μηδενός γεύσασθαι, έως ου αποκτείνωμεν τον Παθλον. 15 Νθν οθν ύμεις έμφανίσατε τῷ χιλιάρχῳ σὺν τῷ συνεδρίῳ, ὅπως καταγάγη αὐτὸν εἰς ὑμᾶς, ὡς μέλλοντας διαγινώσκειν ἀκριβέστερον τὰ περὶ αὐτοῦ· ἡμεῖς δὲ, πρὸ τοῦ ἐγγίσαι αὐτὸν, ἔτοιμοί ἐσμεν τοῦ ἀνελεῖν αὐτόν.

To such monstrous abuses may large bodies of men be led by the two false propositions, viz.:

(1) That the "exempla piorum,"—examples of holy men (e. g. Phineas),—may be safely followed, without reference to the special circumstances under which they acted;

(2) That a good end justifies bad means.

It has been asked. What became of these conspirators?

The answer to this question is, that it was as easy to loose as to bind. The same person who laid on the excommunication could also take it off, and particularly with regard to vows of not eating; any of their Rabbis could absolve them. (Lightfoot, ii. p. 703.)

Assassination was now legalized and consecrated among the Jews; and this diabolical spirit had full vent during the Siege of Jerusalem, in a few years after this time. And it may be regarded as an act of mercy, that the Jewish Nation was delivered by its Roman conquerors from the sanguinary atrocity of its own

St. Paul found in his own person, that the zeal " not according to knowledge," by which he himself had been actuated, recoils against those who have been hurried on by it to do evil that good the conspirators presumed on the secrecy and the assistance of the Chief Priests conniving at, and abetting them, in an act of murder under pretence of religion; a proof of the power of the Evil Spirit to tempt men, and even Ministers of Religion, to be guilty of heinous sins, on a pretence of piety and zeal.

This conspiracy proves that the Jewish Sanhedrim had not (as some have supposed) unlimited power of life and death in causes of Religion. If they had, there would have been no need for this plot against St. Paul. See above, ix. 2. 15. δπωs] Elz. adds αδριον, which is not in the best MSS., and is probably a gloss from v. 20.

The Holy Spirit does not gratify the curiosity of the reader of Holy Scripture by graphic sketches of the persons of the holy men who are employed by Him to preach the Gospel. He does not recite particulars of their private and domestic history. seems studiously to practise reserve and to keep silence in these respects. Perhaps He thus designed to bring out in clearer outline and bolder relief the importance, dignity, and sanctity of their public mission. He would have us regard them as abstracted from what is merely personal, local, and temporary, and as holding a position of their own, which neither time nor place can affect,—that of Ambassadors of Christ, Preachers of the Everlasting Gospel, Foundation-stones set in the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem. 27. σὺν τῷ στρατεύματι] with my soldiery. It was true that Claudius Lysias had rescued Paul after he had ascertained that he was a Roman. See xxii. 29; xxiii. 10. It was also true that he had rescued him before he knew that he was a Roman (xxii.

But it was not true, that he had rescued him because he knew that he was a Roman, and that he then brought him to the Council.-The incidents mentioned are true, but not in the order in which they are recorded; and they are so stated as to obviate the charge that he had bound and put him to examination; and they afford strong evidence of the genuineness of the document.

29. μηδὲν ἄξιον θανάτου] nothing worthy of death. St. Paul is pronounced innocent by Lysias, as Christ was by Pilate. St. Paul is again pronounced innocent by Festus, xxv. 25, and again by Agrippa, xxvi. 31.

33. εls τ. Καισάρειαν] to Cæsarea. Thus by God's Providence overruling the designs of the Jews, the Apostle is sent, in consequence of their conspiracy against him, to preach the Gospel, as Chrys. expresses it, "in a nobler Theatre, and before a more splendid audience, at Cæsarea;" and thence, eventually, to the Capital of the World,—Rome. On Cæsarea, see above, x. l. 34. ἀναγνοὺς δέ] Elz. adds ὁ ἡγεμὼν, which is not in the best MSS., and is probably a gloss.

— ἀπὸ Κιλικίαs] from Cilicia. Felix, the Procurator of Judæa, hearing that Paul was of the Province of Cilicia, says that he will hear his cause. There was therefore a connexion between Cilicia and Judea, and this is explained by what has been stated above, Luke ii. 2. Both were in the same Presidency, that of Syria.

35. διακούσομαι] I will hear thee thoroughly. See Wetst.

— τ. πραιτωρίφ τ. 'Ηρώδου] the prætorium of Herod; the palace which had been built by King Herod, and was now probably occupied as an official residence by the Roman Procurator. On the remarkable coincidences between the testimony of the sufferings of Christ, in the Roman pratorium at Jerusalem, and of those of His Apostle, first in the pratorium of Casarea, and afterwards in the prætorium at Rome, see below on Phil. i. 13.

CH. XXIV. 1. μετὰ πέντε ἡμέρας] on the fifth day (Matt. xvi. 21 and xxvii. 63) after St. Paul's departure from Jerusalem.

A. B. Ε. μετὰ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων] with the elders. The reading of A. B. Ε. μετὰ πρεσβ. τινων, seems to be due to a desire to obviate an objection, that all the Elders were not likely to have gone down to Cæsarea. But see xxiii. 12. 20, where of 'loυδαῖοι is used in a similar way. The elders are rightly said to do, and to be responsible for doing that which is done with their concurrence be responsible for doing that which is done with their concurrence by those who are their representatives. If St. Luke had written μ. πρεσβυτέρων τινων, it is not probable that the other reading would be found, as it is, in the majority of the MSS.

— βήπορος] a 'rhetor' (Horat. Sat. i. v. 2), or 'caussidicus,' acquainted with Roman Law and Language. In legal phraseology such a man was sometimes called δικανικό and dicentarius; he was the such a man was sometimes called δικανικό and dicentarius; he was a very different character from that of the βήτωρ, orator, of the age of Demosthenes.

The Gospel, in the person of St. Paul, had now to contend with Jewish prejudices allied with Roman Rhetoric, at the bar of the Imperial Power, represented by Felix. New combinations of hostile forces arose in succession against it; but it overcame them all.

It appears that the Speech of Tertullus was in Latin. was employed, because he was (what his employers, the Chief Priests, were not) familiar with that tongue, his native language, as well as with Roman law. And his harangue, as reported by St. Luke, has a Roman character and tone.

τοῦ Παύλου. 2 Κληθέντος δὲ αὐτοῦ, ἤρξατο κατηγορεῖν ὁ Τέρτυλλος λέγων, 3 Πολλής εἰρήνης τυγχάνοντες διὰ σοῦ, καὶ κατορθωμάτων γινομένων τῷ ἔθνει τούτω διὰ τῆς σῆς προνοίας, πάντη τε καὶ πανταχοῦ ἀποδεχόμεθα, κράτιστε Φηλιξ, μετὰ πάσης εὐχαριστίας. 4 "Ινα δὲ μὴ ἐπὶ πλείον σὲ ἐγκόπτω, παρακαλω ἀκοῦσαί σε ἡμων συντόμως τῆ σῆ ἐπιεικεία. 5 Ευρόντες γὰρ τὸν ἄνδρα b ch. 6, 13. τοῦτον λοιμον, καὶ κινοῦντα στάσεις πᾶσι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις τοῖς κατὰ τὴν οἰκου- & 21. 28. μένην, πρωτοστάτην τε της των Ναζωραίων αιρέσεως, 6 ° ος καὶ τὸ ιερον ἐπεί- cob. 21. 28. 81. ρασε βεβηλώσαι ον καὶ ἐκρατήσαμεν, καὶ κατὰ τὸν ἡμέτερον νόμον ἡθελήσαμεν κρίνειν 7 παρελθών δε Λυσίας ὁ χιλίαρχος μετὰ πολλής βίας ἐκ τῶν χειρων ήμων ἀπήγαγε, 8 κελεύσας τοὺς κατηγόρους αὐτοῦ ἔρχεσθαι ἐπὶ σέ παρ' οὖ δυνήση αὐτὸς ἀνακρίνας περὶ πάντων τούτων ἐπιγνῶναι, ὧν ἡμεῖς κατηγορουμεν αὐτου.

10 'Απεκρίθη δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, νεύσαντος αὐτῷ τοῦ ἡγεμόνος λέγειν, 'Εκ πολλῶν έτων ὄντα σε κριτὴν τω ἔθνει τούτω ἐπιστάμενος, εὐθυμότερον ^α τὰ περὶ ἐμαυτοῦ αι Pet. 8. 15.

Did St. Paul also speak before Felix in Latin? It would seem that he had private interviews with him, without an interpreter (v. 26).

The practice thus indicated, of the most learned men of a country, such as the Chief Priests here, hiring Roman Rhetoricians, such as Tertullus, to plead for them, affords an indirect and incidental confirmation of the supernatural power of the Apostles to speak with divine eloquence, and in languages they had never learnt. It is an evidence of the Gift of Tongues. St. Peter and St. John, illiterate Galilæans, and St. Paul, of Cilicia, a country whose barbarous dialect gave a name to solecisms -from Soli, in Cilicia, -never have a Tertullus to speak for them; and yet they are more than a match for the Sanhedrim; and never have any difficulty in addressing popular assemblies, and pour forth their thoughts with irresistible eloquence. How was this done? By the gift of the Holy Ghost.

2. Τερτύλλου] Tertullus; a Roman diminutive from Tertius, as Lucullus from Lucius.

 κατορθωμάτων] good deeds. So Elz. But A, B, E, and some Cursives have διορθωμάτων, which is confirmed by Vulg., "cùm multa corrigantur." If διορθωμάτων, reforms, is the true reading, it affords remarkable evidence of the servile sycophancy of the orator and the Jews in their zeal against St. Paul. It might be said that Felix had conferred benefits on the nation, but it could hardly be said that he had done any thing to correct it. The orator pleading for the Spiritual Power of the Jewish Nation, and for the Nation itself, confesses that his clients needed correction at the hands of a heathen Magistrate.

See Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. 5. B. J. ii. 13. 3, for an account of the attempts of Felix to quell the Sicarii. On the other hand, relix had perpetrated many acts of misgovernment. See Joseph. xx. 8. 9. Tacit. Hist. v. 9. Annal. xii. 54. Sueton. Claud. 28 (cp. above on xxiii. 26). Although he, as Governor, had quelled some insurgents, yet he was more guilty than any of them. And in two years after this panegyric from the mouth of Tertullus, the advocate of the Jews, he was recalled, and was accused by them at Rome, and would have been punished, but for the intercession of his brother Pallas, then in favour with Nero. 4. ἐπὶ πλεῖον] more than is fit; too long. On the ellipse after the comparative, see v. 22.

5. λοιμόν] pestem; a pest or plague. The Apostle who preached the Gospel of life and health is called a pestilence! So Fractact the cosper of the and nearth is called a persistance? So Christ had forefold. Matt. x. 25.

— Nαζωραίων] of Nazarenes. A term of contempt. He would not call them Christians; and they are still called by this name by Jews and Mahometans. But St. Paul had declared haddle (""...") boldly (xxii. 8), that He who had appeared to him on the way to Damascus had said to him, eyé eius Ingous & Na (wpaios, by où

It was ordered by the Providence of God that the Name Na(wpaios, used in despite by the enemies of Christianity, contained, though unknown to them, a fulfilment of the ancient prophecy concerning the Messiah as the Netser or Branch (see on Matt. ii. 23. John xix. 19), and so was an assertion of the truth,—that Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ. Hence the term Nαζωραΐος is readily applied by the Apostles to Him. Acts ii. 22;

("multas hic lituras lacunasque habens." Bornemann), nor in B, G, H, and many cursives; and omitted by Griesb., and Tisch., not by Matthæi, Bornemann, or De Wette. But perhaps these words may have been cancelled by some Copyists, who supposed that the Jews had no power of judicature. Cp. John

Besides, an interpolator would not have charged Lysias with 'great violence'—of which no evidence had been given in St. Luke's narrative; but he would have taken care to conform himself to the history.

The words are found in E, and in a great number of Cursive MSS. and Fathers. And the probability seems greater that they should have been omitted, either by chance (and omissions may take place accidentally, whereas additions cannot) or purposely, than that they should have been interpolated by the Copyists. They are therefore left in the text. See further,

— κατὰ τὸν ἡμέτερον νόμον] according to our law. Why then the conspiracy, at which the Chief Priests connived (xxiii. 14)? See note there. In cases of βεβήλωσις τοῦ ἰεροῦ, the Romans permitted the Jewish Judicature to inflict capital punishment. Joseph. B. J. vi. 2. 4, where Titus says, οὐχ ἡμεῖς τοὺς ὑπερβάντας (i. e. profaning the Temple by intruding beyond the sacred limits) ὑμῖν ἀναιρεῖν ἐπετρέψαμεν, καὶ ἐὰν Ῥωμαῖός τις 🐔 Therefore Tertullus laboured to establish this charge against Paul.

See also St. Paul's reply, xxiv. 18.

8. παρ' οδ] from whom. Perhaps, as some Expositors say, from Paul. Cp. xxv. 26, δπως τῆς ἀνακρίσεως γενομένης κ.τ.λ. If so,-this was a suggestion, on the part of Tertullus, that he might be examined by questio, such as Lysias had employed (xxii. 24), where a similar reason is given, τνα ἐπιγνῷ (so Corn.

A Lapide, Grotius, Rosenm.).
It may be said that Paul, as a Roman citizen, could not be so examined. But though it was contrary to law to begin with torture (as Lysias had done) and Roman citizens were legally exempt from it, yet since the age of Tiberius, it was commonly resorted to even in their case. Cp. the authorities in Howson, ii. p. 322,

If the words in vv. 6-8, και κατά-έρχεσθαι έπι σè, are not genuine, then ob in this verse must refer to Paul.

But it deserves consideration whether,-if those words are genuine, as is probable,—the relative ob here does not rather refer to Lysias.

This interpretation is confirmed by what Felix says, v. 22, δταν Λυσίας δ χιλίαρχος καταβή, διαγνώσομαι,—a speech which corroborates the opinion, that the words in vv. 6—8 are genuine. Let the learned reader judge.

Besides, to refer to Lysias, was a proof of confidence, which Tertullus might well be disposed to show, in the goodness of his cause. And it was not very likely that he should refer to the defendant himself.

9. συνεπέθεντο] So A, B, E, and many Cursives. - Elz.

11. είσι μοι ἡμέραι] there are days to me not more than twelve. On this use of the dative μοι after ἡμέραι, see Matt. xv. 32. Mark viii. 2.

- ἡμέραι δεκαδύο] Elz. has ἡμ. ἡ δεκ. The ἡ is not in A, B, E, G; and see above, on xxiii. 13.

The twelve days may be reckoned as follows:-

1st Day, arrival at Jerusalem, xxi. 15-17. 2nd, interview with James and the Presbyters of the Church at Jerusalem, xxi. 18.

3rd, 'Αγνισμός, Nazariteship declared, xxi. 26. 7th, The seven days nearly completed, xxi. 27. Paul arrested in the Temple, xxi. 30; his speech to the people, xxii. 1.

8th, On the morrow (xxii. 30) he is brought before the San-hedrim. Vision in the night, xxiii. 11.

9th, In the morning (xxiii. 12) overture of the Conspirators to the Chief Priests, with a view that Paul should be brought forth by the Chiliarch on the following day (xxiii. 15. 20).

Paul sent by night to Antipatris. 10th, On the morrow arrives at Cæsarea.

13th, After five days (xxiv. 1), i. e. on the fifth day after his departure from Jerusalem, he is accused by Ananias and Tertullus before Felix, not more than twelve days after his arrival at Jerusalem, xxiv. 11.

- προσκυνήσων] to worship. Not to profane the temple, as they say. See also vv. 17, 18.

13. δύνωνταί σοι] The pronoun σοι (not in Elz.) is found in A, B, E, and many Cursives, and is confirmed by the Syriac, Vulgate, and many Versions.

15. hν και οδτοι προσδέχονται] which they also entertain. A remarkable testimony to the general belief of the Jewish Nation (notwithstanding the influence of the Sadducees) in a Resurrection to come, -a belief, therefore, to be derived from the Old Testament. See xxvi. 7.

17. δι' ἐτῶν πλειόνων] after several years; four years after his last visit, xviii. 22.

- ἐλεημοσύναs] alms. For an illustration of the coincidence of this statement, thus incidentally introduced in the Acts, with passages in St. Paul's Epistles concerning the collections made by him for the poor Saints at Jerusalem (Rom xv. 25. 1 Cor. xvi. 1-4. 2 Cor. viii. 1-4), see Paley, Horæ Paulinæ, No. i. p. 10.

— προσφοράs] offerings. Some Expositors say, for the Feast of Pentecost, xx. 16. (Meyer.) But this word suggests a supposition that St. Paul came to Jerusalem under a vow, in order to present the offerings due at its expiration. See the use of this word προσφορά, in connexion with this visit, for the offering made by a Nazarite, xxi. 26, ξως οῦ προσηνέχθη ὑπὲρ ἐνὸς ἐκάστον στο αποτών ἡ προσφορά. And so Bede (Retr. p. 153), "Oblationes pertinent ad ea quæ ad suasionem Jacobi et seniorum in templo

18. ev ols] in which things. See xxvi. 12, ev ols, πορευόμενος είς την Δαμασκόν. Rom. vi. 21, έφ' οίς νῦν ἐπαισχύνεσθε. Phil. ii.

15, έν οις φαίνεσθε. 1 Tim. iv. 15, έν τούτοις ίσθι. The reading ev als, found in A, B, C, E, and received by Lachm. and Tisch., not by Alf. and Bloomf., seems to be a correction of the copyists to make an agreement with προσφοράς, - and it is not probable that if als had been written by St. Luke it would have been altered into ols.

εὖρόν με ἡγνισμένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ] they found me separated or sanctified as a Nazarite in the Temple. See above, on xxi.

His argument is, "They have charged me with profaning the Temple (v. 6). But the fact is, I came from a distance to Jerusalem to worship (προσκυνήσων, v. 11) in the Temple; and to bring alms of charity, and also offerings of piety (προσφοράs), as a Nazarite (see xxi. 26); and they themselves found me in the Temple engaged in a holy service, proving my respect for the Temple; and they who accuse me of profaning it, were guilty of profanation, in abetting those who seized me when there employed in a religious act, of which they prevented the completion." Thus their outrage on St. Paul resembled that of Pilate on the Galilæans, whose blood he mingled with their sacrifices. Luke xiii. 1.

19. el τι έχοιεν] si quid haberent-

20. εἰπάτωσαν, τί] For τι Elz. has εἴ τι, but εἰ is not in the best MSS., and the sentence gains force by its removal. 71-1 = mhat but ?

21. φωνης, ης έκραξα] this voice, or cry, which I uttered. Cp. Winer, p. 148.

22. ἀνεβάλετο] Elz. prefixes ἀκούσας δὲ ταῦτα ὁ Φῆλιξ, which words are not found in the best MSS., A, B, C, E, H, or in Vulg., Syriac, and several other Versions.

- ἀκριβέστερον είδως] Although he had more accurate knowledge of Christianity, than that he needed to be taught the truth concerning it, or than would have been supposed in one whose practice was such as his with regard to its Apostle.

The comparative is used in similar manner in v. 4 and in xxv. 10, κάλλιον ἐπιγινώσκειs, i. e. "thou knowest better than that I need instruct thee, and that thou shouldest make such a proposal." This use of the comparative is very convenient, as suggestive of something understood, which it might be uncourteous

Felix had been Procurator of Judæa for six years; as such he had, doubtless, been at Jerusalem on the great festivals, and on other occasions when he could not have failed to hear of Christ. And his ordinary residence was Casarea, where Philip the Evangelist lived (viii. 49; xxi. 8), and where was a Christian Church (xxi. 8–16),—and where, many years before, St. Peter had preached, and baptized the Roman Centurion Cornelius (x. 1-48). How striking the contrast between the Roman soldier sending for Peter to Cæsarea, and the Roman Procurator leaving Paul bound a prisoner at the same place! The one condemns the

- ὁπηρετεῖν] Elz. adds ἡ προσέρχεσθαι, which is not in A, B, C, E, or in Vulgate, Syriac, and some other Versions.

24. Δρουσίλλη] Drusilla, daughter of Herod Agrippa I., whose miserable end is described Acts xii. 19-23, and sister of Herod Agrippa II., or Junior, mentioned in the two next chapters. She had deserted her husband Azizus, king of Emesa, and married Felix (Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 1. See above on xxiii. 24) against the Jewish Law. Agrippa, the son of this unhappy woman, by Felix, lost his life by an eruption of Vesuvius, A.D. 79

(Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 2).

The words οδοη Ἰουδαία, being a Jewess, are emphatic. St.

Paul was tried on a charge of breaking the Law at the instance of the Jews, before a Ruler who had set those laws at defiance, and who yet is flattered by them! (vv. 3-9.)

 περὶ τῆς εἰς Χριστὸν πίστεως] concerning the faith in Christ.
 St. Paul is brought before Felix, the Roman Procurator, by his enemies, as a Criminal; but in the second hearing, he pleads before Felix and Drusilla as a Preacher of the Gospel.

The same process takes place in the two following Chapters. Felix, having rejected the overture made to him, is withdrawn from his office. His opportunity is lost; his day of grace is past, and he makes room for Festus, his successor. St. Paul is arraigned before him; he invites Agrippa to hear the Apostle. brought to answer for himself, before Agrippa and Bernice, and he preaches Christ.

These incidents are doubtless recorded, with a divine design of teaching the Church and the World, by two remarkable specimens, that all Persecutions, excited by the Enemy of God and man against the Truth, are, have been, and ever will be overruled by God for the Propagation of the Gospel of Christ.

25. διαλεγομένου αυτου-έμφοβος γενόμενος] as he was discoursing of righteousness, and temperance, and of the Judgment to come, Felix trembled. For the reason of which, see above on xxiii. 26 and xxiv. v. 3 and v. 27.

Here is a lesson to Preachers;

(1) To lay the foundation in Faith in Christ (v. 24).

(2) To build upon it, in practical exhortations to Righteousness and Temperance, and in warnings of the Judgment to come. (3) To apply their preaching to the particular cases of their

(4) Especially to the particular cases of the great and powerful, whose example is of much influence with others.

(5) Not to think their labour lost, if the Felix, before whom they preach, does not repent. His history has been a warning to many: his impenitence has led others to repent.

μέλλοντος] Elz. adds έσεσθαι, which is not in the best MSS., and appears to be a gloss; like many other words similarly inserted in the Textus receptus in this Chapter. See vv. 22, 23. 26.

St. Paul preaches, before this unjust Judge, concerning the jut judgment to come, when all Judges will be judged. "Merito coram adulteris Paulus disserebat de Castitate; merito coram injusto Præside disserebat de Justitiâ; merito iniquum judicem admonebat Judicem suum fore Christum." (A Lapide.)

23. χρήματα] money. Having heard that Paul had brought a pecuniary collection to Jerusalem (v. 17), and supposing that he could command funds from his friends for his release.

could command funds from his friends for his release.

Such a hope of a bribe was opposed to the Roman Law, which Felix was appointed to administer, e. g. the Lex Julia de Repetundis. Wetst., p. 624.

— Παύλου] Elz. adds δπως λύση αὐτὸν, which is not in A, C, E, or in Vulg., Syriac, and several other Versions. See

- ωμίλει αὐτῷ] he used to converse with him. On this sense of δμιλώ see Luke xxiv. 14.

27. διετίαs] two years. Even Felix had two full years of God's long-suffering. "Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it and dung it, and if it bear fruit, well; if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down." (Luke xiii. 8, 9.)

Festus came to displace him, and Felix left Paul bound, who would have released him from the thraldom of his sins.

Two years of imprisonment.-God did not need the labour even of St. Paul: and though he was bound, "the Word of God is not bound." (2 Tim. ii. 9.) God shows his own Omnipotence, and teaches men humility, by dispensing sometimes with the use of His best instruments when, to human eyes, they seem to be most needed.

Perhaps, also, we should not have had some books of Scripture,—perhaps not the Gospel of St. Luke and the Acts of the Apostles, and some of St. Paul's Epistles,—if St. Paul had not been imprisoned at Cæsarea and at Rome. Cp. note on Col. iv. 18.

έλαβε διάδοχον] he received for his successor. Cp. the words The subsequent arraignment of Felix at Rome, for maladministration of his province, on the prosecution of the Jews them-

He states that St. Paul preached before Felix, and " his wife Drusilla, a Jewess," concerning "Righteousness, Temperance, and the Judgment to come," but he leaves us to gather the evidence of their unrighteousness, intemperance, and iniquity—and by consequence, to ascertain the special pertinency of St. Paul's Sermon before them-from other sources, particularly from the Jewish annalist Josephus, and from the Roman Historian and Biographer, Tacitus and Suetonius. See xxiii. 26.

A signal proof of Charity and Truth, and, may we not add, an evidence also of Divine Inspiration? Such History as this,

with reverence be it said, could only be written with a pen dropped from the wing of the Divine Dove.

Festus did not wish to have το πληθος at Cæsarea (xxv. 24), for fear of an uproar; and he desires to conciliate the δυνατοl among them. He knew why Paul had been left bound by Felix, and would have been glad to dismiss the cause; and he supposes that after two years' imprisonment of St. Paul, for not it. proved offence, the anger of the Jews had been cooled. But it was not so; and the new Governor, with little moral courage, is ready to ingratiate himself with the Jews, even by a surrender of St. Paul (vv. 9. 11).

6. οὐ πλείους ὀκτὰ ἡ δέκα] So A, C, and several Cursives and Versions, and B, except that it has πλείονας.—Elz. πλείους ή

- ἐπ' ἐμοῦ] before me. Not before the Sanhedrim, who are thine enemies, but before me, an impartial Judge. And yet Festus "wished to do the Jews a favour." And why would he take Paul to Jerusalem, where there was a conspiracy against him? Why not judge him at Cæsarea? St. Paul saw the snare and avoided it. Cp. xxviii. 19.

10. ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος Καίσαρος ἐστώς εἰμι] I already stand in my own resolve, founded on the divine will, at Cæsar's judgment-seat. I desire to be sent to Rome, and to be judged there. (Ammonius, Chrys.) As Chrys. observes, he remembered the divine Vision at Jerusalem (xxiii. 11), and made the appeal more confidently. This is a reply to the proposal of Felix, art thou willing to be judged before me?

He replies also to the secret designs of Festus, who wished to gain the favour of the Jews by the sacrifice of Paul; and he says, οὐδείς μὲ δύναται αὐτοῖς χαρίσασθαι Καίσαρα ἐπικαλουμαι. See v. 11.

That this is the true interpretation, and not, that, in standing before Festus, Cæsar's representative, he then stood before Cæsar, appears from the answer of Festus (v. 12), to Cæsar thou hast appealed, to Casar thou shalt go. Compare also xxviii. 18, 19, where St. Paul explains the reasons of his conduct in this respect, and says, that the Jews delivered him a prisoner into the hands of the Romans, who were ready to release him as innocent, but that the Jews resisted this design, and that therefore he was compelled to appeal to Cæsar.

St. Paul's privilege of Roman Citizenship was here made serviceable as before (xxii. 27; xxiii. 27) for the furtherance of the Gospel. See note on xxii. 25, and below on v. 23.

In the resistance of the Jews to his liberation, St. Paul recognized a fulfilment of what had been already revealed to him by God, concerning the witness he was to bear to Christ at Rome (see xix. 21; xxiii. 11). Therefore he adds, οδ με δεί κρίνεσθαι, where it is God's will that I should be judged. On this υσο οί δεῖ, see xix. 21, δεῖ με καὶ Ρώμην ίδεῖν: xxiii. 11, δεῖ καὶ εἰς Ρώμην μαρτυρήσαι: xxii. 24, Καίσαρι σὲ δεῖ παραστήναι.

Οbserve,—the words are not οδ δεῖ με κρίνεσθαι, but οδ μὲ

Observe,—the words are not ob δεί με κρίνεσθαι, but οδ μὲ δεί κρίνεσθαι, with an emphasis on μὲ, mε; so xxvii. 24, Καίσαρι σὲ δεί παραστῆναι. I have received a special direction from heaven in this matter. I, the Apostle of Christ, have a special duty to perform. My arrest by the Jews, and their charges against me, have already been made ministerial by God to the preaching of the Gospel by my mouth, from the stairs of the castle at Jerusalem to the People, and to the Sanhedrim, and before Felix at Cæsarea (see on xxi. 40; xxv. 23); and they are yet under divine counsel to be made subservient to a wider and yet, under divine counsel, to be made subservient to a wider and higher design—that of carrying me to preach the Gospel at Rome. Therefore I will not return to Jerusalem to be judged there, as thou proposest that I should do. I have delivered my message there; and it has been rejected. I have also delivered it at Cæsarea. I must now declare it at Rome.

These considerations may suggest a reply to the question,-

Why St. Paul appealed to Cæsar?

13. 'Αγρίππας δ βασιλεύs] Agrippa the king. Agrippa II., or Junior, son of Agrippa I., who was struck by a mortal disease at Cæsarea, A.D. 44 (see Acts xii. 19—23); and brother of Bernice and Drusilla (Acts xxiv. 24). It would seem as if the curse of Edom hung over this unhappy family.

Agrippa was only seventeen years old when his father died Agrippa was only seventeen years on when his father that (Joseph, Ant. xix. 9. 1), and was not allowed to succeed him at once; but received from Claudius (A.D. 48) the principality of Chalcis (Joseph. xx. 1. 1; 5. 2), and the superintendence of the Temple at Jerusalem, and the nomination of the High Priests (Joseph. xx. 1. 3). Four years afterwards he received the tetrarchies that had belonged to Philip and Lysanias (Luke iii. 1), with the title of King. And in A.D. 55 his dominions were further increased by Nero, with some cities in Galilee (Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. 5). He was the last of the Herods, and lived to see the fall of

8. 5). He was the last of the Herods, and lived to see the fall of Jerusalem, and died at the age of seventy-three, in the third year of Trajan, A.D. 100 (Phot. Bibl. Cod. 33. Winer, i. p. 485).

The assertion of Photius extending the life of Agrippa to the third year of Trajan is doubted by Pearson and Weistein (p. 628), who state grounds for believing that Agrippa died before that time. The difference of the language of Josephus, who flatters Agrippa in his Jewish History, published in Agrippa's lifetime, but sometimes censures him in his Antiquities (xx. 8, 11). lifetime, but sometimes censures him in his Antiquities (xx. 8. 11), published afterwards, has thus been accounted for.

It is observable, that although St. Luke calls Agrippa a King, he does not call him by the title which he gives to his father (xii. 1), "Herod the King (of Judæa);"—another instance of his accuracy.

— Βερνίκη | Bernice, the Macedonian name for Φερενίκη (see above on xvii. 10), eldest daughter of Herod Agrippa I. She had been married to her uncle Herod, king of Chalcis, and after his death to Polemon, king of Cilicia (St. Paul's country), whom she had deserted δι' ἀκολασίαν, ὡς ἔφασαν (Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 3); her infamous character was well known at Rome (Juvenal, vi. 155), where she had an illicit connexion with the destroyer of her country. (Sueton. Tit. 7.)

The following are the statements of Josephus and other ancient writers concerning her. Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 3, Βερνίκη δε μετά την Ήρώδου τελευτήν, δε αυτήε ανήρ και θείος έγεγόνει, πολύν χρόνον ἐπιχηρεύσασα, φήμης ἐπισχούσης, ὅτι τῷ ἀδελφῷ συνήει, πείθει Πολέμωνα, Κιλικίας δὲ ἢν οῦτος βασιλεύς, περιτεμσυνηει, πειθει Πολεμωνα, Κιλικίας δε ην ούτος βασιλεύς, περιτεμνόμενον άγεσθαι πρὸς γάμον αὐτην, οὕτως γὰρ ἐλέγξειν ὅετο ψευδεῖς τὰς διαβολάς. Suetonius, in the life of Titus (7), says, "Suspecta in eo (Tito) etiam luxuria erat—nec minus libido propter exoletorum et spadonum greges, propterque insignem reginæ Berenices amorem, cui etiam nuptias pollicitus ferebatur—Berenicen statim ab urbe dimisit, invitus invitam." St. Paul's arrest in the Temple at Jerusalem, and his appeal to his Roman citizenship, were made by Divine Providence the occasions for the public preaching of Christ on numerous great occasions, and to many illustrious auditories in different places; and thus the fury of Satan against him was overruled to places; and thus the fury of Satan against him was overruled to the glory of God, and to the extension of the kingdom of Christ by the preaching of His Word, as follows—

(1) To the people at Jerusalem from the stairs of the Castle (xxi. 40; xxii. 1—21).

(2) To the High Priest and Sanhedrim there (xxiii. 1—6).

(3) To Felix and the Roman Garrison, the Chiliarchs or Captains of the Roman Cohorts at Casarea (Joseph. B. J. iii. 4. 2), and other Chief Persons of that City (xxiv. 10—21).

(8) To the sailors and others in the voyage from Casarea

(9) To the chief and people of Malta (xxviii. 7-10).

(10) And lastly, the climax of all-at Rome, the Capital of the world (xxviii. 16-31). Well might St. Paul say what he did the world (xxviii. 10—31). Well high the ratio at Rome: "the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the Gospel." See Phil. ii. 12.

It is a striking coincidence, that Herod Agrippa II., the son and successor, and Bernice and Drusilla, the daughters of Herod Agrippa I., were brought by Divine Providence to hear the preaching of the Apostle Paul, at Casarea, the scene of the vain-glorious display and miserable end of their father, Herod Agrippa I., who had killed St. James, and imprisoned St. Peter (xii. 1. 3. 19—23).

Almighty God showed His long-suffering to the Princes, as well as to the People, of Judæa. He had sent the Baptist to Herod Antipas; he wrought a miracle to deliver St. Peter, and to awaken the conscience of Herod Agrippa the First; and his Children are now permitted to hear the word of God from St. Paul; a message made more solemn by the circumstances of their father's death. But as it was with the People, so also with the Princes of Judæa. They let the day of grace pass by. They neglected God's invitations and warnings; and in them the royal house of the Herods became extinct. Their kingdom was destroyed by those whose favour they courted, and to whom they looked for protection. They relied on the Roman power at Cæsarea, rather than on the favour of the God of Jerusalem; and they were enslaved by the Cæsars, because they rejected Christ.

Describe from the mount of his Judge. See also the avoval of Lysias above, xxiii. 29, and of Agrippa, xxvi. 31.

26. τφ Κυρίφ] 'Domino meo,' my Lord; a title declined by Augustus (Tertull. Apol. 34. Sueton. Octav. 53) and by Tiberius (Tacit. Ann. ii. 87. Sueton. Tiber. 27), because in their judgement it was due only to the gods; but now accepted and borne by Nero, who murdered his mother Agrippina, and his wife Octavia, and his master Seneca, and set fire to his own capital, and persecuted and martyred the Christians for his own sin, and killed the Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul.

In this world, he who calls Nero "his Lord," has the disposal of him who calls Christ his Lord,—a proof of a future Resurrection and of a Judgment to come.

In the Acts of the Apostles, Christ is displayed as Kupios, "Lord of Lords." "Hæc ideò observo (says Wetstein here) ut intelligamus Lucam qui Christum vocat κατ' έξοχὴν Κύριον, diinteligamus Lucam qui Christum vocat κατ εξοχήν Κυριον, αιvinam ejus naturam indicare voluisse." See Introduction, p. 4.

CH. XXVI. 1. την χείρα] the right hand,—the hand which was at liberty; - the other was chained, v. 29.

St. Paul's courage and presence of mind in public assemblies is noted by St. Luke on several occasions by reference to the action of his hands (see xiii. 16; xxi. 40); and this reference is characteristic of the narrative of an eye-witness.

2. ηγημαι] I have thought. St. Paul distinguishes between ηγούμαι and ηγημαι Phil. iii. 7, 8.

St. Paul, as a Christian Apostle, is studious to present himself in Agrippa's sight as a true Israelite, a legitimate heir of the promises to Abraham as a true ferante, a grippa himself was a Proselyte.

7. το δωδεκάφυλον ἡμῶν] our twelve tribes. See James i. 1.
St. Paul appeals from the Jews at Jerusalem to the Jewish nation throughout the world. He calls them δωδεκάφυλον, making one body spiritually, though scattered every where locally.

— ἐγκαλοῦμαι, βασιλεῦ, ὁπὸ Ἰουδαίων] Είz. has ὁπὸ τῶν Ἰ., but τῶν is not in A, B, C, E, G, H; and the sense is stronger without it. 'I, who am a Jew indeed (see v. 6), and am conwithout it. 'I, who am a Jew indeed (see v. 6), and am contending for the hope of Israel, am now accused by Jews.' Some MSS. place βασίλεῦ after 'lovδαίων. The death of St. Stephen is the only martyrdom described in the Acts, but doubtless there were many others, of which it is a specimen. See Heb. x. 32-34. The words, Heb. xii. 4, "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood," addressed to the control of the control dressed to the private Christians of Palestine, do not preclude the supposition, that many of their teachers, and many of the faithful at an earlier time, had suffered martyrdom for Christ. On the phrase ἐνέγκαι ψῆφον, see Wetst. p. 633. see Wetst. p. 633.

11. κατὰ πάσας τὰς συναγωγάς] through all the synagogues. A fulfilment of Christ's prophecy, Mark xiii. 9. St. Paul himself was often afterwards scourged in the Synagogue, 2 Cor. xi. 24. On the practice of scourging in the synagogues, see Selden, de Syned. ii. 10. Biscoe, p. 270, who examines the question why Paul was scourged in the Synagogue, but not 'put out of the Synagogue,' John ix. 22; xii. 42.

— ἐπιτροπῆs] commission,—a proof of his former dignity, and of what he sacrificed for Christ. On the history, see Acts ix. 3;

13. $\phi \hat{\omega} s$] light. If such was the splendour of His appearance then, and such its effects,—what will they be, when He comes hereafter in His glorious Majesty to judge the quick and dead?

14. τ. Έβραΐδι διαλέκτφ] in the Hebrew tongue. St. Paul, therefore, was not now speaking in Hebrew, but probably in Greek. This appears also from a comparison of this passage with xxii. 7, where he was speaking in Hebrew, xxi. 40.

- τί μὲ διώκεις;] Not τί διώκεις μέ; but τί μὲ δ.; μὲ is emphatic. Me, the Lord of all; Me, thy Saviour and King; Me, the Head of the Church, Who am persecuted by those who persecute her. See above, ix. 4.

— σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν] A proverb taken from the act of an ox kicking against the goad which wounds him whenever he kicks. (Vorst. de Adag. N. T. p. 821.) "Durum est tibi adversus stimulum calces mittere," says Aug. Serm. 169, "possem enim te dimittere; tu vexareris punitionibus Meis, non Ego frangerer calcibus tuis, sed non te dimitto. Sævis, et misereor; Quid Me persequeris? Non enim timeo te, ne iterum Me crucifigas; sed volo agnoscas Me, ne occidas non Me sed te.'

It is not (as some have supposed) divine grace, but the resistless power and punitive justice of Christ, which are here compared to the κέντρον, or goad. By persecuting others, Saul was resisting Him Who is irresistible, and provoking Him Who is the Judge of all,—ἄλλους διώκων αὐτὸς ἐκδιώκεται. He is impinging on the "stone of stumbling," which will grind him to powder.

Even when in Heaven, our Blessed Lord did not disdain to use a proverb familiar to the Heathen world. Cp. Pindar, Pyth. ii. 173, φέρειν δ' έλαφρῶς Ἐπαυχένιον λαβόντα Ευγόν γ' ἀρήγει.

On our Lord's use of Proverbs, see Matt. vii. 3; xiii. 52.

Luke v. 39.

The adage is fitly introduced by St. Paul in this speech before a heathen Procurator and a mixed audience at Cæsarea, but was not recited in his address at Jerusalem, xxii. 7. It was very suitable to be addressed to him who was to be the Apostle of the Gentiles. The ox is a Scriptural emblem for the Christian Minister (Isa. xxxii. 20) drawing the plough over the field which is to receive the seed of the Word; or as treading out the corn when grown, in order that it may be ground into bread. I used as such by St. Paul himself, 1 Cor. ix. 9. 1 Tim. v. 18.

16. ὀφθήσομαι] I will reveal myself. A prophetic intimation that Saul was to expect further revelations from Jesus; this promise was afterwards fulfilled in Arabia (Gal. i. 11. 17), at Jerusalem (xxiii. 11), and elsewhere (2 Cor. xii. 1-7).

17. ἐξαιρούμενος] 'eripiens,' Vulg. ρυόμενος, Hesych.; 'delivering thee from,' Authorized English Version,—a rendering 34; xii. 11; xxiii. 27, which, with the present passage, are the only places where it is found in this book. Indeed, εξαιρεῖσθαι is never used for 'choose' in the New Testament.

It may be observed here, in justice to the Authorized Version, that it has not unfrequently been condemned for renderings preferable to those which some persons, who censure it, have proposed to substitute for them. See xxi. 16; xxvi. 22; xxvii. 12.

— σè ἀποστέλλω] σè is emphatic; i.e. thou, now a Persecutor, art to be My Apostle to them. I am sending thee to them. See on Rom. i. 1. Christ gave an Apostolic commission to St. Paul at his Conversion; but St. Paul was not ordained and enabled by the Holy Ghost to execute the Apostolic office till some years afterwards. See above on xiii. 1, 2. In like manner also, the other Apostles received an Apostolic mission from Christ, to go into all the world, after His Resurrection; but they were commanded by Him to tarry in Jerusalem after His Ascension, till they should be endued with power from on high (Luke xxiv. 49. Acts i. 4. 9); and they were not ordained and empowered by the Holy Ghost to execute their Apostolic functions until the Day of Pentecost.

This is very necessary to be observed, because some persons have dated St. Paul's Apostleship from his Conversion; thus excluding the Holy Spirit from His proper work in the Ordination

19. οδκ έγενόμην ἀπειθής] I did not become disobedient.

(Luke xxiv. 26. 46.) they did learn it under the influence of the Holy Ghost (Acts iii. they did learn it under the influence of the Holy Ghost (Acts iii. 18; xvii. 3) afterwards, when τὰ παθήματα τοῦ Χριστοῦ were often in their mouths. 2 Cor. i. 5—7. 26. τοῦτο] this. The last word in the sentence, and emphatic. See above, v. 17. In a corner was not done this; i.e. this my Conversion; it was in the public road at mid-day; not so, the two conspiracies of the Jews to take away my life (xxiii. 16; xxv. 3). They were done in a corner.

28. ἐν ὀλίγφ μὲ πείθεις Χριστιανον γενέσθαι] in a trice thou art persuading me to become a Christian. The meaning of these words, and of St. Paul's reply, which must be considered with them, has been the subject of much controversy. It appears to be as follows:

St. Paul had been relating to Agrippa the history of his own sudden conversion from a strict Pharisee (v. 5) and bitter Persecutor of the Church (v. 9), to a Christian Confessor and Apostle (vv. 16-20).

Festus had interrupted him by the exclamation, "thou art mad, Paul." Paul, having denied that assertion, and having asserted his own sanity, next turns himself to Agrippa, and appeals to his knowledge of what had been said. He then makes a personal application to him as a Jew, and appeals to his faith in the Hebrew Scriptures of Moses and the Prophets. And on the ground of that faith he urges him to take the next step as a logical consequence of that faith, and to confess Christ, and declare himself a Christian (see vv. 22-27).

Agrippa feels the force of the appeal; he does not deny the truth of St. Paul's premises, nor does he say that the duty of confessing Christ is not their reasonable conclusion; but he endeavours to parry the blow, and evade its force. He tries to repel St. Paul's appeal by a personal reference to his case. Thou hast described thine own conversion to Christianity. It was very rapid and sudden; it was effected er ολίγφ, in a short time,-in a moment,-as it were with a word and a blow. This might have been very well for thee, who hast had, as thou sayest, a call from heaven to become a Christian. It may be right that I also should embrace Christianity; but such a great and important change requires much time and thought, for one like myself in high estate and royal dignity,—one who is a Jewish king and has the charge of the Temple. What a change would that be to me!—to me, the head of the royal house of the Herods, to become a Christian! You are hurrying me on too fast. You are attempting to do in a short time, and with little effort, what requires a long time and great consideration. You are endeavouring to do with me what you say was done with you. Hence the words are not πείθειs με, but μὲ πείθειs. Ἐν ὁλίγφ μὲ πείθειs Χριστιανὸν γενέσθαι, ' You are attempting in a short time and with a few words, and with a slight effort, to persuade me to imitate thee, and to become a Christian at once.'

As Œcumenius (p. 177) well explains it, δι' ὀλίγων ὁημάτων, έν βραχέσι λόγοις, έν ὸλίγη διδασκαλία. And so Cassiodor., "sub celeritate vis me facere Christianum." Cp. the French "à la hâte," "tout d'un coup."

This interpretation is also confirmed by the reading of A, πείθη-ποιήσαι, i. e. you persuade yourself that you can make me a Christian ἐν ὀλίγφ, - as you were made. The latter reading, ποιησαι, is also in B, and has been received by Lachm. and Tisch., not by Born. and Alf.

Further, it is illustrated by the other passage, where &v δλίγφ occurs in the New Testament, viz. Eph. iii. 3, προέγραψα έν δλίγφ, in a short compass; which is similar to St. Peter's δι' ολίγων έγραψα, 1 Pet. v. 12; and there is a similar ellipsis of χρόνον after δλίγον in Rev. xvii. 10, δλίγον αὐτὸν δεῖ μεῖναι.
This exposition is also corroborated by St. Paul's reply, which may be thus paraphrased:

"You speak of my reliance on my powers of persuasion to bring you to become what I myself am. You think that I am hoping and endeavouring to hurry you on into a profession of Christianity by my oratory. No; I rely not on human eloquence, but on divine grace. That it was which converted me. And in your case also, I do not rely on persuasion, but on prayer,—not on the arguments of Paul, but on supplications to God." Perhaps St. Paul thought of St. Stephen's prayer for himself (Fig. 60). Perhaps Stephen's prayer for himself (Fig. 60). himself (vii. 60). Perhaps Stephen's words were so ordered by the Holy Spirit as to give to that prayer a part in the work of his own conversion. Persuade I may not, in a short time and with little effort, but pray I may and will to God, not only now, in a brief address, and with little labour, but in a long time, and with great earnestness and intensity, that not only thou (or is emphatic, as the preceding $\mu \hat{\epsilon}$); but that all who hear me this day may become such as I am—except these bonds."

Thus St. Paul calmly disposes of Agrippa's disparaging allusion to the case of his Conversion, as if that had been unduly hasty, sudden, and precipitate. He disclaims the notion which Agrippa had ascribed to him, of attempting to carry him away by the force of his powers of persuasion; he vindicates for divine grace its proper place in all works of genuine Conversion, and therefore in his own; and he extends the range of his appeal from Agrippa to all who heard him; and he instructs all Christian advocates to endeavour to win souls to Christ by fervent and unwearied prayer.

- Χριστιανόν] a Christian. A more courteous term than the Nαζωραΐος of Tertullus, xxiv. 5: but probably here used ironically. The first time that we hear the word 'Christian' actually employed in a speech, is here in the mouth of an Idumæan Prince; a proof that it was commonly known as a name of the believers, although it only occurs three times in the New Testament. Acts xi. 26, here, and 1 Pet. iv. 16.

Herod Agrippa II., who had received from Rome the privilege of superintending the Temple at Jerusalem, and of nominating the High Priests (Joseph. xx. 1. 3), is here presented as an example of knowledge, without moral courage to act upon it. This is also the clue which unravels the mysterious inconsistencies in the character and writings of Agrippa's friend (Joseph. Ant. xx. ad finem. Euseb. iii. 10), the Jewish historian Josephus; on which subject the Editor may, perhaps, be permitted to refer to what has been said by him more fully in another place, as illustrating the case of Agrippa also. (Sermon "On the Life and Character of Josephus.") Agrippa lived to see the destruction of that Temple and Ritual of which he had the charge; he saw them dissolved and VOL. I .- PART II.

ruined by that secular Power, to which, from motives of policy and worldly expediency, he had attached himself.

What might have been the destiny of Herod and of Jerusalem, if he had possessed the moral courage of St. Paul!

29. εὐξαίμην ἃν τῷ Θεῷ] See the note on v. 28. The words καl $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ δλίγφ are not to be joined to what follows (a forced connexion), but to what precedes: "Persuade I may not be able now, but pray I well might now and ever."

Πολλφ is found in the majority of MSS. and in Chrys. and other Fathers; but A, B, and four Cursives have $\mu \epsilon \gamma d\lambda \varphi$, which has been received by Lach., Tisch., Born., and Alf. It may perhaps be the true reading; but A, B are not always trustworthy guides (see Bornemann on xxiii. 16; xxv. 1); and here, v. 28, they have $\pi o \iota \hat{\eta} \sigma a \iota$, and A has $\pi \epsilon \iota \theta \eta$, which readings seem to proceed from a criticism that did not scruple to modify the text. Besides, St. Luke uses μεγάλφ as opposed to μικρφ, v. 22, and viii. 10. μεγάλη has been substituted for πολλή by some MSS. in viii. 8.

The words are well explained by Œcumenius, ἐν ὀλίγφ καὶ εν πολλφ, αντί του εν όλίγφ λόγων αγώνι, εί δεοι καί εν πλείονι, εὐξαίμην σε Χριστιανόν αν γενέσθαι δια πάντων πρόθυμός εἰμι πάντα ποιείν έπὶ τῆ σῆ σωτηρία, οὐ τῆ σῆ μόνον, ἀλλά καὶ τῶν

30. $\grave{a}\nu\acute{e}\sigma\imath\eta$] he rose up. And so the opportunity was lost. The suddenness of the loss seems to be marked by the rapid transition in the words of the Historian.

— ή τε Βερνίκη] and Bernice: Bernice and Drusilla, daughters of King Agrippa I., and sisters of Agrippa II. (see above on xxv. 13), jealous of one another, and of profligate lives (Joseph. xx. 6. 1), are associated with two Roman Procurators in succession; Drusilla with Felix, her reputed husband; Bernice with Festus, through Agrippa her brother, in the public hearing of St. Paul at Cæsarea, where he was imprisoned through the envy of the Rulers of Jerusalem.

Thus the Gospel of Christ was brought into contact with the vices of both sexes, and of the Roman and Jewish world. How difficult was the work of moral purification it had to perform!

By hallowing Marriage as a "great Mystery" (Eph. v. 32), as a "representation of the mystical Union and Marriage betwirt Himself and His Church," Christ regenerated the World.

But, if Marriage is to be descerated and degraded from a Holy Mystery to a secular bargain; if Divorce is to be made easy by Law; then all the evils of the age of Nero will again flow in upon society; and we may see Bernices and Drusillas sitting with great pomp in high places of this world, and taking cognizance of the doctrines of St. Paul.

31. οὐδὲν θανάτου άξιον—πράσσει] St. Paul's innocence was declared by all who took cognizance of his cause. And consequently the Jews were condemned by them. As Chrys. says, Lysias condemned them, Felix condemned them, Festus condemned them, Agrippa condemned them, and ultimately God condemned them, and destroyed their Temple and their City for their hostility to the Gospel.

this narrative of that great event, the conveyance of the Gospel to Rome, the capital of the world, by the ministry of the Apostle of the Gentiles, is noticeable, and seems to have been ordered by Divine Providence, so as to show that all things will be made subservient to the progress and triumph of Christianity.

St. Paul goes from Cæsarea; and it is mentioned by St. Luke that he was conducted by a Roman Centurion, recalling to the mind by his name, and that of his cohort, those of the first two Emperors, Julius and Augustus.

It is also probable that the cohort here mentioned belonged to the body-guard of the Emperor. See Tacit. Ann. xiv. 15, "cohors Augustanorum." Sueton. Ner. 25. Dion Cass. Ixiii. 8.
Wieseler, p. 391. It is not said that the Cohort itself was at Cæsarea; but Julius, the Centurion of that Cohort, was.

If this is so, it is observable, that an Officer, whose duty it was to protect the person of the Master of the Roman World, is here employed by God to save the life of St. Paul (v. 43).

And surely it is not without some prophetic and spiritual meaning, that St. Paul was empowered, through his influence with Julius, the Centurion of the Augustan cohort, to save the lives of his fellow-prisoners in the ship (v. 43). See further below, on xxviii. 15, 16, on the subserviency of human powers to the Gospel under the overruling control of God.

And it is not probable that if els had been in the original text, it would have been here rejected; whereas, it was not unlikely to have been introduced by Copyists, not familiar with the more recondite phrase, πλεῖν τόπους, on which compare Hanno, Peripl. ap. Wetstein, πλεῖν τοὺς παραθαλασσίους τόπους, and Pausan. i. 35, weistein, πλείν τους παρασαλασίους νόπους, and the remarks of Winer, Gr. § 32, p. 200, who refers to Poppo, Thuc. vi. 36. The sense is, The ship was about to sail by the places along the coast of Asia.—πλείν εls would signify that it was along the coast of Asia.—πλείν εls would signify that it was sailing to them with an intention of touching at them, which does not appear to have been the case.

It would seem that the original intention was, that St. Paul and the other prisoners should take their passage to Adramyttium, and proceed by the overland route across Greece toward Italy; as St. Paul probably afterwards did, in his last journey to Rome; and as S. Ignatius also did; each of them going thither to Martyrdom. See below on 2 Tim. iv. 13.

'Aριστάρχου] Aristarchus. See xix. 29; xx. 4. Col. iv. Philem. 24. St. Luke mentions the name of Aristarchus— 10. Philem. 24. but not his own.

3. φιλανθρώπως] kindly. An evidence of the truth of this History. The Writer of the Acts has no desire to magnify unduly the sufferings of St. Paul. Cp. xxviii. 31.

4. ὑπεπλεύσαμεν] we sailed under the lee of. Their course must have been along the north coast of Cyprus (not the South), because they sailed not through narrow straits, but deep, through pecause they sailed not through narrow straits, but deep, involunt the πέλαγοτ (not θάλασσα: cp. Matt. xviii. 6), or broad expanse of water (πλάτος θαλάσσης, Hesych.), off the shore of Cilicia and Pamphylia. See Smith, pp. 63—67.

The mention of Mr. Smith's work ("On the Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul," with Dissertations, by James Smith, Esq., of Jordanhill, F.R.S., 2nd ed. Lond. 1856) suggests an expression of thankfulous for the harmy combination of Geographical. sion of thankfulness for the happy combination of Geographical, Archeological, and Naval knowledge, in that illustration of this narrative, and for the example there displayed of the application of science and experience to the exposition of the divine Word.

We may also refer here to Mr. Howson's Chapter on the Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul, one of the most interesting portions of that attractive work; ch. xxiii. of the two Volumes by Messrs. Conybeare and Howson, on St. Paul's Life and Epistles.

The narrative of this Chapter is also well illustrated in Mr. Lewin's Life and Epistles of St. Paul, pp. 713—742.

5. Μύρα] Myra, neuter plural. Μύρα, πόλις Λυκίας, λέγεται και θηλυκόν και οὐδέτερον. (Steph. Byz.) Its remains are described by Houson, ii. p. 387.

6. πλοῖον 'Αλεξανδρῖνον] A merchantman, probably a "navis frumentaria," or corn-ship, from Alexandria, the capital of Egypt, the granary of Italy. Cp. Sueton. Galb. 10. Tacit. Hist. iv. 52. Varro, R. R. ii. procem. Lucan vi. 105. See v. 38.

How came the Alexandrine ship, sailing to Italy, to be at Myra in Lycia?

The wind was westerly (v. 4), and the ships of the ancients were not fitted for working to windward; and under the circumstances of the case, the Alexandrine ship would stand to north till it came to the land of Asia Minor, which is very favourable for navigation by such vessels, the coast being bold and safe, and abounding in harbours. The Alexandrine ship was carried to Myra by the same westerly winds that forced the Adramyttian vessel to the east of Cyprus. (Smith, p. 71.) Cp. Wetst., p. 638, who shows from the history of the voyage of S. Athanasius in A.D. 349, from Alexandria to Rome, that Alexandrine ships sometimes took that course, especially in unfavourable weather.

Cp. Socrates, H. E. ii. 24. Sozomen, vi. 25.
Some of these Alexandrine corn-ships were large and noble vessels, as was this in which St. Paul sailed. See v. 37. For examples of their bulk see Lucian, Navig. 5, and for other particulars with respect to them, Seneca, Ep. 77. Sueton., Aug. 98.
7. βραδυπλοοῦντες] slowly sailing; the opposite term to εὐθυ-δρομούντες (xvi. 11; xxi. 1). - μόλις] with difficulty (see vv. 8. 16. 1 Pet. iv. 18) having arrived over against Cnidus.

- μή προσεώντος] The words μή προσεώντος are not to be joined to what precedes, but to what follows. Since the wind did not allow us to advance, we sailed under the lee of Crete (i. e. along the east coast of it), towards Salmone, which is s.w. by s. from Cnidus. The wind was therefore North-west; a wind which prevails in the Eastern part of the Archipelago in the summer months. (Purdy's Sailing Directions for the Mediterranean, p. 197. Smith, p. 74.) It is the same wind as the Etesiae of the ancients. (Plin. ii. 4.)

— Σαλμώντην | Saimone. "Creta longissima est, ad orientem habens Sammonium promontorium adversum Rhodo."

N. H. iv. 20.

8. παραλεγόμενοι] coasting it along the southern shore: they were not able to coast along the north shore of Crete, on account of the adverse wind.

- Καλούς Λιμένας] still preserving its ancient name (Pococke's Travels, ii. 250), as does Lasea, which is about five miles to the East of it. (Smith, pp. 80. 245. 262.) About two leagues to the west of Fair Havens is Cape Matala, where the coast of Crete begins to run northward, at nearly the central point of the south side of Crete. The plural number (Kahol Améves) seems to be due to the circumstances of its having two open roadsteads; one a little to the east of the other.

9. τοῦ πλοός] the voyage to Italy (see v. 10) was then dangerous, on account of the violent northerly winds which blow in the Ægæan at that season.

On the form πλοῦς, πλοὺς, for the Attic πλοῦς, πλοῦ, see Lobeck, Phryn. p. 453. It is used in Martyr. Ignat. 3. Cp. νοὸς 1 Cor. xiv. 19; and see Winer, p. 59.

- τὴν νηστείαν] the fast; the day of Atonement, 10th of Tisri (October). Lev. xvi. 1-34; xxiii. 26-30. Numb. xxix.

1-11. Jahn, Archæol. § 357.

There is a remarkable Rabbinical gloss on Isa. xlifi. 16. "Who maketh a way in the sea," i. e. from the Feast of Pentecost to the Feast of Tabernacles (five days after the Fast). See Schoettgen, p. 482. And the Rabbis say (Sabbat. v. 3), "No one ought to sail between the feast of Tabernacles and Dedication.

By a like figure of speech the Athenians spoke of the weather for sailing, as beginning after the Dionysia. (Theophrast.  ναυκλήρφ] the 'magister navis'—'navicularius' (Gloss.

12. ἀνευθέτου] not well placed; not commodiously situated. Its name shows that it was a good harbour in some seasons, and so it is described in modern works on navigation (see Smith, pp. 81, 82), but it was not commodious to winter in. It is, in fact, an open roadstead; or rather two open roadsteads, with good anchorage, and looking to the south.

— фоlvіка] Phænix. See next note.

- βλέποντα κατά Λίβα καὶ κατά Χῶρον] Libs (from Libya), the Greek name for the Roman Africus, and opposite to Aquilo. Plin. N. H. xviii. 77, who adds that Corus is opposite to Vulturnus. Cp. Virgil, Georg. iii. 356, "Spirantes frigora Cauri;" and v. 278, "In Borean Caurumque," and Seneca (Qu. Nat. v. 16. 4), " solstitiali occidente Corus venit; ab occidente hiberno Africus furibundus et ruens apud Græcos $\Lambda^{i}\psi$ dicitur."

The words in the text are rendered by Vulg. "respicientem ad Africum et ad Corum;" and by the Authorized English Ver-sion, "which lieth toward the South-west and North-west." This rendering has been rejected by recent able Interpreters, particularly by Afford, Smith, and Howson, who understand the phrase to mean, looking towards the points to which (and not from which) the South-west and North-west winds blow; i. e. not turning the face towards, but the back on, those winds; and looking to the South-east and North-east. And on this supposition they identify Phanix with the harbour now called Lutro, about forty miles west of Fair Havens, and which is described as being the best, and indeed the only safe winter harbour in that part of Crete, and looks to the South-east and North-east. See Smith, pp. 84-93. Howson, ii. pp. 398-400, and Alford's Besides, Phania is described by Strabo (x. 4) as on the south of the isthmus, or narrowest part of Crete, and this corresponds to Lutro; it is called 'Apábeva by Hierocles, Synecdem., and Aradena is called Anapolis by Steph. Byzant.; and Mr. Pashley (Crete, ii. 257) found two villages, called Aradena and Anapolis, at a little distance above Lutro, and he says (ii. "Port Phoenix is at Lutro."

257) "Port Phoenix is at Lutro."

The question is one of grammatical interpretation; and it its principles, to render the words does not seem consistent with its principles, to render the words in question in any other way than that in which they have been translated in the Vulgate and other Versions.

The expressions by which the learned writers mentioned above have endeavoured to confirm their interpretation, do not appear to be relevant to the case before us. No doubt Their κατὰ δεῦμα is to sail down the stream; and al κατὰ λίβα προσβολαί, quoted from Josephus, are gusts from the South-west. And so κατ' ἄνεμον φέρεσθαι, and ἐκραγῆναι κατ' εδρον, might be used, as in Latin secundum flumina, along the side and in the direction of the rivers. So Herod. iii. 10, ἐφέροντο κατά κῦμα καὶ κατ' ἄνεμον.

But in those cases the verb connected with kara is one of motion with; and not of rest, or of direction toward, like βλέπω, the verb used here.

To describe a harbour as looking with or down the wind, is not a natural mode of expression. The best illustration of St. Luke's phraseology is to be derived from St. Luke himself, viz.,

In Acts ii. 10 we have Λιβύης της κατά Κυρήνην, toward Cyrene. iii. 13, κατὰ πρόσωπον Πιλάτου, face to face before Pilate. Cp. xxv. 16; viii. 26, πορεύου κατὰ μεσημβρίαν, go toward the South. So xvi. 7, κατά την Μυσίαν, and κατά την Βιθυνίαν. So in the present chapter, v. 2, τους κατά την 'Ασίαν τόπους. υ. 5, πέλαγος το κατά την Κιλικίαν. υ. 7, γενόμενος κατά τὴν Κυίδον, ὑπεπλεύσαμεν κατά τὴν Σαλμώνην,—in all which cases there is an idea of direction towards, or juxtaposition at. Cp. St. Paul's expression, Phil. iii. 14, κατά σκοπὸν διώκω. Gal. ii. 11, κατά πρόσωπον αὐτῷ ἀντέστην. σκοπον διώκω. Gal. ii. I Gal. iii. 1, κατ' όφθαλμούς.

It has been said, indeed, that λlψ and χώρος here do not signify fixed points of the compass; but only winds, which sometimes blow, and sometimes do not. But this does not seem a tenable opinion. St. Luke is describing the habitual aspect of the harbour, its geographical bearings, independently of variable circumstances, especially of so fortuitous and fickle a condition, as whether a given wind happened to blow or not. And βλέπω, like the Latin specto, describes a continual relation. Cp. Herodian, vi. 5. 2, πρὸς τὰ ἀρκτῷα μέρη βλέπουσαν, looking to the north. Cæsar, B. G. vii. 69, "pars collis ad orientem spectabat," i. e. had an easterly aspect.

If, therefore, Lutro is Phoenix, the true interpretation of the passage is this,-" If by any means they might reach Phoenix and winter in it, being a Cretan harbour, which, as approached from the sea, looks toward the south-west and north-west; and is therefore sheltered from those winds by the land."

In favour of this interpretation, it may be said, that it is more natural, in describing the good properties of a harbour, as here, to speak of the winds from which it is sheltered, than of those to which it is exposed;

Also, that St. Luke suggests this nautical mode of regarding land objects from the sea, and of interpreting his words accordingly, by the expression in v. 27, δπενδουν οι ναῦται προσάγειν τινὰ αὐτοῖς χάραν, the sailors deemed that some land was drawing near them. See note there; and see also a similar nautical expression above, xxi. 3.

But, if the expression of St. Luke here, βλέποντα κατά λίβa, is to be rendered, facing the s.w. from the land, then we must look for Phænix in some other place than Lutro. identification of Phoenix with Lutro is of recent date. The harbour of Lutro has only been lately discovered by British Navigators. Perhaps, when the southern coast of Crete has been more accurately surveyed, another harbour may be found, which may correspond with the words of St. Luke, understood in this latter sense.

And, in the Charts of Crete (Smith, p. 94. Howson, p. 399), is a bay a little to the west of Lutro. This bay is marked Phineka. This is the modern Greek pronunciation of Polyna. And this bay looks from the land to the s.w., i. e. κατά λίβα and κατά

May not it be the Phanix of St. Luke?

The coast has probably been changed by time; and if, as represented in the Charts, two streams flow into it, what is now X/2 δε νότου δόξαντες της προθέσεως κεκρατηκέναι άραντες άσσον παρελέγοντο την Κρήτην. 14 Μετ' οὐ πολὺ δὲ ἔβαλε κατ' αὐτης ἄνεμος τυφωνικός, ὁ καλούμενος Ευρακύλων. 15 Συναρπασθέντος δε τοῦ πλοίου, καὶ μὴ δυναμένου ἀντοφθαλμεῖν τῷ ἀνέμω, ἐπιδόντες ἐφερόμεθα. 16 Νησίον δέ τι ὑποδραμόντες καλούμενον Κλαύδην ἰσχύσαμεν μόλις περικρατείς γενέσθαι της σκάφης. 17 ην αραντες βοηθείαις έχρωντο ύποζωννύντες τὸ πλοίον φοβούμενοί τε μή είς τὴν Σύρτιν ἐκπέσωσι, χαλάσαντες τὸ σκεῦος, οῦτως ἐφέροντο. 18 Σφοδρῶς δὲ a bay may have been formerly a safe harbour. (See Smith, p.

Facing, as Phineka does, the s.w. and N.w., it would have protected the vessel from the E.N.E. wind, which soon after arose and blew continuously for many days. In this respect it would have been εύθετος πρὸς παραχειμασίαν. Perhaps, also, its nearness to the harbour of Lutro, where a ship would be sheltered from North-westerly and South-westerly winds, was a circumstance which, combined with others, made it more "commodious to winter in" than Fair Havens.

13. δποπνεύσαντος νότου] the south wind having sprung up. This was a change; for from Cnidus to Fair Havens they had had N.w. winds. They hoped that the south wind would carry them round Cape Matala to Phoenix, which lay to NN.W. of Fair Havens.

— ἄραντες] sc. ἀγκύρας—they weighed anchor (on this use of ἄραντες, see Thucyd. i. 29; iii. 91); and they were coasting along Crete more closely (ἄσσον) than before (so Winer, § 35, p. 217, and R. W. B. i. p. 102, and Meyer). ἄσσον = πλησίον, ἐγγὺς, Hesych.; it is used by Josephus, Ant. i. 20. I, τοὺς μὲν προϋπεμπε τοὺς δὲ λειπομένους ἄσσον ἐκέλευσε ἀκολουθεῖν. Antonin. Lib. fab. 41, βῆναι εἰς ἄσσον τῷ κυνί. Joseph. Ant. xix. 2. 4. Herod. iv. 3, ἰέναι ἄσσον αὐτῶν, add. vii. 233. Conjuncendum autem est ἄσσον των προελέγωντο Livian. Η. V. I. jungendum autem est ἀσσον cum παρελέγοντο Lucian. H. V. 1, p. 657, τῆ ἐπιούση δὲ, ἄραντες ἐπλέομεν πλησίον τῶν νεφῶν.

The Vulgate has 'cum sustulissent de Asson,' as if the reference was to Assos (see above, xx. 13), and so the Æthiopic Version: the Syriac and Arabic have Thasos. Our English Authorized Version renders it 'they sailed close by Crete;' and so Beza and Wetstein, who gives numerous examples of this use of dooov, p. 640.

14. ἔβαλε] See on Mark xiv. 72, and below, v. 41, ἐρείσασα, and v. 43, αποβρίψαντας.

- κατ' αὐτη̂s] i. e. against Crete, from the heights of Mount Ida. Cp. Matt. viii. 32, κατά τοῦ κρημνοῦ.—αὐτῆs cannot refer (as some have thought) to the ship, which is called πλοΐον. Cp.

— ἄνεμος τυφωνικός] a violent wind; a hurricane or whirl-wind, sometimes called τυφών, Hesych. Plin. N. H. ii. 49, "Typhon, locum ex loco mutans rapidâ vertigine, præcipua navigantium pestis, non antennas modò, verùm ipsa navigia contorta frangens."

— Εὐρακύλων] So A and B*, and Vulg. and Cassiodor., which have "Euro-aquilo." This reading seems also to be confirmed by the Sahidic Version, which has Εὐρακήλων, and to have given rise to Εὐτρακήλων in the Coptic, and Εὐρακύκλων in the Armenian, and Aquilo in the Æthiopic Version.

Εὐρακύλων has been approved by Grotius, and ably defended by Bentley (on Freethinking, pp. 98-100, ed. Camb. 1743), and by Mr. Smith, p. 98, and in his Dissertation, pp. 154-159, and it has been received by Lachm. and Bornemann.

Elz. has Εὐροκλύδων. G, H have Εὐροκλύδων. B has Εὐρυκλύδων.

St. Luke says that the word in question was the name of a wind (åveµos, see also v. 15, $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ åveµ φ). But Euro-clydon is rather the name of a wave $(\kappa \lambda \hat{\psi} \delta \omega \nu)$ than of a wind.

Besides, the writer says, that the avenus was that which is called (δ καλούμενος) by the name in question. It was known by that name. If, then, Euroclydon were the true reading, it would probably be found somewhere as a name of a wind; but it nowhere occurs as such.

None of these objections apply to the reading Εὐρακόλων. The wind, Εὐρακύλων, in Latin, Euro-aquilo, was the name given by Mariners, especially Italians, to what the ancient Greeks called Kaurias, which was the wind between Eurus and Aquilo, i. e. is the E.N.E. wind in the Roman compass; and therefore called Euro-aguilo by the Roman seamen, as Euro-notus and Euroauster, similar compounds, were used to designate the s.E.

It may be said that the proper etymological form of the word in the text would be Εὐροακυλων. And it is not improbable that that is the true reading. The confusion of EYPOAKYAON and EΥΡΟΚΛΥΔΩΝ is a very easy one, and likely to be made by the Copyists, who would be more familiar with the word κλύδων than

As has been well shown by Mr. Smith, p. 98, the effect of an E.N.E. wind, would have been precisely such as is described by St. Luke to have been produced on the ship.

15. ἐπιδόντες ἐφερόμεθα] we gave the ship to the gale, and scudded before it. Eurip. Troad. 683, ἐνδόντες τύχη, said of sailors committing their ship to fortune. Heliod. Æthiop. i. 3, τοῦ κυβερνήτου ἐνδόντος (scil. τὸ πλοῖον) τῷ ἀνέμφ. Plutarch. de fortuna Rom. p. 319. Cæsar ad navis gubernatorem fluctus vehementiores timentem, τόλμα, καὶ δέδιθι μηδέν, άλλα ἐπιδίδου τβ τύχη τὰ Ιστία, καὶ δέχου τὸ πνεύμα, τῷ πνέοντι πιστεύων, ὅτι Καίσαρα φέρεις καὶ τὴν Καίσαρος τύχην. (Kuin.) Cp. Wetst. p. 641.

16. ὑποδραμόντες] having run under the lee of a little island called Claudé, in order to have stiller water, and to be sheltered from the wind, so as to be enabled to hoist up the boat (which was towed after the ship), and to lash it on board; and to undergird the ship, to keep its timbers together, and to equip it better for the storm. Their next care was to lower the sail and bring down her spars and rigging. Cp. Kitto, p. 439.

- Κλαύδην] So A (probably) and G, H; but B has Καύδα, and S. Jerome has Cauden, and this, it seems, is the true reading. The modern name of the island is Gozzo,—a corruption of Kλαῦδος and Gaudus, the name given it by Ptolemy, iii. 7, and Mela, ii. 7, and Plin. iv. 20, "dextra Cretam habenti contra Hierapytnam Gaudos." It lies about twenty miles to the South of Crete.

- μόλις] with difficulty (vv. 7 and 8), because of the high sea, and because the boat was probably full of water, and also "because the ship must have been rounded with her head to the wind and her sails trimmed, so that she had no head-way." (Smith.)

— περικρατείς γ. τ. σκάφης] to get possession of the boat by hoisting it with cables thrown round (περί) it. And yet all this was labour lost, because afterwards the boat, which had been hoisted on board with difficulty, was allowed to fall off (v. 32).

17. βοηθείαις] stays and braces to keep the ship together. (Arist. Rhet. ii. 5.)

- δποζωννύντες] undergirding by "cables passed round the hull or frame of the ship,"—commonly called "frapping it," lest, by the straining of her planks and timbers, the vessel should leak and founder. (Smith, p. 106. Howson, pp. 373. 405.)

- την Σύρτιν] the Lesser Syrtis, or African quick-sand, to the s.w. of Crete. Strabo, ii. p. 185. Plin. N. H. v. 4. nus, xxvii.

— χαλάσαντες τὸ σκεῦος] The neuter singular σκεῦος, which occurs frequently in N. T. (Luke viii. 16. John xix. 29. Acts ix. 15; x. 11. 1 Thess. iv. 4. 1 Pet. iii. 7. Cp. Vorst. de Hebr. pp. 29-33), denotes some single object, and as such is distinguished from the feminine σκενή, supellex. And σκενος, with the definite Article, as here, signifies some special object of importance,—that which might κατ' έξοχην be called το σκεῦος.

It is most probably the main-yard and sail. Some sail would doubtless be necessary to work the vessel on the starboard tack, i. e. with the right side to windward, so as to keep her off the quick-sand; but a press of canvas such as would not do any harm while they were under the lee of Claudé or Gozzo, would be attended with danger in such a tempestuous gale as that which had overtaken them; and therefore they might be constrained χαλάν, i.e. to lower with ropes (see the use of χαλάν Mark ii. 4. Luke v. 4. Acts ix. 25; xxvii. 30. 2 Cor. xi. 33), τδ σκεῦος, the main-yard and its sail. It had doubtless been already furled. This is nearly the interpretation of the ancient Expositors (Chrys. interprets it $\tau \dot{\alpha}$ loria, al. $\tau \dot{\alpha}$ loriov. The Suriae renders it velum, and Bede 'laxantes antennas.' Vulg. Syriac renders it velum, and Bede 'laxantes antennas.' Vulg. has 'submisso vase'); and it is confirmed by a passage of Seneca (Ep. 77): "Quoties ventus increbuit, majorque est quam expedit, antenna submittitur (i. e. χαλᾶται); minus habet virium flatus ex humili."

They lost their freight, as St. Paul had prophesied v. 10; but, as S. 19. την σκευήν] the furniture of the ship, -beds, tables; perhaps also the tackle, rigging, yards, and spars.

- έρριψαν] So A, B, C.-Elz. ερρίψαμεν. 20. ἐπιφαινόντων] appearing, shining upon. Horat. Epod. x. 9, "Nec sidus atra nocte amicum appareat."

- περιηρείτο] every hope was being taken away, as it were, cut away all around: a happy expression describing the taking away of one hope after another; "omnis spes circumcidebatur, nputabatur." See Wetst.

21. àoırlas] Anxiety and fear had taken away all appetite for food, and had produced nausea and disgust for it. Perhaps the 'cabuse' for cooking victuals had been washed overboard; and it would not be easy to light a fire for the purpose in the storm.

- σταθεις δ Παῦλος εν μέσφ] Paul standing up in the midst. The storm, by God's permission, was raised by the Prince of the Power of the Air (Eph. ii. 2) against the ship that was carrying the Gospel to Rome; and, humanly speaking, it would have overwhelmed it (v. 20). But it was made subservient by God's Providence to display the courage of the Apostle, and the power of divine grace, which enabled him to remain firm and intrepid in the tempest, and to stand up in the midst, and inspire others with hope.

The Ship may be compared to the Church, tossed by storms, in her course over the waters of this world. These tempests try the faith, and patience, and courage, of all who, like St. Paul, are strong in grace, and suffer for Christ. They serve to exercise and to prove them, and to manifest the work of the Holy Spirit in their hearts. Perhaps the most effective Sermon that St. Paul ever preached was in this storm. Its power will never cease to be felt by those who read the record of it here. And it may serve to fill the heart of every devout reader with comfort and trust, that every tempest of Persecution which is excited by Satan against the Ship of the Church, will be made eventually conducive to the furtherance of the Gospel, and to the eternal welfare and happiness of God's faithful servants, and to the greater manifestation of His Love, Power, and Glory,

His Love, Fower, and Goog.

— κερδήσαι] to gain this violence and loss. θησαυρίζεις δργήν, το εξουσελείνειν κακά, εύρεῖν δλεθρον. Bentley on Rom. ii. 5. So κερδαίνειν κακὰ, εὐρεῖν δλεθρον. Bentley on Phalaris, pp. 255, 256. Plin. N. H. vii. 40, "lucrifecit injuriam." There is a gentle irony in the expression. Ye exposed yourselves to danger, -against good advice, -for the sake of gaining wealth by your merchandise; and you have gained nothing but loss. Here again the Authorized Version has been censured without reason by some.

23. τοῦ Θεοῦ] Elz. places ἄγγελος before τοῦ Θεοῦ, but A, B, C place ἄγγελος after λατρεύω. And this appears to be the better reading. In speaking to Gentiles who had no notion of the ministry of Angels, it is not probable that St. Paul would be appeared to the state of the propagation and subhave used the word Angel otherwise than subsequently and sub-

27. διαφερομένων ήμῶν] It cannot, therefore, be assumed (as has been done), that the Wind continued alway the same. $-\delta i = \phi \epsilon \rho \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$ means 'to be carried in different directions.' See xiii. 49, and Wetst.

- 'Αδρία] 'Ιόνιον πέλαγος, δ νῦν 'Αδρίας, Hesych. So Strabo, ii. p. 185, and other passages quoted by Wetstein, p. 644, showing that writers contemporary with St. Luke apply the term Adria and Adriatic to that part of the Mediterranean which lies between Greece and Sicily, i. e. the Ionian Sea; and distinguish between Adria and the Adriatic Gulf, or Gulf of Venice. (Ignat. Mart. 5.)

Compare the account given by Josephus (Vit. 3), of his own dangerous voyage to Rome, βαπτισθέντος τοῦ πλοίου κατά μέσον τον 'Aδρίαν, and of his safe arrival at Puteoli, after the ship in which he was, containing 600 souls, had been lost, and eighty of them were taken on board by a vessel from Cyrene, in Africa, going to Italy.

- προσάγειν αὐτοῖς χώραν] that some land was drawing near us. St. Luke speaks here and elsewhere in the language of us. St. luke speaks here and eisewhere in the language of sailors. See xxi. 3, and Wetst. and Kuin. here. Cp. Val. Flace. ii. 8, "jam longa recessit Sepias." Virg. Æn. iii. 72, "Provehimur portu, terræque urbesque recedunt." Tat. ii. 32, γην γάρ έωρωμεν άπο της νηδς κατά μικρον άναχωρούσαν, ώς αυτήν πλέουσαν.

28. βολίσαντες] having sounded, with the βολls, or plumb-line, let down from the foreship.

- bpyvids] fathoms: properly the measure from the end of one arm outstretched (ωρεγνία) to the extremity of the other, together with the breast (Etymol., Hesych.), and reckoned as equal to three πηχείs or cubits. Eustath.

29. ἐκ πρόμνης βίψαντες ἀγκύρας τέσσαρας] They cast four anchors from the stern; a circumstance which has perplexed modern critics and sailors; but has been successfully explained by reference to the structure of Ancient Ships. They were alike at both ends, and had only paddle-rudders (πηδάλια, ε. 40), one on either quarter, which could be triced up, and had hawseholes at the stern.

Besides, the ship in which St. Paul was, was not running, but hove to, when she anchored; and the design was to cut the cables (v. 40), and run the ship on the beach at daylight. (Smith, pp. 200, 201.)

In anchoring by the stern the paddle-rudders were lifted out of the water, and lashed together tightly by their (ευκτηρίαι (υ. 40), and the rudder-ports or rudder-cases served for hawse-holes to the anchors. In the battle of Copenhagen the English ships of war were anchored by the stern; and Lord Nelson stated after the battle, that he had been led to adopt this measure in

30. ἀγκύρας ἐκτείνειν] under pretence that, being in the boat, into which they would take anchors and their cables, they would stretch them forth (¿κτείνειν) or "lay them out" from the fore-ship, so as to steady the ship pitching in the sea.

This pretext, which seems to have deceived the centurion, a landsman, was seen through by St. Paul, who warned the centurion, that unless the sailors remained on board to work the ship, and thrust her in shore, the passengers would be lost. A remarkable proof of the Apostle's superiority, even as regards human wisdom and forethought.

32. εἴασαν αὐτὴν ἐκπεσεῖν] A striking proof of St. Paul's power the minds of the Roman soldiers. The first portion of the over the minds of the Roman soldiers. Voyage had been characterized by opposition to his advice (v. 11);

the latter is distinguished by compliance with it.

Such, in brief, is the History, past and future, of the Gospel of Christ.

33. μεταλαβείν] So A, B, C.—Elz. προσλαβείν.
34. ἀπολείται] So A, B, C, and many Cursives and Versions. - Elz. πεσείται.

35. εὐχαρίστησε] he gave thanks, as if what God had promised (v. 24) had been already fulfilled. Observe his faith in the storm—and see its effects on others (vv. 36, 37).

The words λαβών ἄρτον, εὐχαρίστησε, καὶ κλάσας, compared with Luke xxii. 19, 20, and 1 Cor. xi. 23, are remarkable, and suggest that this act may have been connected with a celebration of the Holy Eucharist.

37. ημεθα-έξ] we were all the souls in the ship, to the number of two hundred and seventy-six. See above, v. 6.

38. τον σίτον] the corn—with which it was laden; for it was a corn-ship; part of its freight had been cast out before (v. 18). On the form of the word see Winer, p. 60.

The wheat was cast into the sea, in order to lighten the ship, that she might be worked more easily and thrust in to the beach.

39. alγιαλόν] a beach,—without rocks.

40. τας αγκύρας περιελόντες] having cut the cables of the four anchors, by which the ship had been held during the night; and thus abandoned them to the sea, in which they were left. sense of περιελόντες is clear from περιηρείτο (v. 20).

St. Luke's design in this narrative appears to be to show, that all human aids or appliances were of no use in the storm, and were discarded as such even by the crew. The reader will observe the climax in the enumeration of their successive acts of abandonment,-

They cast overboard some of the freight (v. 18).
 They cast overboard with their own hands the furniture

 (σπευὴν) of the ship (v. 19).
 (3) They cut off the boat, in which many of them had intended to escape (vv. 30. 32).

(4) They cast the corn out of the ship into the sea (v. 38).

(5) They abandoned their anchors to the sea.

We hear nothing more of the κυβερνήτης and ναύκληρος, who had opposed St. Paul (v. 11). He alone stands forth unmoved in the storm (v. 21). The crew discarded as useless their ordinary helps; and "all hope that they should be saved had been taken away" (v. 20).

But they had St. Paul and his Mission on board; and they all came safe to land. "Noli timere, Cæsaris fortunas vehis," was the saying of Julius Cæsar to the panic-struck mariner in the Adriatic; "Nolite timere, CHRISTI Evangelium vehitis," was that of St. Paul. — άμα ανέντες τας (ευκτηρίας των πηδαλίων] at the same time loosening the bands of the rudders.

The ship was not steered, as modern vessels are, by one rudder moving on hinges at the stern, but by two πηδάλια (from πῆδα, oars; see the Editor's note on Theorrius xxi. 10), whence the English paddle, one on either quarter of the stern. This pair of πηδάλια, so arranged, may be seen represented in ancient coins, pictures, and other monuments, in Smith, pp. 183. 193, 194. 198, 199. Cp. Heliodor. 5, p. 241, των δέ πηδαλίων θάτερον άποβαλόντες. Lucian, Toxari, p. 51, τοῦ σκάφους ήδη πλέοντες έκκρεμαννύμενοι τῶν πηδαλίων, and Navig. 5, tom. iii. p. 252, ανθρωπίσκος λεπτή κάμακι τὰ πηδάλια περιστρέφων. Ælian, H. V. ix. 40, δτι Καρχηδόνιοι δύο κυβερνήτας εἰσῆγον εἰς τὴν ναθν, άτοπον λέγοντες είναι, δύο μέν πηδάλια έχειν κ.τ.λ., and Wetst. here.

When the vessel was anchored by the stern, as this had been (v. 29), these two πηδάλια were lifted out of the water, and were lashed together by the (εῦγλαι, which seem to have bound them together habitually, thence called here al ζευκτηρίαι, the radderbands; and were capable of being tightened or loosened, as need required. Cp. Eurip. Helen, 1536, πηδάλια τε ζεύγλαισι πορακαθίετο, i. e. the rudder-paddles were let down at the sides of the ship (παρακαθίετο) by bands (ζεῦγλαι).

These ζευκτηρίαι, by which the πηδάλια had been lifted up out of the water and braced tightly together, were now loosened (ἀνέθησαν), so that the πηδάλια descended into the water, and were ready for use to steer the ship on to the beach. All these expedients were resorted to, in order to thrust the ship as far on shore as possible.

The ancient Christian Fathers seem to have found special delight in comparing the Church to a ship; and the reader may not be displeased with the insertion in this place of the following eloquent passage from S. Hippolytus, Bishop of Portus, near Rome (de Antichristo, § 9), which illustrates what has been said concerning the two rudders, and also throws some light on other portions of St. Luke's narrative; where, in many respects, the Alexandrine Vessel carrying St. Paul, and tossed by violent Αlexandrine Vessel carrying St. Paul, and tossed by violent storms, presents a lively picture of the Christian Church. S. Hippolytus goes on to say, Ψηφαροί δε επί το κέρας εφ' S. Πηρροιγεία goes on to say, Ψηφαροί δε επί το κερας εφι δψηλοῦ αἰνούμενοι τάξις προφητῶν, μαρτύρων τε, καὶ ἀποστόλων εἰς βασιλείαν Χριστοῦ ἀναπαυομένων. Here, instead of ψηφαρο αἰνούμενοι, we may read ψήφαρα αἰωρούμενα. Ψήφαρα are the Latin suppara, Senec. Ερ. 77, in Medeâ, 325. Lucan, v. 429, "Summa suppara velorum;" or, as Tertullian calls them (Apol. 16, ad Nation. 12), siphara (ψήφαρα), i. e. top-sails (cp. Smith, pp. 152. 195). And S. Hippolytus means that the topsails, which are raised aloft to the summit of the mast, and are set there, remind him of the order of Prophets, and Martyrs, and Apostles glorified, and resting in bliss, in the kingdom of Christ.

A similar comparison of the Church to a Ship may be seen in a treatise in Montfaucon's S. Chrysostom, vi. tom. vi. p. cv: "Quamvis infestatione Inimici Ecclesia ab sæculi tempestatibus laboret, quibusvis tentationibus pulsetur, naufragium facere non potest, quia Filium Dei habet Gubernatorem : navigat enim fidei gubernaculo, felici cursu per hujus sæculi mare, habens Deum Gubernatorem, Angelos remiges, portans choros omnium sanctorum, erectà in medio ipsa salutari arbore crucis, in qua evangelicæ fidei vela suspendens, flante Spiritu Sancto, vehitur ad portum Paradisi, et securitatem quietis æternæ."

The symbol of a Ship, emblematic of the Church, is often seen represented on the Christian monuments in the Catacombs of Rome; see Bp. Kip on the Catacombs, p. 114, ed. 1859.

— τὸν ἀρτέμωνα] So A, B, C, and Caten., p. 405, and so Winer.—Elz. has ἀρτέμονα: it was the 'small sail' (Syriac), the foresail fixed at the prow on a bowsprit. See Juvenal, xii. 67, describing a ship in a storm:

> Vestibus extensis, et quod superaverat unum Velo prora suo,' which the old Scholiast explains, "Artemone solo velificaverunt." Cp. Isidor. Orig. xix. 3, as emended by Mr. Smith, p. 192, Dolon est minimum velum, et ad proram defixum Artemo dirigendæ potiùs navis causâ commendatum (commendatur?) quam celeritate," or, as Bede says here, "Artemon est modicum velum, dirigendæ," &c., as in Isidore. Hence the Roman Lawyers said (Labeo, Digest. 50, tit. 16, leg. 242), "Malum navis esse partem, Artemonem autem non esse," and cp. Boeckh (Urkunden des Attischen Seewesens, p. 140), who calls it the smallest sail.

They let the vessel drive before the breeze, by a single small sail. All these incidents are mentioned with so much minuteness by St. Luke, in order to show that "vain was the help of man, and that their preservation (and they were all preserved) was due, not to any human means, but to God's goodness alone, especially towards His faithful servant and prisoner, St. Paul (see v. 24).

Doubtless also the Holy Spirit in dictating this beautiful narrative, designed to suggest the reflection, that whenever and wheresoever it is God's will that the Gospel shall be preached, no storms raised by the Evil One against Christ's Church can obstruct her course; and that though all human aids fail her, though the material vessel is split in fragments, and scattered over the waves,-though the earth itself is wrecked and dissolved,-He can bring her and hers by a single Artemon to shore.

41. περιπεσόντες] This word does not indicate human contrivance, but a $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\pi\acute{e}\tau\epsilon\iota\alpha$ of Divine Providence. They had selected a creek having a beach, into which they desired, if possible, to thrust in the ship (v. 39). But this would not have been effected unless they had fallen into a $\tau \delta v d \lambda \alpha \sigma \sigma s$. This may be explained from reference to the Chart of St. Paul's Bay, Malta (Smith, 124. Howson, 422), where is the small island Salmonetta, which produces a current that would carry a ship into a small cove in the $\tau \delta \pi \sigma s$ $\delta i\theta d\lambda a \sigma \sigma \sigma s$, which, by its approximation to the shore, the island makes between itself and the beach ¹.

"The sea rushing into the Bay from the N.E. strikes against the outer point of this small island, which causes it to divide and meet again at the inner point, in a small Cove, where any Ship-Master would run his ship, if in distress."

- την ναῦν] they thrust-in the ναῦν. Observe the word ναῦν, not πλοΐον, which had hitherto been the word used throughout the narrative; πλοΐον occurs thirteen times in this chapter, and the word vaûs had never been used as yet.

Indeed, the present is the only place in the New Testament where the word vans is found;

where the word vavs is found;

There is a great force in it here. The vessel had formerly been a noble $\pi\lambda\rho\hat{a}\rho$ for sailing ($\epsilon\hat{i}s$ $\tau\delta$ $\pi\lambda\hat{\epsilon}\hat{\omega}$); but now that it has lost its freight, its tackle, its boat, its provisions, its anchors, its all—it is reduced to a vavs, a hulk, not fit to sail, Their, but only veîv, to swim.

 ή πρύμνα ἐλύετο] the stern was going to pieces, while the foreship stuck fast. The word ἐλύετο, was being dissolved, is a happy one; the strong solid ship was becoming as loose as the liquid element in which it had sailed. So Virg. Æn. x. 303, "puppis tua, Tarchon, solvitur;" and Cicero, Attic. xv. 11, "dissolutum navigium." (Wetst.)

St. Paul had been already in three shipwrecks before this (2 Cor. xi. 25). How little, after all, do we know of what the great Apostle suffered for Christ! But it is all registered in His Book; which will be opened at the Last Day.

44. πάντας διασωθήναι] all escaped in safety to land. Perhaps

The following is from the Sailing Directory, 1834:—St. Paul's Bay.—This is divided from Melheha Bay by the Peninsula of Salmona, on the hilly part of which stands a square building, commonly called the Salmona Palace; and at the extremity of this peninsula is a low and irregularly-formed island, named Salmona Island, already noticed; this constitutes the northern part of St. Paul's Bay. There are a few rocks at its eastern point extradions.

mona Island, already noticed; this constitutes the northern part of St. Paul's Bay. There are a few rocks at its eastern point, extending outward nearly half a cable's length; and at the distance of a cable's length you will have clear ground, with from ten to fourteen fathoms. The east end of Salmona Island, and the Point of Kauro, are distant from each other above one mile, and bear N.W. by W. and S.E. by E. (N.W. ½ N. and S.E. ½ S.), the bay running in W.S.W. (W. ½ S.). The depth of water between the island and the point is eighteen fathoms, from whence it lessens to fourteen, ten, eight, and at the further end three fathoms, where there are a sandy beach and a rivulet. About a quarter of a mile to the southward of Salmona

Island is a patch of foul ground, over which the least depths are six and a half and seven fathoms. The harbour is open to easterly and north-easterly winds; but it is a safe place for small vessels, with good holding-ground; and so long as your cables will hold, your anchors will never drag. The best anchorage is abreast of the small cove on your starboard side going in, where you will find from six to ten fathoms, mud and clay. Small vessels may haul into the cove, and lash themselves together in a tier, having an anchor out to the SS. Eastward, and no winds can injure them.

Eastward, and no winds can injure them.

Within Kauro Point you will see a small tower and battery, called the University; another battery, Elbena, stands three-quarters of a mile further in, and beyond that is St. Paul's tower. There are also three other batteries defending the Points of the Bay, two of which are situated near the beach at the bottom of the Bay. From Kauro Point the land runs S.E. by E. (S.E. ½ S.) for five miles, towards the Lighthouse of Valetta.

some were saved spiritually by the evidence they had seen of St. Paul's prophetic power (see vv. 10. 22. 26), and by being led thereby, and by his miracles (xxviii. 9, 10), to listen to the Gospel; and thus the Storm in Adria brought them to the heavenly haven of eternal Peace.

CH. XXVIII. 1. ἐπέγνωμεν] we discerned. So A, B, C.-Είz. ἐπέγνωσαν.

- Mελίτη] Malta. The theories which suppose this to be any other than Malta, and particularly to be Melida in the Adriatic Gulf, seem to proceed from a misunderstanding of the word 'Αδρία in xxvii. 27, and from other similar misconceptions. See Biscoe, p. 67. Smith, Dissertation ii. p. 130. Howson, p. 426. It is by no means probable that an Alexandrine ship on its way toward Rome (v. 11), would be found wintering at an island in the Gulf of Venice; but it would be very likely to winter at Malta.

2. of βάρβαροι] the barbarians. Rom. i. 14. 1 Cor. xiv. 11. People who spoke a strange language, i. e. neither Greek nor Latin. Ovid, Trist. v. 10. 37, "Barbarus hic ego sum, quia non Hatin. Oria, Irist. v. 10. 37, Barbar as in ego sam, quasimielligor ulli." The dialect here spoken was probably African or Phoenician. (Rosenm., Kuin., Biscoe. Prof. Blunt on Duties of Parish Priest, p. 48.) The Greeks called all others, even the Romans, βαρβάρους. "Barbari antiquitùs omnes dicebantur exceptis Græcis." (Festus.)

As the Jews called all Gentiles Greeks, so the Romans and Greeks called all others barbarous.

By calling the Maltese βάρβαροι, St. Luke shows that he is writing as a Hellenist to Hellenists.

But here, and v. 10, St. Luke draws silently a contrast between the kindness of these so-called barbarians, and the conduct of those who despised the rest of the world as barbarous, and yet had treated St. Paul in a barbarous manner—the Jews and Romans at Cæsarea. We hear of no miracle wrought before Felix by St. Paul, in his two years' imprisonment at Casarea, or before Festus and Agrippa; but he worked many miracles among these civilized barbarians, v. 9.

- οὐ τὴν τυχοῦσαν] extraordinary. See above, xix. 11.

- aψαντες πυράν] having kindled a fire; into which the viper was afterwards cast; see on v. 4.

3. ἀπό] So A, B, C, G, H, and Caten. p. 407.—Elz. ἐκ. The sense is, the Viper, which was probably then in a torpid state, from the cold and damp (v. 2), had been taken up by St. Paul in the sticks, which were laid by him on the fire, and was driven forth from them (ἀπὸ τῆς θέρμης, by the force of the heat), and recovered its vitality and passed through them and darted forth from them, and seized on his hand.

4. οἱ βάρβαροι-ἔλεγον πρὸς ἀλλήλους] the barbarians were speaking to one another, in their own tongue, neither Greek nor Latin (v. 2). This mention of what the barbarians said (viz. that St. Paul was a murderer, &c.), and which evidently they imagined would not be understood, is another silent evidence of power, in the Apostles and Evangelists, to understand and speak languages which they had not learnt, and were not supposed to know; just as they understood what was said in the Lycaonian dialect, and spoke it to the people at Lystra. See above, Acts xiv. 11, and ή δίκη] whom Justice suffered not to live: so Soph. Antig. 544, οὐκ ἐάσει τοῦτό γ' ἡ Δίκη. Ἡ Δίκη is the Latin "Justitia, an abstraction personified, as Virg. Georg. iii. 474, "extrema per illos Justitia excedens terris vestigia fecit.

Rather it was the malice of the Evil One, who had hoped that St. Paul would perish in the storm, which he, as Prince of the power of the air (Eph. ii. 2), had been permitted by God to raise (cp. Job i. 12. 19), that he might defeat his mission to Rome. "Vipera fixit, Dæmonis arma gerens," says Arator (ii. 1157), and "Prædo venit,—sed præda jacet." The same God who delivered Paul from the sea, saved him from the serpent (see Christ's prophecy, Mark xvi. 18), and enabled him to cast it into the fire-a figurative and prophetic emblem of what awaits him who is the Old Serpent, the δφις ἀρχαῖος (Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2), the Enemy of the Church, which he endeavours to destroy by the storms of Persecution (Rev. xii. 14, 15), and by the venom of Heresy; and whose doom it will be to be cast εls λίμνην πυρδς. into the lake of fire, Rev. xx. 10.

οὐκ εἴασεν] suffered not-to live. Observe the aorist, they think of him as already dead, and speak of him as such.

5. ἀποτιναξάμενος] having shaken off from himself. So A, G. H .- Elz. has amorivagas.

6. $\theta \epsilon \delta \nu$] a god: placed thus emphatically at the end of the sentence by A and B.—Elz. has $\theta \epsilon \delta \nu$ and $\epsilon \delta \nu$ at $\delta \nu$ sentence by A and B.—Elz. has θεὸν αὐνὰν εἶναι.

7. τῷ πρώτῷ] 'the primus,' his official title, the πρῶτος Μελιταίων, or Primus Melitensium. See the Inscription in Biscoe, p. 67. Cp. Blunt, p. 48. Smith, 148. Houson, 425.
8. δυσεντερίῷ] So A, B, G, H. Cp. Lobeck, Phryn. p. 518.
— ἰάσατο] he healed. A reward for hospitality.
10. τιμαῖς] with presents, gifts, and offerings (Chrys.). See

Tim. v. 17

11. Διοσκούροιs] The two sons of Jove, Castor and Pollux, the supposed patrons of sailors in the heathen world (Horst. Carm. i. 3. 2; iv. 8. 31. Catull. iv. 27. Ovid, Fast. v. 720. Theocrit.

xxii. 1), which were at the prow's head, and were the insigne, by which the ship was known. On the insignia of ships, as distinct from their tutela, see Wetst., p. 652. Ruhnken's Dissertation, ed. 1771. Blomfield, Æschyl. S. c. Theb. 196.

It is the custom, says the Bishop of Alexandria (S. Cyril, in Caten. here), for Alexandrine vessels to have such figures as

St. Paul did not scruple to sail in a vessel with heathen deities for its insigne; and the Holy Spirit has vouchsafed to mention their name, Dioscuri, sons of Zeus, or Jupiter.

For what reasons?

(1) Perhaps to remove such scruples as troubled the mind of Tertullian (see his "De corona militis" and "De Idololatria") in ancient times, and of Quakers and some others in modern, and to teach the nature of Christian Liberty (viz.), that Christians may freely and without sin communicate with idolaters in the common concerns of life, such as navigation, commerce, and language, &c. (1 Cor. v. 9, 10), although they must at the same time take care not to communicate with them in any act of idolatry (1 Cor. x. 21. 2 Cor. vi. 14-16. Eph. v. 11).

(2) To correct the spirit of self-righteousness which has made distinctions and differences in the Church, on the plea of conscientious objections to the use of certain words and names derived from heathen uses, such as the days of the week.

(3) To suggest the reflection, that the Gospel of Christ would appropriate and consecrate all things to itself;

The Gospel is presented to us in this divine history as sailing towards Rome in an Egyptian ship, with a heathen sign. S. Cyril quotes happily the LXX of Isa. xi. 14, speaking of Christian Missions, πετασθήσονται έν πλοίοις άλλοφύλων, they will fly as with wings in the ships of strangers and unbelievers

It is worthy of remark, that the ancient enemy of the Church of God, Egypt, was made to furnish two of the Ships (Acts xxvii. 6; xxviii. 11) which conveyed the Apostle of the Gentiles, in his way to preach the Gospel to the great Metropolis of the Heathen world. The Gospel of the Son of God was carried in a ship with a Heathen sign, called from the sons of Jove. It was about to subdue heathen Rome, and to make the Mistress of the world pass under the mild yoke of the Cross. It was about to plant the Cross of Christ in the centre of the blood-stained Colosseum, to erect the statues of Peter and Paul on the summits of its Egyptian obelisks, and to convert the Pantheon of Agrippa into a Christian Church.

Here is a striking prophecy and pledge of the future subjection of all earthly powers and opposing forces beneath the feet of Christ; and of the future manifestation of His Omnipotence in making them all subsidiary and subservient to the triumph of His Gospel.

13. περιελθόντες] not by a straight course, but tacking; the wind not being favourable, for it is added, that after one day, the south wind (which was favourable) sprung up abaft (ἐπεγένετο), and so on the second day they arrived at Putcoli—a distance of 182 miles from Rhegium. On the rate of sailing of ancient ships, see Smith, p. 209, who understands δευτεραίοι as equivalent to τη εξης ήμέρα.

Ποτιόλους] Puteoli, 150 miles from Rome, now Pozzuoli, on the Bay of Naples, an εμπόριον μέγιστον, Strabo, v. p. 376; especially for Alexandrine Corn-ships. (Seneca, Epist. 77.) Sometimes called a 'Second Delos' on account of its commerce.

Its earliest name was Dicæarchia.

There is an interesting fact, recorded in connexion with Puteoli, in the Martyrdom of S. Ignatius, the disciple of St. John (p. 568). When he was going to his martyrdom at Rome, he was brought to Puteoli, and he wished to land there, in order that he might follow the steps of St. Paul (κατ' ίχνος βαδίζειν θέλων τοῦ ἀποστόλου Παύλου); an incident confirming the genuineness and authenticity of the Acts, and perhaps, also, showing its influence in primitive times.

ἡμέρας ἐπτά] seven days. In order, probably, to spend Lord's-Day with them. See above, on xxi. 27.

— οδτως είς τὴν Ῥώμην ἤ.] and thus to Rome we came. An interesting and picturesque description of the route from Puteoli to Rome, may be seen in Howson, ii. 437-447. See also Sir W. Gell's Work on Rome and its Vicinity, 2 vols., Lond. 1834, and Nibby's Contorni di Roma, 2 vols., Roma, 1819.
15. οἱ ἀδελφοὶ—ἐξῆλθον] the brethren came out to meet us-especially to meet Paul, from whom they had received an Epistle

(that to the Romans) more than three years before.

— 'Αππίου φόρου και Τριῶν ταβερνῶν] "Appii Forum," a station marked in the Roman Itineraries as about thirty-three miles from Rome; the "Tres Tabernæ" twenty-three miles from Rome. See Sir W. Gell, art. "Via Appia," i. p. 153.

The former, Appii Forum, reminds the reader that they were on the "Appian Way." Another suggestion, therefore, is here offered of the same truth as that stated above (v. 11).

These were two itinerary stations on the great Via Appia, the "Regina Viarum," the Queen of Roads (Cic. ad Att. ii. 10. Hor. Serm. i. 5. 3), on which Rome sent her armies through the Southern and Eastern regions of the world;

The conquests of the third monarchy (that of Alexander the Great, see Dan. ii. 39; vii. 6; viii. 8. 21) had provided a common language for the Gospel-Greek;

Alexandria, the great commercial capital of Egypt, and named from the great Conqueror himself, had provided two Ships to convey the Apostle of the Gentiles toward Rome, the Capital of the world;

The fourth great monarchy, the Roman, had made great military Roads in Europe and in part of Asia for her own conquests, as she thought; but in God's good purposes they became Highways for the Gospel of Christ. She had stratified He evangelized it.

It is interesting to trace the progress of the Apostle on those great Roads of the Roman Empire, e. g. on the Via Egnatia, by which he had been brought into Greece, and now on the Via Appia, by which he enters Rome.

The journeys of the Apostles and Apostolic Missionaries could not have been effected, had it not been for the engineering energy of heathen Rome, whom God employed as a κελευθοποιδς for Christ. The Military Roads of her Legions were paths for the Prince of Peace.

The World may see similar results, in future conquests of the Gospel under God's Allwise and Almighty Providence, by means of Railroads and of Steam. India is opening her arms. The great lines of her Railways are doing the Missionary work of the Baptist, the forerunner and herald of Christ (Isa. xl. 4). And as the Ship bearing a heathen sign ("Castor and Pollux") carried the Apostle of Christ to Italy, and the Basilicas and Temples at Rome have become Christian Churches, so the time may come when some of the magnificent Temples of India may be changed into Christian Cathedrals. Cp. Introduction, above, pp. 8-10.

16. στρατοπεδάρχη] to the captain of the prætorian guard, the body-guard of the Emperor: probably Burrhue, if St. Paul arrived at Rome (as is most probable) in the spring of A.D. 61. In the spring of A.D. 62, Burrhus died. Tacit. Ann. xiv. 51, 52. In the spring of A.D. 62, Burrhus died. Sueton. Ner. 35. Wieseler (p. 86), following Bp. Dio. 62, 13. Pearson (p. 389), infers that the words δ στρατοπεδάρχης intimate that there was only one Commander of the Prætorian Guard, or Imperial Household Troops, and that therefore St. Paul must have arrived before the Death of Burrhus, i. e. before the spring of A.D. 62, after which there were two στρατοπεδάρχαι (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 51). The conclusion is probably true; but δ στρατοπεδάρχηs might (as Meyer observes, pp. 18. 465) be used to indicate the Officer then on duty at the Palace.

It was a providential circumstance that prisoners, who were sent on appeals to Rome, were consigned to the custody of the Chief of the Imperial Guard. See Joseph. Aut. xviii. 6. 6. Plin. 1 ch. 21. 33. & 24. 12—14. & 25. 8.

Ep. x. 65. Thus St. Paul's bonds were made manifest in Christ in the whole Prætorium, or Palace of Nero (Phil. i. 13), and the Gospel was brought home to the hearts of those of Cæsar's household (Phil. iv. 22).

It is probable, that the πραιτώριον, of which the στρατοπέδ-άρχης had the command, was the Palace of the Emperor himself on the Palatine Hill, on the south of the Roman Forum, in the heart of Rome. See note below on Phil. i. 13.

St. Luke's account of the treatment which St. Paul received at Rome, is illustrated by the narrative of Josephus (Antiq. xviii. 6. 7), concerning the detention of Agrippa I. in the same city, under Tiberius, εδρίσκετο αὐτῷ παρὰ τοῦ Μάκρωνος (the successor of Sejanus) στρατιωτών τε μετρίων ἀνδρών, οι παραφυλάξειαν αὐτὸν ἐν φροντίσιν, και ἐκατοντάρχου ἐφεστησομένου τε ἐκείνοις καὶ συνδέτου ἐσομένου, λουτρά τε καθ' ἡμέραν συγχαρεῖσθαι, καὶ ἀπελευθέρων καὶ φίλων εἰσόδους, την τε ἄλλην βαστώνην η τῷ σώματι γένοιτ' ἄν' εἰσηεσάν τε πρὸς αὐτὸν φίλος τε Σίλας — στρατιώτη] the soldier, to whom he was chained.

19. ηναγκάσθην] I was constrained to appeal to Cæsar,—an answer to the objections of the Jews, that, in a question of Religion, he had appealed from the Spiritual Court, that of the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem, to a temporal and heathen Power, and had so been guilty of profane and sacrilegious outrage against their national Faith, and against Jehovah Himself. St. Paul says that he did not act thus voluntarily, but was compelled to take this step by the Jews themselves.

We may observe here again the wonderful operation of Divine Providence in overruling the machinations of the enemies of the Gospel into means for its furtherance;

The Jews arrested and would have killed Paul. By their hiquitous and treacherous manœuvres against him, they showed even to the Chief Captain that he could have no hope of justice from them. He was therefore sent by night to Cæsarea (xxiii. 23). Festus proposed that after two years' imprisonment he should go up again to be judged at Jerusalem (xxv. 9). But the Jews had shown their inveterate malice by another conspiracy to slay him by the way (xxv. 3). In a word, St. Paul was compelled by the Jews themselves to appeal for justice from the Spiritual Court at Jerusalem to the tribunal of Nero at Rome.

A striking proof of the corrupt state of the spiritualty. No wonder that its Candlestick was removed. The Candlestick of the Temple is now seen engraved among the spoils of Jerusalem on the triumphal Arch of Titus, which stands near the site of the Imperial Palace at Rome, where St. Paul was confined.

That conduct of the Jews was foreseen by God, and was made instrumental by Him for the propagation of Christianity, and for the transfer of its Mission from the centre of Judaism to the Metropolis of the Heathen World. Thus the malice of the Jews recoiled against themselves, and was used as an instrument for the glory of Christ.

21. ἡμεῖs οὕτε γράμματα] we neither received letters concerning thee from Jerusalem. This statement of non-communication between the Jews of Jerusalem and Rome is remarkable, and has been used by some in modern times as an argument against the veracity of this History. But it must be remembered that St. Paul did not appeal to Casar till near the end of his confinement at Cæsarea. Festus, the successor of Felix, had wished to decide the Cause at Jerusalem (xxv. 9); and it was doubtless a surprise both to him and to the Jews to hear St. Paul say, "I appeal unto Cæsar" (xxv. 11).

Before St. Paul had made this appeal, the Jews of Jerusalew. had no reason for writing to those at Rome concerning him; for they had no ground for supposing that he would go there. after appeal had been made, it does not seem that they had any opportunities of sending communications to Rome, on account of the expiration of the season for navigation to Italy. Nor indeed would they have been very anxious to write concerning him after the declaration of the Jewish king Agrippa acknowledging his innocence, and that he might have been set at liberty if he had not appealed to Cæsar (xxvi. 32).

22. πανταχοῦ ἀντιλέγεται] is every where spoken against. A fulfilment of Simeon's words, Luke ii. 34, σημεΐον ἀντιλεγόμενον. The Jews are specially described as a λαός ἀντιλέγων. See Rom. x. 21. Isa. lxv. 2, in LXX. Acts xiii. 45; xxviii. 19.

25. δημα έν] one word, after so many disputations; one, and that from their own Scriptures; showing that their incredulity was foreseen and foretold by God, and that the rejection of the Gospel by the Jews is therefore no argument against it, but rather an evidence of its truth. Cp. John xii. 41.

— τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν] our fathers. He claims their fathers as his own.

28. γνωστόν οδυ έστω ύμιν, δτι τοις έθνεσιν άπεστάλη τό σωτήριον του Θεού] Be it therefore known to you, that to the Gentiles was sent the salvation of God. St. Paul never disguised from the Jews his design of going to the Gentiles. As Bengel observes,—On the rejection of the Gospel by the Jews, he declared that intention to them at Antioch, xiii. 46; at Corinth, xviii. 6; and now, for the third time, he declares it at Rome. Thus he gave them a triple warning; in Asia, in Greece, in Italy; see Tit. iii. 10.

29. καl-συζήτησιν] Not in A, B, E, and some Cursives and Versions.

30. διετίαν δλην] two whole years in St. Paul's life without any incident mentioned by St. Luke;

This silence is an impressive proof that the arrival of the great Apostle at Rome, the great capital of the world, is the culminating point of the history. "Paulus Rome, apex Evangelii." Bengel.

As Chrys. observes, St. Paul had suffered shipwreck, but by that shipwreck he was made more illustrious. And now, like some noble Conqueror who has gained a great naval victory, he enters the royal City of Rome, the Capital of the world.

The rest may be inferred from what had been already said and done by the Divine Head of the Church, in guiding and preserving him till he set foot in safety in that City; and from the words of comfort and joy with which the book concludes.

It is to be regretted, that through want of attention to such considerations as these, this divine Book has been disparaged by some as a fragmentary narrative. Like all other works of the Holy Ghost, it is a well-ordered and harmonious whole. It designs what was best to be done for a history of the Apostolic Church, and it performs fully what it designs. On this topic, see above, Introduction prefixed to this Book, pp. 6. 19, 20.

On the remainder of the Apostle's History, see Euseb. H. E. ii. 22-25; and below, the Introduction to St. Paul's Epistles to Timothy in Part III. pp. 416-424.

- ἐν ἰδίφ μισθώματι] in his own hired lodging. The μίσθωμα was the meritorium or conductum of the Romans. A lodginghouse at Rome was divided into canacula, each of which was let out for hire. See Wetst. p. 656.

31. ἀκωλύτωs] without hindrance. The Acts of the Apostles is a record of trouble and suffering, like all other Books of the New Testament, and is also like them in this, that it ends happily.

See particularly the end of St. Luke's Gospel (xxiv. 50-53).

There is something musical in the cadence of the word ἀκωλύτως, reserved for the end of this Book. The word commences with a short syllable, followed by three long ones, a first Epitrite, the termination of a Scazon, happily adapted to express repose after labour; as may be seen in the beautiful lines of Catullus, describing his return home, "Peninsularum," &c. Carm. xxix., especially vv. 6—10. This cadence is expressive of steadiness. firmness, and stability; of motion succeeded by rest; of action consummated and settled in repose. Compare the word ἐκοιμήθη, a word of like quantity, closing the history of St. Stephen's martyrdom (Acts vii. 60)

An emblem of the History of the Church of Christ, and of the life of every true believer in Him.

CODEX SINAITICUS.

COLLATED WITH THE TEXT OF STEPHENS, 1550, AS REPRINTED BY THE REV. F. H. SCRIVENER, 1862.

N.B. + placed before a reading denotes that it is an addition to Stephens' text.

- placed before a reading denotes that a portion of Stephens' text is wanting in Cod. Sin.

√ is placed after all readings which are only itacisms, instances of ν εφελκυστικον and σ appended, or mere errors of the scribe.

Doubtful readings in which Stephens' text and Cod. Sin, agree are placed within these brackets.

p.m. indicates readings of the original scribe:

s.m. those of later correctors: of which only A, C, E? (iii. 13) occur in the Acts.
